A Few Words About Prescriptions.

YOUR doctor fights disease with medicine. If the medicine is not right, he cannot conquer disease. If the druggist does his duty the medicine will be right, and your doctor will stand a fair chance of winning the victory. In no other branch of the drug business should the details receive more care and attention than in the prescription department. Every detail there is important. Realizing this fact, thoroughness is a feature of the prescription case and every prescription dispensed at this store has the personal attention of the proprietor and a careful checking system makes mistakes impossible. Nothing but the purest drugs and best pharmaceuticals are used namely those manufactured by the well known chemical house of Park Davis & Co. Bring your prescriptions here and obtain full satisfaction.

—Prof. DeCommerce, who will be remembered as at one time having conducted dancing classes in Northern Michigan had a narrow escape from freezing to death recently while driving from Old Mission to Traverse City.

—Electricity is to be the success r of oil and acetylene in passenger coach lighting on the Pere Marquette railway according to the recent official announcement from headquarters, and already the car shop employes are making the change.

—Mrs. George Parsons, of Norwood township, died at the home of her father, Wm. Russell, in this village, Sunday, aged 21 years. The funeral occurred Tuesday afternoon from the M. E. church. Besides a husband, deceased leaves a young child.

—Let's see! What about that democratic "mass convention" that was called to meet in lawyer Jersey's law office at Boyne City last Thursday to nominate a successor to Judge Mayne. We have not heard a word about it Will chairman Lewis please enlighten us through the columns of his official organ, the Boyne Citizen and East Jordan Enterprise?

—The Salvation Army is not heard upon our streets, but we are told that they are doing good work at their hall, and in a quiet way about town in the reclamation of the wayward. If what we hear of them is true, and we believe it is, they deserve the thanks of the community. The Salvation Army has its own distinct way of doing things, but it is a way that saves souls and makes many a home happier. It deserves the encouragement and support of all good people whether they are religious or not. One drunkard reclaimed is worth a year's work.

—We are pleased to announce that Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, State President of the W. C. T. U. and Mrs. P. J. Howard, Dist. President, will give a temperance talk at the home of Mrs O. S. Washburn, on Thursday, March 2nd, at 2:30 p. m. A general invitation is extended to all.

—Dr. Hyslop has just commenced a series of Sunday morning services on the general Theme, "Moral Perspectives." Last Sunday the subject was "The Divine Being in Perspective." Next Sunday morning the subject will be "The Christ in True Perspective." It was remarked by several who heard the sermon last Sunday morning "It is to be hoped that all our people will try to hear these sermons."

—A new way has been found to dispose of counterfeit bills. A stranger entered a hotel at Reading and represented himself as being out of money. The landlord provided him with a meal and as he was arising he pulled out his handkerchief when twenty dollar bill dropped to the floor. The waiter picked it up and gave it to the proprietor, who became real angry and gave the man $19.25 and kept bill. It was afterwards discovered that it was worthless.

—Hiram Thompson died suddenly at his home in Boyne City Monday morning. Mr. Thompson was one of the earliest of the pioneers of the Pine Lake region. He was a brother of the late J. M. Thompson, of this place, and the eldest son of the Medad Thompson, who located here before Mormon times. Deceased was raised to what is now known as Charlevoix. For the past twenty years or more he has lived at Boyne City. He was a veteran of the civil war. At the time of his death he was Drain Commissioner of Charlevoix county.

—The SENTINEL's article on S. S. S. matters last week seems to have stirred up a turmoil in the Society, in which two of the most prominent skippers' figure. Capt. Pete Campbell takes exceptions to Capt. Billy Finn's strictures on him and promises to get even. He says he can prove that Capt. Billy's election to the presidency was secured through intimidation and improper influence. Capt. Pete says. "Just because the Missouri is a larger boat than the Beaver, Capt. Finnegan considers himself the best man but wait until navigation opens and I catch him alongside of my fish car slip."

—The Kaffir Boys entertainment at the high school room Monday evening brought together the largest crowd of the course. It will be remembered that this combination was billed in a high school course a year ago, but did not reach here owing to a railroad wreck. It looked for a time that we were again to be disappointed, for upon reaching Traverse City they found that owing to the snow blockade the afternoon train had been taken off. But the manager secured a special train and reached here just in time for the entertainment. The Kaffir Boys entertainment is interesting because unique, but this is not all. It is at once unique and educational. The manager, Mr. Raitner, is an African explorer, and his assistant was born there. As one listens to their short "'tween-act" talks and looks into the faces of the young Africans, he learns more of the dark continent than he ever did from books. And their singing? How a quintet of savages can be taught to sing with such exquisite harmony, expression and enunciation, is a marvel. The entertainment converted us to the cause of African missions. The next and closing entertainment of the course will be Cavecy, March 23d.

—The Board of Commerce wish to impress upon the public mind the fact that there not enough of our people, outside the circle of business men who are taking shares and identifying themselves with the work. This is a work in which the business men alone are interested, every householder in Charlevoix should have an interest in it, and take, at least, one share. If your name is not on the list, get it there, and help along a work that embraces in its scope the welfare of every citizen.

—Among the commercial travelers who make Charlevoix regularly, E. H. Salisbury may be rated as a pioneer His face and form and cherry greeting are so familiar that he has come to be regarded as to the "manner born." He made Charlevoix in his travels in the early days, and here's hoping that he may come yet many years. Most men of his profession are familiarly known only to their customers but everybody knows Salisbury. He represents the Simon's Hardware Co., of St. Louis, the largest house of its kind in the world.

—C. Knickerbocker of Petoskey packed up and started for California. He dropped down at Redlands, concerning which he says "At first I thought I had struck Paradise and I didn't think I could ever be tempted to live in this frozen north again, but I soon learned that 'all is not gold that glitters,' and that it takes more than oranges and sunshine to pay board and support a family on." Mr Knickerbocker is back in Petoskey and says: "I have learned my lesson by experience and I wish to warn others now that there is no use of going to California with empty packets and expect to make a fortune. Office'S may go if they wish, though I advise them not, but I am content to hang paper and paint awhile longer in Petoskey."

—Miss Belle McNeill entertained the C. O. D. Club at her home on the north side last Thursday evening. The Literary and Musical program, which was arranged for by Miss Edna Brooks, was a splendid success, every number being rendered in a most creditable manner. After the program Miss McNeill served dainty refreshments, and then the girls arranged for a card party, which will include their gentlemen friends, and for which rather unique invitations have been issued, to be given in the parlors of the Beach Hotel Thursday evening of this week. The invitations were sent C. O. D. and the boys very gracefully permitted themselves to be held up for "postage due," but the young ladies will make them "forget it" by giving them a royal good time on the evening above mentioned.

—The Michigan Game and Fish Protective Association held a meeting at Lansing recently and decided to recommended the following changes to the game laws. Closing for five years the season on squirrel hunting, limiting the number of deer that may be killed in a season to two, to increase the bounty on wolves and foxes and to offer a small bounty for owls and hawks. No person to be allowed to kill more than six partridges or ten quails in one day, nor to have in possession more than twenty partridges or quail at one time. Birds in cold storage 15 days after the close of the season liable to confiscation. Provide a closed season on rabbits, but all property owners to kill them on their own premises whenever they are injuring property. Also to fix a gun license of $1.00 per year, with the proviso that anyone owning 40 acres of land or more may obtain a license free from the County Clerk.

—This is the way a county paper gets back at the city papers." Doesn't it make you weary to read the rot of those rattle-brained idiots of the city press who are repeatedly ridiculing the country papers on their heads? These two-by-four bunch counter fiends think it awful funny when some country newspapers say 'Hiram Slocum has sold his Holstein cow to Eli Childress' But of course, it is just the proper caper when they say 'Mrs. Franklin Oliver Lowden has just returned from the Epsom Lorimer kennel.' Oh, that's great. That bull pup would bring about 50 cents in the dog pound, while Slocum's cow would sell for $50 in the dark. Because Gussie Davis was over at Guard's Point Sunday to see his best girl they throw a shoe, but if William Henry Harrison Pook, the society leader, was in Milwaukee last Saturday to see Miss Gertie Pabst they will slobber over half a column and have three pictures of Gertie and William Henry on the front page.

—On Friday evening of next week there will be given in the Congregational Church one of the most interesting childrens' entertainment ever given in Charlevoix, consisting of two parts. The first includes Haydn "Toy Symphony" and several other numbers. The second consists of an operetta entitled "The Fairies of the Seasons" Everybody should hear this entertainment. Admission 25 cents. Children under 12 half price.

—We clip the following item from the Petoskey News for the benefit of those who are eternally finding fault with Northern Michigan climate: "A recent letter to Guy H. Hankey from his father, C. P. Hankey, who with his wife and daughter left last week for Florida, states that their party encountered a terrific ice storm from Chattanooga to Atlanta, Ga. For a stretch of sixty miles, Mr. Hankey states, that fruit trees, telegraph poles 12 inches in thickness, and standing timber were broken to the ground by the severity of the storm and heavy weight of the ice. The fruit crops in that section were entirely destroyed also, the temperature dropping to the lowest point that it has in that section for years."

BILL PASSED.

Beaver Island Cable Now an Absolutely Certainty.

A private letter to the writer from Washington Monday conveyed the unwelcome information that owing to the strained relations between the House and Senate, there was some doubt about the agricultural bill passing the Senate in the few days yet remaining of this congress. This bill contains the Beaver Island $35,000 cable item and while there was no doubt of ultimate success, it meant a delay of a year, at least.

We had only about rounded out a vigorous and somewhat incisgant opinion of the U. S. Senate, when a telegram came that the bill passed the senate Saturday afternoon, without amendment.

This makes the Beaver Island cable a certainty, and we congratulate not only Beaver Island, but Charlevoix, upon the success of the project, which was started two years ago. It means much to the Island—more than can be now realized.

The cable will start from the beach just south of the south pier, and will terminate near the south side of the entrance to Beaver Harbor. From the landing a land wire will be built across the fields to the church lot, and 80 foot tower will be erected near the residence of Rev. Father Zugenbir, who will be the Weather Bureau official. The telephone service will be also connected with McCann's store at the harbor.

The tolls for telephone service between Charlevoix and Beaver Harbor will not exceed twenty five cents.

The appropriation will not become available until July 1st, but it is expected that the cable will be in operation by Oct. 1st.

For a Fish Hatchery.

The board of commerce met superintendent Clark here Wednesday and talked over the question of a permanent fish hatchery here. To begin with, Mr. Clark has long been in favor of establishing a permanent hatchery here, and has recommended it in his reports. The board will now go after it in earnest.

There is no doubt of success, as there are many weighty arguments in its favor and none against it.

For the propagation of lake trout and whitefish Mr. Clark says Charlevoix is the best point on the lakes, and Charlevoix will meet the commission half way by furnishing a site on the lake front.

Mr. Clark stated just before leaving, that the present auxiliary plant would hatch a greater number of eggs this spring than ever before.

A HOLOCAUST.

The Home of Supervisor Pearson Burned--Three Daughters Lose Lives.

One of the most terrible disasters in the history of Charlevoix county occurred early last Thursday morning in Springvale township.

The home of Supervisor Frank Pearson was totally destroyed by fire, and three daughters, aged 13, 11 and seven years, were burned to death in their beds.

The three daughters slept up stairs, while Mr. Pearson and wife and their youngest child, a baby, slept below. When the fire was discovered by Mr. Pearson he was so filled with the fumes of smoke that he had a hard time to arouse himself. However, he managed to get out and his first thought was for the children up-stairs. The upper story was enveloped in flames but Mr. Pearson went to an upper window determined to rescue the children if possible. On looking through the window he discovered, to his horror, that his wife had gone up from the inside to attempt a rescue of her loved ones. Mr. Pearson saw her overcome by the smoke and fire, and saw her fall to the floor.

He retraced his steps, and went inside and up the stairs, secured the inanimate form of his wife, and had but just reached the door steps when the upper floor went down. Both were in their night clothes, and in the biting cold of the winter morning. The father of Mrs. Pearson who was stopping with them, was also without a stitch of clothes except those he slept in.

After getting the wife and babe to the barn the husband and father rushed to the home of his mother and brother, about one-quarter of a mile away, and when the door was opened in response to his alarm he fell exhausted and is still in a precarious condition from his burns and smoke inhaled, as well as being partially frozen in the trip to his mother's home. Mrs. Pearson was immediately brought to the same place, but she, too, had received burns and was nearly frozen.

Mrs. Pearson's father, who was also in the house at the time, was able to escape by jumping through a window, but did not have time to save even his clothing; he stood the exposure better than the others.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Pearson were badly burned, they will recover. They were kindly cared for by the neighbors, and Mr. Pearson's brother, Register of Deeds W. J. Pearson, who was at Boyne Falls at the time, went immediately to their assistance. The bodies of the three children were found in the ruins, burned to a crisp.

Mr. Pearson is well known here, having been supervisor of his township for several years. It is needless to say that the sympathy of all for Mr. and Mrs. Pearson is widespread and deep.

Washington's Lineage.

The clouds which has long shrouded the name of George Washington's English ancestors seems in a fair way to be dispelled through the enterprise of a San Francisco man, who has spent much time and money in searching out the antecedents of the great American. The history of Washington's life is, of course, accessible to everybody, but comparatively little is known of his ancestors. The history of his family has been pieced together from the Saxon period down to the present time, and it is now established that the family is of Norman origin. The name was originally Wessington, and the family was one of the most ancient and honorable in Northumberland, England. The family was Saxon in origin, and the name is a corruption of the Saxon word Wessington, which means the home of the Wessons. The THURSDAY IS the time set by demonstrations outside the legislature to-morrow that action bills of legislation which the republican party are now counting to vote into law for which the democratic party has for a long time been remonstrating and protesting. The Gazette with the democratic party in that it has never been so good as it promises its platform Democrats were forgotten when opportunity to give their legislative force was petitioned. If the republican party is in fact true to promises from a democratic point of view, truth should be continuously called than, evidence from those who think the legislature neglected to a desirable and valuable end.

Through column past week appeared in the two papers of Detroit have been watching the legislature because of its chosen assiduity in the matter of Wayne county's interests against the bill introduced in the house which would have passed the house quickly, which it had received the approval of a Detroit representative, in consideration of some other measure it was to consent will perfect a bill for the legislature to pass local measures concerning Wayne county. Evidently it is a case of being checked if you do not consent to pass that which is desired of you. Of Wayne county legislation, is published.

It is said that a bill will be introduced in the legislature to-day or to-morrow providing for a county seat in some other county than Detroit, and that the appointment of a county seat will be made by the governor and the district attorney and the judge will receive an increase of $500 in salary. A WARM LETTER.

Cash Pete Campbell Gets Out From Some of His old Neighbors.

The SENTINEL yesterday gained possession of the following letter, received by Capt. P. D. Campbell from Whitehall, his former home.

Whitehall, Mich., Feb. 22d 1905.

MR. PETER CAMPBELL
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

We the undersigned, your old neighbors having a little regard for your reputation, do most earnestly beg that you come to Whitehall at your earliest convenience for the following very important reasons, to wit

Various rumors distributed to your fair name are being circulated, and unless the persons whose names appear on this communication were particular friends of yours when these transactions are alleged to have occurred, we feel that steps should be taken to let out your your reputation but also to remove any aspersion that may attach to innocent persons if our mutuals relations at that time.

That you was the better liked parcel to meet these charges, we take this occasion to state the most important ones

1st. You are charged with having stolen a mammoth watermelon from Fred A. Hinman, and that to escape a licking by the said Hinman you cunningly charged the theft to one of our prominent merchants, after having hidden the rinds on said merchant's premises.

2nd. That you entered a farmhouse north of Montague and stole a pumpkin pie, and tried to escape liability by making it appear that M. B. Covell put you up to it.

3rd. That you deliberately, and with evil intent, entered the barn of J. H. Wilsons and stole a bull calf belonging to said Williams, leading said bull off against his (the bulls) protest and stubborn resistance.

4th. That you threw several ladies over the bank at Sylvan Beach, thereby causing them great illness and seriously jeopardizing their lives.

5th. That you induced a party of gentlemen to hire a rig and take you up to Little Blue Lake, assuring them it was famous for its perch, when you had known for years there was never a perch seen in its waters.

As the above are a few of the numerous reports that are gaining currency here, we feel it is time that you were advised of the situation, and given a chance to meet your accusers.

Now, Peter, while these charges look serious to the people here who do not know you, we are confident that you can tell the truth when it is necessary, and while it may be important to establish an alibi in regard to the beef transaction, your friends here who are anxious that you repair your somewhat tarnished reputation, are ready to 'back' all that is the power of innocuous gentlemen to vindicate your name.

P. S. Hip is done invoicing, and we will see that everything is under lock and key while you are here, so there will be no chance for your enemies to start any new rumors of an unpleasant nature while you are our guest, or will give you a better standing with the community. Let us know what day you will be here, and whether on the ten to twelve a. m. or nine to twelve p. m. train. By the way, don't wait for the regular train, but take the stage line, as it is the most reliable service we have had for ten days.

CHARLEVOIX

Its Harbor, and Its Commercial, Marine and Manufacturing Advantages.

CHARLEVOIX has one of the best harbors on the chain of lakes, with depth of channel from Lake Michigan of fifteen feet. Charlevoix harbor is open later in the winter and earlier in the spring than any other Lake Michigan harbor north of Frankfort, making the port an ideal one for winter railroad freight transfer to the north and west shores. Charlevoix is coming to be known as the chief marine center of the straits region. It is surrounded by as fine farming section as there is in Michigan, and the area of farming and grazing land is rapidly increasing. One of the largest and best Portland Cement plants in the State is in progress of construction, and it has a large and completed beet sugar factory that will do business before the year closes. It has unrivalled attractions for many kinds of industrial enterprises, and is the most beautifully located town in Michigan. Five churches, excellent schools, first-class electric light plant, and the best water that ever came out of the earth.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

H. E. Newcitt has been re-appointed postmaster at Hope City.

Petoskey business men are forming a stock company for the purpose of leasing the Wabeno baseball grounds there, if plans mature, the race track will be put in shape and racing and trotting will an early autumn fair will be prominent measures to be promoted by the organization.

The slot machines are a thing of the past in Alpena, at least temporarily. One peculiar thing in connection with the matter is that no one knows who gave the order to take the machines out of the business places, nor even the chief of police, but the word was passed around that a raid was to be made and they were all taken away.

By the prompt action of a small rescuing party, sixteen men who were coming through the ice off Nake Isle Point, northwest of Petoskey, were no doubt saved from death, on Saturday recently. The field of ice upon which they were standing broke away and was carrying them out into the open Lake where it was soon broken up by the waves.

In the United States court H. B. Elliott, who was arrested some months ago at Central Lake, was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the Detroit House of Correction for fraudulent use of the United States mails. When arrested Elliott denied the charge and plead not guilty, but later he changed his plea to guilty and was promptly sentenced.

Judge Hosking of Cadillac was nominated for Circuit judge by the republicans of the twenty-eighth judicial district Friday on the fifteen ballot. Up until noon it looked as though the convention was hopelessly deadlocked as thirty one ballots all ending the same had been taken. Missaukee and Kalkaska, however, went over to Hasking, giving him the necessary votes for the nomination. The vote stood for forty-nine ballots as follow: Chittenden 5, Haskins 4, Warner 4, Sawyer 3, McIntyre 3.

Cheboygan special: Albert Fleury walked on the ice from Bois Blanc island to this city Saturday to get medicine for his sick child. The mercury was 16 below zero and a wild snowstorm was raging, but he bravely set out on the return trip about midnight, with a lantern and compass to guide him. That was the last seen of him, and there is little doubt that he perished and his body was covered in by drifting snow. His wife came to this city yesterday to look for him and large searching parties were organized both here and on the island to search for his body. He was 21 years of age.

Cheboygan Tribune: Capt. Cheney, of the Bois Blanc Island life saving station, came over last Thursday, visited a barber shop and had his whiskers and mustache shaved off. The result was a good joke on "Jiggs" Perkett, of the Spencer House. The captain always stops at the Spencer when in the city and after he had his face cleaned registered at that hotel. Perkett was in the office and asked him if he was any relative to Capt. Cleary, of the life saving station. The captain replied: "I should think I was. I am his brother and have not seen him for twelve years." Perkett said: "Well, I expect the captain over today and he always stops here and he will be glad to see you."

"Curley" Nowlin, a well known upper peninsula trapper, reports that about the big snow of Dec. 26-27 when a big fall of snow came down, the deer have paid heavy penalty. The snow is very deep, and the deer are unable to escape the wolves, a short run exhausting them so that they are easily killed. More deer will be killed by wolves this winter, the trapper declares, than in any similar period during his many years experience in the woods of the Lake Superior region. Much complaint is made that wire snares, set for deer, are plundered in the woods in some localities. The material used is generally heavy hay wire. One end is made into a slip loose, and the snare is fastened to a sapling by the side of a runway." The sapling is bent over in such manner that it will be released as soon as the deer shows its head through the noose. As it straightens up the deer is caught by the neck. Any game law violator resorting to devices of this kind was caught in the act by a game warden in Chippewa county this week and has stood $25 and cost. It is said to has been supplying a whole community with venison all winter.

—On Sunday the Sermon Topics at the Methodist church will be as follows. At 10:30 a. m. "Weary the Man and his work." At 7 p. m. "False Shams." Epworth League at 6 o'clock. Topic. "The Making of a Christian his Speech." Leader Mr. S. Brown.

—In our local last week calling attention to the matter of Board of Commerce stock, the proof reader was responsible for an error. The compositor made us say that "this is a work in which the business men alone are interested." The editor wrote it: "This is a work in which not only the business men are interested but."

—There is no public office in the gift of the people of this county where brains and sound business qualifications are more needed than in the office of supervisor. The occupant of this special office bear the burdens of all his fellow public officials. He is held responsible for any extravagant expenditures that are made by any of them in the whole. He is accused with showing partiality in a few and "throwing the losses" into others. It makes no difference how accurate his work may been done, there are a large number he has not pleased. For his work the law allows him $3.00 a day and for this amount he is supposed to couple physical labor, business ability, be a judge of actual values of property; then when his work is completed have his bill turned down.

—Thos Noyes, of this place, has accepted the position of Lodge inspector for Michigan, of the Dansby Co. of America, the head quarters of which are in New York. The work will occupy about half of his time, therefore he will continue to operate his boiler works here.

—Beloskey Avery Lipet Pelham have are opening Arcade Bazaar about having so much money in his wife that the doors are spring and the lock won't work. It seems that in some way a coin got into the time lock in such a manner as to make it impossible to open the safe and necessitated building a trench about it and turning the big 1-ton receptacle over so as to roll the coin out of the lock before the combination could be made to work, a task which occupied a good part of two days.

—During the last campaign Representative Tawney promised the dredging interests along the Great Lakes that he would see that no government dredge would be sent to other territory. On Thursday attempted to deliver the goods, but fell down hard. The river and harbors bill passed by the House contained a provisions instruction the secretary of war to send a government dredge to Lake Michigan. Representative Denfeld moved to have this stricken out and both he and Tawney talked against to bring it about. This aroused Representative Bishop, who declared that the dredging combine along the lakes had raised the price of dredging from 8 to 12 cents a yard, that the combine monopolized business and were so slow that all the lake projects suffered. The provision remained in the bill.

—It may not be generally known that President Roosevelt recently indicated that he would consider it a friendly act on the part of the Canadian shifflers Shipmasters' Society if it would send a representative to the inauguration March 4th. At a recent meeting of the Society the matter was taken up and, on motion, Capt. P. D. Campbell was elected a delegate with the usual credentials, leaving the institutions to report in person to the president on his arrival in Washington. The appointment having been made known to the president, he has arranged to receive Capt. Campbell in special audience in the Blue Room of the White House, on saturday evening of this week, at eleven time. The Captain will present to the president the congratulations of the S. S. Canada Beaver island wailing stock, cut from a tree now growing in Howey Hills land. Capt. Campbell has also been advised that he will be given a place in the inaugural procession immediately following Geronimo, the great Apache general, who when he will also be quartered, during his stay in Washington, at the expense of the government. Capt. Campbell, on Tuesday evening, bought a box of "Pee-Wee" cigars, and Tuesday morning left for the National capital.

—R. S. Pratt, of Traverse City the Democratic Nominee for Judge.

At a democratic convention held in Traverse City, last week, Jabez S. Pratt was nominated for judge of the 13th judicial circuit, in opposition to F. W. Maynard, the republican nominee and present judge.

Very little need be said concerning Mr. Pratt's candidacy. It seems to be only a "matter of form" to preserve the organization, as Mr Pratt cannot be energy and probably knows it.

The people of the 13th circuit may not yet forgetter the campaign of vituperation and slander that Mr. Pratt waged six years ago. Yet, notwithstanding a little one of, money, and the most energetic campaign the democrats of this circuit have ever conducted, Judge Mayne was elected by a majority of nearly 600.

Judge Mayne has behind him an enviable record of six years on the bench. He has more than lived up to every expectation of his supporters, and is again before the people with one act to explain or an apology to make.

A Little Showing.

The City Lighting and Water Plant Earning Money.

The following statement of the receipts and disbursements of the water and lighting plants for the past year has been prepared for the annually by the village clerk. The figures make a very satisfactory showing for the enlightenment of the tax payers.

Total collections and accounts rendered	$11311
Total Electric Light Department	5761
Average collections to date (based on annual and week data)	11000.00
Disbursements.
Total disbursements	$5465.00
Overdraft at end of year	1296
Annual disbursements to date	4000.00
Balance of earnings for year	$1296
Electric Light fund on hand at commencement of operation on hand	1296.00
Net profit for operating water works	$2592
Bonds issued to date to March 1st	4000.00
Bonds after operation commenced March 1st	2000.00
Water Fund.
Total receipts and collections	$1100.00
Total expenditures and overdraft	1100.00
Actual cash on hand	100.00
Actual earnings from March 1st to date	1000.00
Bonds issued to date	2000.00
Disbursements for Water to date	2000.00
Balance of earnings for year	1000.00
Net profit for operating water works	$1000.00

This report appears in different form than the report of the Village Treas. for the report that transferred from the contingent fund to the Electric Light and Water funds are debited from the moneys received by these funds and further it shows the value of supplies on hand at the two plants which do not appear in the Treasurer's report.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
Rev. James Hyslop, Ph. D., Pastor.

The subject of sermon on Sunday morning was "The Christ in True Perspective," listened to by a large congregation. The sermon treated of the saving nature, saving deeds and Saving Powers of the Christ.

The subject next Sunday morning will be given the third in the course of great perspectives which the Christ top is at present treating and will be a presentation of "The Doctrine of the Holy Spirit in Perspective." At 12:00 a. m. the Bible School Convention will be held.

On Friday Evening March 3rd there will be a fine entertainment in the church given by the Sunday school Scholars under the directorship of Mrs Hyslop and Mrs. E. A. Barnett. The program will consist of two plays and include some unique and pleasing numbers. Among them, A Action Boat Song "Hayden's Toy Symphony" (real toy instruments being used) a cantata entitled "The Fairies of the Seasons." Vision Solos, Recitations and Choruses. This entertainment should be largely patronized. Tickets 25c. Children 15c.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Louis Genette, who has been very sick with pneumonia for the the past three weeks, is slowly recovering.

The Town Sisters will give an entertainment under the auspices of the I. A. S., at the Town Hall, on the evening of St. Patrick's Day, the 17th of March.

On Wednesday of last week a party of fishermen from Charlevoix, consisting of Frank and Ed. Chalmpion, Leo Sim, John Baker, and two others, attended by Frank Valentine, S. B. Chase, Larry and Ted Chase, went out on the ice about 3 miles from this place to fish for trout. They proved on their way out a small crack in the ice. About 11 o'clock Ted Chase getting hungry, started to the shore. On coming to the crack, he found a rod or more of open water. He returned and the party tried to get around the water to the north and south, but could not, and in the meantime the open water had increased to from 3 or 4 rods. They finally cut a 3 or 4 rod piece of ice about three feet long and succeeded in crossing the open space. They had no outfit of paddles, but did it by means of a salt sprinkled in a liquid shape. The fish had just begun to bite, when they thought had to quit. This was nice for the fish but tough on the fishermen.

"To Be or Not to Be"

The East Jordan Herald, in commenting on the SENTINEL's editorial of two weeks ago concerning the Ward road, says:

"There is no doubt that the road will be built but just when is a conjecture. The cost of building the eighteen miles between here and Charlevoix will be in the neighborhood of $200,000 an amount altogether too much for the D. & C. people to assume alone. There is some doubt as to the prospect of traffic warranting the investment, unless the Michigan Central and G. R. & I. people contribute toward the building and throw their passenger service this way. It would make the route between Charlevoix and Detroit about four hours shorter. Without doubt a sleeper would be sent out of Detroit for night-ly trips and it would be necessary to run the same car over the D. & C. line.

"When the "restriction clause" expires a year from next May the three trustees (appointed by the probate court under the will) will probably make some disposition of the property. Just what is a conjecture. No better place for new mills can be found that here and if such are established, it will keep the timber coming this way and furnish employment to a large number of men. There is some talk of a cooperage plant being started at the D & C. terminal here, but in case same is built it will be done so by parties other than the Ward estate. However, if the trustees should see fit to sell the timber to Bay City parties, then a vast amount of the work will go the other way from us. In view of this fact it will be well for our Business Men's Association to keep in close touch with above subject.

"We have some of the finest saw mill in Michigan and there is no doubt but what with proper planning these can be increased."

Game Warden Makes a Haul.

Chief Deputy Game Warden Hoyt has returned to Grand Haven from Saginaw, where he made a successful campaign against fishermen who have been violating the law. It is the best big job that the chief deputy has done and it was accomplished only after a great amount of work. He found a new sort of violation of the fish law. Artful dodgers of the statutes have been fishing under the ice. Tip nets were placed as ordinary nets are, with anchorage on the sides of the stream. The nets are heart shaped and lead to a final pocket which the fish always reach. In order to secure the fish a cake of ice six feet square is cut, directly in front of the pocket, and lifted out. Then fish are there secured and the block is placed back in position. It takes an expert to find these openings.

Deputy Warden Hoyt and his assistants cut out twenty-one of these blocks in two days and the ice was two feet thick. It required a tremendous amount of labor.

During the progress of the work it times as high as 200 people, mainly fishermen and their sympathizers, watched the progress of the work. The news of what was being done spread around as if on the wings of the wireless, and some of the depredators were able to get out of the way long before the arrival of the officers. It was laughable, Mr. Hoyt reports, how some of the "farmers," as they styled themselves, watched the progress of the work. They had fish scales and fish slime on their clothing, but said they were not fishermen and had merely been attracted by curiosity and wanted to see how the nets were taken up.

Besides seeing about thirty-nets, Mr. Hoyt also took upon pounds of fish, which will be sold by a justice of the peace. There is more violation of the fish law near Saginaw than to any other section of the state.

Startling Mortality.

Statistics show startling mortality from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases, there is just one reliable remedy. Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. LONG STRIKE WON BY MEN.

Conflict Between Machinists and Makers of Printing Presses Ends.

After a conflict beginning May 24 and continuing until the order for the Goss Printing Press Company of Chicago and the International Association of Machinists was issued yesterday by making an agreement. The men went back at full demands. They agree to take the same wage, and the abolition of piecework throughout. And the shop is to be entirely unionized. Arrangements for work must be made through the union. The strike was the result of a demand made on the company by the union for the reinstatement of a foreman who had been discharged, and the refusal of the company to do so. The men then struck, and the company then made the demand that the men should work with men who had been employed during the strike. It is said that the company will not discriminate against the strikers, but will take back all who apply for work as fast as possible. The men have been out since May 24, and have been supported during the strike by the union. The Goss company is the largest concern of its kind in the world, and its plant here is the largest in Chicago. The strike has caused a great deal of trouble to the company, and it is said that it will be some time before the plant can be put in full operation. The company has been operating its plant with a force of men since the strike began, but it has been impossible to turn out the work in the shape and at the speed demanded by the trade. The company has been compelled to refuse many orders for presses, and it is said that it will be some time before it can do the work in the shape and at the speed demanded by the trade. SLAV TYRANT KILLED

GRAND DUKE SERGIUS ASSASSINATED AT MOSCOW.

Two Men Threw a Bomb Under His Carriage as Their Fellow-Conspirator Fired Into the Czar's Uncle Is Picked Up Dead—Assassins Arrested.

Grand Duke Sergius, uncle of Czar Nicholas II., and brother-in-law of Queen Alexandra, was assassinated at Moscow on Friday. He was killed by a bomb which was hurled beneath his carriage as he was driving through the Nikolski gate of the Kremlin. The great Slav tyrant was literally blown to bits. His body was terribly mangled. The carriage was thrown to fragments of shattered wood. The bomb was thrown by one of two men who were to assist the assassin in the attempt. The assassin fired two revolver shots at the Grand Duke's carriage. Both men were immediately seized by the crowd. The assassin was also arrested on his life. This proved to be the method of murder that has formed at Moscow during Sergius' regime there.

—Mrs. Judge Mayne and Mrs. F. N. Chapel entertained last (Wednesday) evening at the home of Mrs. Chapel. About seventy-five guests were there, and a very enjoyable evening was spent with considerable whist and some dancing.

—S. M. Rose has been engaged the past week putting the U. S. auxiliary fish hatchery in shape for the spring hatching. Everything was in readiness Monday night, and Tuesday afternoon superintendent Webster arrived with seventeen cans of eggs. At this writing the eggs are being placed, and the plant will be in full operation in a day or two.

—The wage scale and working conditions for 1905 season on the Great Lakes has been settled by representatives of the seamen and of the Lake Carriers' association. The men will receive $27.50 from the opening of navigation until October 1, an advance of $2.50 over last season. From October 1 until the close of navigation last year's scale of $27.50 per month will remain unchanged. Some changes in the conditions of work, classification of boats and number of men employed on the boats have been made.

—A ten pound son at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Peter McCafferty.

—There will be a ball at Lewis' opera house on St. Patrick's night, March 17th.

—John Lamphear, of this place, has very low at his home of heart trouble, with but slight hopes of recovery.

—The Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church are planning for a New England supper in the near future. Notice of date given later.

—Mr. W. A. Brubaker, of Chicago, of the National Prohibition Party will give an address in the M. E. Church on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock after the Prayer meeting.

—Contrary to expectations, an entirely satisfactory agreement on the river and harbor bill, the last of two supply measures to receive final consideration, was reached just before the hour of adjournment. Charlevoix is therefore safe for $25,000.

—There will be a union service at the Congregational church Sunday evening, March 12th. An address will be given by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin State President and National pulpit orator of the W. C. T. U. All invited.

—Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, of St. James, arrived, called here by the critical illness of Mrs. Wilkinson's father, James Hodgett. They made the ice route to Cross Village Sunday, having a very speedy and comfortable trip.

—Harvey Campbell and Emery Baldwin recently returned from Grand Haven, having successfully passed examination for chief engineers' licenses of 1000 tons built. They have signed as chief and assistant, respectively in the steamer Pine Lake for the coming season.

—We call attention to the real estate advertisement of E. A. Burnett in this issue. Mr Burnett proposes to push the business to the limit. A good live real estate agent in a town is a valuable auxiliary to a board of commerce, and this is what Mr. Burnett proposes to be.

—The W. C. T. U. will hold their annual meeting on Friday (April 7) at 10 a. m. March 15th at the home of Mrs A. T. Barnett, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year for the transaction of such business as may come before the meeting. As far as possible let every member be present.

—The Barnard forange will give a box social at the Barnard school house Friday evening, March 17th. Ladies will be admitted free of charge, providing they bring a box containing enough lunch for two. Boxes will be sold to the gentlemen at action. A good program will be given, and a cordial welcome extended to all.

—Mr. F. E. Torrell, who is to open a bank here, was in town Friday looking after the work that is being done in the building. Carpenters are engaged in putting the interior in shape and the masons will begin work at once building the vault. Mr. Torrell is in Grand Rapids this week buying fireproof, safe, safety deposit vault and fixtures. Mr. Torrell expects to have the bank doing business early in May.

—The Consult Co. office force, with Secretary Judd in charge, are busily engaged in preparations for an energetic spring campaign all along the line in construction matters a large consignment of material is here, but a quantity of even more superstructure material for the kilns is yet to arrive. As soon as the ground is uncovered work will be resumed and pushed rapidly to a conclusion.

—At the Methodist Church, on Sunday morning, Quarterly meeting services will be held as follows: At 9:30 Lovefeast. At 10:30 sermon, subject: "The Lord's Supper, its meaning," followed by the Holy Communion. At 6 p. m. Epworth League Topic: "Christ, the Great Physician." Leader Miss Sophia Manson. No evening service, owing to Union Service at Congregational church. On Monday at 7:30 p. m. Quarterly Conference, at which the Presiding Elder will be present.

—Henry Blocker, formerly U. S. meat inspector, of Grand Haven, is a recent comer, with a reasonable probability of his becoming a permanent resident of the place. He comes to help out Ralph Washburn on the season's work. He is another shoe-maker. More concerning it may be given out later. Mr. Blocker is one of the best and most experienced noncoiled and marine engine builders on the great lakes, having for years conducted a large plant at Grand Haven. Mr. Blocker is a valuable acquisition to our population.

—William J. Stewart, ex mayor of Grand Rapids and a well known attorney, will succeed Samuel Larned as collector of internal revenue for Western Michigan. His candidacy was indorsed by Senators Alger and Burrows.

—Capt. and Mrs. Fountain, at the life-saving station, were surprised Saturday evening by fifteen couples of their friends. Although the surprise was complete, the genial captain and his wife royally entertained the crowd. The evening was most enjoyably spent.

—And now, what do you think of it? Our old friend—we mean our good friend, Jerry Sullivan, as well and favorably known here, was recently married to Charlevoix to Miss Anna Bell, a daughter of the late Isaac W. Bell, formerly state senator. Congratulations.

—Edith Lamoreaux, who has been spending the winter at Boyne City with her sister, Mrs. E. A. Rosgen, telephones with much glee that she is an auntie to a 9½ pound boy, recently added to the Rosgenger family. We cordially congratulate all concerned, including aunt Edith.

—Capt. Hopkins, of St. Ignace, was here Tuesday looking up the facilities for getting the steamer Wauton hauled out for repairs. The matter could not be so limited for a few days, and Capt. Hopkins left the matter in the hands of Capt. Wilkinson, emphasizing the need of a set of marine lifting boxes here. There is no better location anywhere for such an enterprise than here, and our board of commerce should take the matter up.

—Mrs. Sara Livingston entertained at C. O. S. club at her home last Thursday evening in a most charming manner. No regular program had been prepared, but the guests felt an "experience" meeting, and the facetious some of them have for drawing on their imagination would cause Marie Corelli or Gelett Burgess to turn green with envy. Miss Lettenan served pine apple ice with small cakes as refreshments, and while enjoying these dainties they discussed plans for the next meeting—the nature of which, we are not informed.

—We have received a letter from Montgomery Ward & Co., of Chicago, in which they say: "Dealing to congress an advertising campaign in your locality we wish to inquire as to your rates for running six or four inch wide ads. The only way Montgomery Ward & Co can get an ad. in the SENTINEL is to buy the plant and run it in their interest. The Sentinel is now run, as it has been for thirty six years to the interest of Charlevoix and its business enterprises. We want none of Montgomery Ward & Co's money.

Death of James Hodgett.

James Hodgett died at the home of his daughter, Mrs Dr. Judd, in this village, Tuesday noon, after a long and painful disease, aged 63 years. Hodgett came here with his family from Canada twenty three years ago, and, although of a very quiet and unobtrusive nature, no citizen has ever enjoyed a greater measure of the respect of others. He was a most conscientious and upright man.

For many years he was engineer at the Charlevoix Lumber Co's mill, and three years at the roller mills, until ill health compelled him to relinquish work.

Besides a wife he leaves four married daughters—Mrs. Dr. J. A. Judd of Charlevoix, Mrs. Dr. A. M. Wilkinson, of St. James, Mrs. M. V. Cook, of Thompsonville, and Mrs. W. W. Washburn Jr., of Lansing, all of whom were at his bed-side when death came.

Latest War Bulletin.

The latest by wire today is to the effect that Kuropatkin is hopeful of victory.

The Japanese have completely enveloped the Russians and have possession of The Pass the only waxed escape to Harbin.

Kuropatkin is now fighting desperately to break through and escape to the south-west, but must surrender his forces within a few days.

Practical Mortality.

Statistics show startling mortality from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases, there is just one infallible remedy, Dr. King's New Life Pills. St. Vincent's Orphan Home, Chicago, says: "They have no equal for Constipation and Biliousness." 25c at F. Hayes & Co. drug store.

MRS. BROOKS DEAD

Wife of Professor in Kalamazoo College Succumbs to Long Illness.

From the Kalamazoo Gazette we copy the following account of the death in that city of Mrs. Prof. Samuel Hodson, one of our best known summer residents, and one of the earliest pioneers of the "Charlevoix Sentiment" now the "Charlevoix Sentiment Home." Mrs Brooks had very many friends in Charlevoix.

"In the passing away on Tuesday February 28, of Mrs. Samuel Brooks, another of the social set formed by long time and loving association has been broken.

"Not only the member of life in the home was also, but at a large circle of friends where her unselfish nature and kindly thought of others endeared her to all.

"Elizabeth Angeline Morse was born June 2, 1828, in Roxbury, Massachusetts. In the public schools of Boston she taught for nearly sixteen years, when she was married to the Rev. Samuel Brooks, November 26, 1868, then pastor of the Baptist church of West Medway, Mass.

"At the close of 1869, she came to Kalamazoo with her husband, who had been elected professor of the Latin language and literature in Kalamazoo college.

"Soon after their arrival, they occupied the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lovell on street, where they have resided for nearly 35 years.

"Mrs. Brooks has been closely identified with the work of the Baptist church and the religious and social life of the society. Her interest in the welfare of an ideal parsonat C. O. S. club at her home last evening and her love for the students never abated. She was a devoted member of the church societies and until recently, a teacher in the Sunday school.

"Through a protracted and painful illness Mrs. Brooks bore patiently and cheerfully endured, offering to full measure the sympathy and comfort of a loving mate to her silent hour.

"She leaves a surviving husband and two daughters, Mrs. Henry W. Mahan, of Duluth, Minn., and Mrs. Hodge Vickey, of Sault Ste Marie, Ont.

"Funeral services will be held at the family residence, 710 West Lovell street, on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. J. E. Bloss, assisted by Dr. J. D. Gunsaulus of the college. Burial will be in Mountain Home cemetery."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hadley, Pb. D., Pastor.

The entertainment given last Friday was a very successful affair, giving pleasure to a good audience and nothing more.

The morning and evening services last Sunday were well attended. The subject in the morning was "The Holy Spirit" the third in a series of "Great Perspectives." The sermon was a Home Missionary meeting delivered as "interesting and helpful."

Next Sunday morning Dr. Hadley will take for his subject, "Man in Perspective." There will be a Union Temperance meeting in the evening, when Mrs. Benjamin, State President of the W. C. T. U. will be present and give an address.

Special meetings will be held all next week, when the Rev. George Hill, pastor of the Congregational church, Delmar, will give an evangelistic address each evening. The special object of these meetings is the quickening of the spiritual life of the church. It is also hoped that others will attend the meetings, hear gospel, and begin the Christian life, which is the only life that is really worth living. On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 4 o'clock there will be a Bible and Children's Meeting, of about three quarters of an hour in length with short illustrated talks.

Program.

Following is the program for the Historical Society meeting at the home of Hon E. H. Green, Friday evening, March 15th:

Piano Solo ..... Miss Mary Smith
Paper, Lord Jeffrey ..... Mrs. E. H. Green
Reading ..... Mrs. E. H. Wood
Vocal Solo ..... Mrs. F. G. Rose and Miss Ida

NORWOOD.

The Pretty Little Town at the Foot of the Bay Resolves Up.

Norwood, our little suburban neighbor on the south has opinions and aspirations of its own, and moreover it is not afraid to make them known to the world.

Fact is, Norwood, in point of picturesque locality and urban surroundings, is all that goes to make up a model community, in a gem. A farming section on three sides that is forty years old, a lake view that is a continual pageant of ever passing beauty, Norwood is one of the prettiest places on fresh or salt water.

Well, to come to the point. As we observed, Norwood has aspirations. On Thursday evening of last week a railroad meeting was held in Town Hall, and the attendance was large.

The matter of an electric road to Charlevoix, as a nucleus of extension to Traverse City, was freely discussed. The sum of $650 was raised on the spot, as a starter. Supervisor Henry Wagner and James C. Chase, were appointed a committee of local promotion and publicity, and Wm. Harris and S. B. Chase were appointed to consult with the Charlevoix Board of Commerce.

The Norwood folks will have a meeting every week to push along the good work. They are determined to have an outlet and an outlet and there is no doubt but somewhere, that others greater inducements, in the way of summer resort attractions than Norwood and Charlevoix can offer, will be found lacking, sure for a time, anywhere then that surrounding Norwood.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Joe Hollechik who has been at Essex the past 2 months is home.

Mrs. Olmstead and daughters who have been living in the East house, move into Mrs. Moore's house this week.

Mrs. Marietta Valentine goes this week to Milwaukee to see her sister Johnsonn, who is sick at that place.

William Gewen leaves Friday for Grand Rapids to meet his brother Robert Cowen, who is stage manager for a theatrical troop from New York City, and performs in Grand Rapids Friday and Saturday this week.

At the rail-road meeting held at the hall Thursday evening last to take steps to interest in building an electric road from Charlevoix to Norwood, a committee to solicit subscriptions, and also and to confer with the business men of Charlevoix was appointed and another meeting will be held Wednesday evening this week. Mr. Temple a rail-road promoter from Grand Rapids will finance the road if sufficient aid is given by people along the line, of course if this road is built from Charlevoix to Norwood, it would be continued to Elk Rapids or Traverse City. About 700 dollars was subscribed by those present.

The Republican Caucus.

The republican caucus last Monday evening was probably the largest political gathering in the history of Charlevoix—embracing about the whole voting population of the town. The following ticket was nominated:

President—Harry Nicholls.
Trustees 3 M. Rose, N. H. Washburn, Archie Alcock.
Treasurer—E. H. Green.
Clerk—Henry C. Cooper.
Assessor—H. W. Taylor.
Clerk.

This will be the only ticket in the field, and, of course, will be elected from top to bottom.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a Township Caucus for the purpose of placing in nomination Candidates for Township officers of the Township of Hudson, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan and for transactio of such other business as may properly come before it. Will be held in the Township Hall in said Township on Thursday the 23rd day of March 1905 at 1 o'clock p. m.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Hugh E. Hegle who has been quite sick for a part of the winter is much better.

Mrs. L. McCafferty gives the Washington Birthday Ball this year. Dancing at the Gallagher Hall and Supper at the Beaver Hotel.

Beaver Island notes wish to congratulate Judge Mayne on his unanimous renomination for the Judgeship of the 25th Judicial Circuit.

Mr and Mrs Lawrence gave a whist party at their home on Monday evening. W. J. Gallagher won first prize and Mrs. Donkey the consolation.

Fresh eggs in the shells are days. Mr. Lemon landed 17 one one last Monday. Inshore Latitude holds the palm for most spacing. In these days he spared four hundred pounds of fresh meat to pound.

Geo. Shaw, the head weaver at the R. I. L. Co's mill is evidently planning on making a mid of his own some time, the second one of his crew served Saturday Feb. 8 to time to our dinner with him and he said go to work at 7 o'clock without being any time. A time boy weighing nine pounds.

Beaver Island has escaped the greater part of the severe cold typical in other parts of the country south of us. The mercury not registering more than 10 below zero and then only for a few hours. Reports from Mc Low Iron, camp at the head of the Island say they are doing a nice business this winter.

Mrs Katherine Gallagher, Beaver Islands oldest inhabitant passed away last Friday February 17 aged 102 years. She is survived by four children Capt Owen Gallagher of the Beaver Island Life Saving service, Capt. Neal Gallagher of Escanaba, Mrs. Con McNulty and Mrs. Jas. Mc McNulty both of the Island, besides a large number of grand children, great grand children and eight great great grandchildren. The funeral service took place Sunday morning at the Holy Cross church Fr. Zogelder celebrating the Mass.

The annual King's Dance celebrated by the Indians on this group of Islands was held for the 60th time. Most of the Indians on High Island it is the custom at these dances for a banquet to be given by the managers who given the dance, and a large cake containing three rings is served. The three men who happen to get rings in their cake are expected to furnish the next supper and dance on the sixth day of the following three months till all three have had their turn. John Anderson gave the February dance at his home on High Island and judging from the reports of the Beaver Island contingent they must have had a high old time although no whisky is allowed at these dances. The Mackinac is given from six to eight and the remainder of the evening is given over to tripping the light fantastic, when the Indians can do to perfection several whites joined in the festivities Ellen Vermuel of the wife of Garden Island, Fred Sandenburg and Frank McCafferty who are working on the Island this winter. W. J. Gallagher and Rev. Fr. Zogelder friends James, although the latter couple did not go to attend the dance. Fr. Zogelder stood over in that day for the purpose of saying mass at the Indian church the following morning, so the dance was a surprise on him, but we won't vouch for bowery as we have a private tip that he was foot manager at that dance.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Traverse City Record: John Sparks of Grand Rapids, a traveling man who had a record which is probably not equalled by any other traveling tourist many a this city on his trips, is dead at his home in Grand Rapids, having died of blood poisoning which set in a week ago. In boarding a train at Boyne Falls, or a nearby point, he struck his shin against the platform, taking off a small piece of skin from his leg. Blood poisoning set in and he immediately went to Grand Rapids where death occurred only a few days after. Mr. Sparks traveled for the Grand Rapids Brewing Co. and has made this city regularly during the past 20 years. He was on the road 10 to 12 days a month, with the exception of two months, three years ago when he and his wife took a trip to England. He never missed a month. He was one of the best people at this on the road.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

February 16, 1905.

At a regular meeting held on the above date the following officers were present: President H. E. Wilson, A. E. Cross, R. N. Washburn, Wm Peter, P. D. Campbell, and Frank Lade Shaine Ian. Absent F. W. Chase and H. W. Milner.

Council Adjourned.

While assisting her husband, Mrs. Josh Horner of Central Lake who weighs over 200 pounds, fell from a wagon in such a way that one of the steel stakes penetrated the fleshy part of her thigh, causing a terrible wound. Pieces of her clothing were driven nearly through her leg and the thick maple stake was broken off the ground by her weight. Her condition is serious.

The Colonel's Waterloo.

Colonel Tabor M. Fuller, of Honey Grove, Texas, nearly met his Waterloo from Liver and Kidney trouble. In a recent letter, he says: "I was nearly dead, of these complaints, and, although I tried my family doctor, he did me no good; so I got a free bottle of your great Electric Bitters, which cured me. I consider them the best medicine on earth, and thank God who gave you the knowledge to make them." Sold, and guaranteed to cure, Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Kidney Disease, by F. G. Hayes & Co. drug. gist, at 50c a bottle.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The State Librarian at Lansing has sent twenty four volumes of the Michigan pioneer and historical collections for use in our high school library.

Principal J. H. Kaye of the Northern Normal School at Marquette is available for a talk to our county normal students and an evening public lecture sometime between March 20 and April 15th—this to be accordance with an arrangement made by the state superintendent of Public Instruction. Mrs. Jenkins portion of this lecture will be given next week if possible.

Four or five high school boys will take part in a local oratorical contest, tentatively also shall represent the Charlevoix school in the district contest at Lellanau in the early part of April. The date of the local contest is not yet fixed.

About twenty volumes have been donated by publishers on request as the nucleus of a pedagogical library for the county normal school. A few more will be purchased this year.

The reading table in the high school has been provided with a convenient set of newspaper files, and subscribers of the commercial and scientific journals have been supplied with blanks to elect out the glare of the spring sunshine.

The high school chorus will give a mixed musical program in the early part of May.

A number of the teachers, normal students and high school students attended the "Duffy" at Harnard last Friday night. Mr. Howe drove the team for the local drawn some of the southern portionals of Michigan, and has presented it to the Normal school.

The debate last Friday afternoon in the high school on the question "Resolved that Germany has made more progress than France since the time of the Napoleons" was of more than ordinary interest. The affirmative was well sustained by Leo Miller, Scott Lamphear, and Ed Pantzer, the negative by Miss Jessie Haley Vetter, and Lynn Hinsley. Decision for the affirmative.

Successful Breeding.

It would have been impossible certainly of Isaac F. Lamberger, Spencerville, O., had not the best he could for his suffering son "My son," he says, "met a fearful death over his eye, and I applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which speedily healed and saved his eye. Good for cuts, bruises and ulcers too. Only 25c at F. G. Hayes & Co. drug store.

Two of a Kind.

Hopkinsville (Ky.) Proof of Merit is telling of the experience of a young Western woman. It was not the first time she had the opportunity of a public testimonial. The fact that she gives it again proves her sincerity. Mrs. Ida Wilson, North Lamphear, and Ed Pantzer, the negative by Miss Jessie Haley Vetter, and Lynn Hinsley. Decision for the affirmative.

"Yours have to wait for the stage in this country," said the man "You can't get out of the house."

"Then where can I go, sir?" inquired the visitor, who was a stranger to the town by the station, and I don't know a soul in Hopkinsville.

"Guess you'd have to stick with the station agent," said the man.

"Well, I'm explained, I am a lady—you the station agent, sure enough."

Brave Struggle for Honor.

Black Day of Battle—Devotion to duty, blind, and very pure in making the ultimate sacrifice, are the mottoes of heroes from Harvard university. After completing a four-year course in the University of North Carolina, submitting all the examinations required, and graduating with the commencement, he spent an entire year in the hospital, suffering as no pen can describe. For years he had been a victim of Chronic Constipation, which had fastened upon him the worst form of Dyspepsia. Nothing could relieve him. Finally he tried Dr. King's New Life Pills, and was cured. Now he says, "I am a strong man." Only 25c at F. G. Hayes & Co. drug store.

"Wise" From the Bible.

A resident of New York had occasion to attend an out of town meeting and was asked to pray. He said he would be home the same night. As he was a man of his word, and never lied, his wife would become alarmed should he stay away, so he sent her as follows when he found that he could not get home.

Mrs. A. B. C., New Haven—Tarry Not. See first chapter of verse.

The astonished wife turned to the verse and read: "My voice shall thou hear in the morning."

Religious Services in Hotels.

Rev. Henry Marsh Warren has begun the holding of religious services in New York hotels every Sunday and evening with great success. He uses a drawing room, and when all occasions are crowded. Having chosen as his idea of religion the "Christ-life" he is about to arrange a regular series of services among the hotels. Mr. Warren at one time was pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church.

Pleased at Son's Appointment.

The mother of Mr. Pantzer's wife is greatly delighted with the appointment of her only grandson, Dr. Pantzer, to Wolf Point. The publication of this fact will cause a smile of satisfaction to spread over the face of Mrs. Warren at one time was pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church.

Pleased at Son's Appointment.

A Hungarian Monarch's property sent as a present to the Emperor of Austria, a Hungarian, a pair of pheasants, a file and a shaft, all ingeniously nailed in a corner's cage without the cage being broken. The Emperor sent, in return, his photograph, a gold medal of art and a gold cross.

"Wise" From the Bible.

A resident of New York had occasion to attend an out of town meeting and was asked to pray. He said he would be home the same night. As he was a man of his word, and never lied, his wife would become alarmed should he stay away, so he sent her as follows when he found that he could not get home.

Mrs. A. B. C., New Haven—Tarry Not. See first chapter of verse.

The astonished wife turned to the verse and read: "My voice shall thou hear in the morning."

Religious Services in Hotels.

Rev. Henry Marsh Warren has begun the holding of religious services in New York hotels every Sunday and evening with great success. He uses a drawing room, and when all occasions are crowded. Having chosen as his idea of religion the "Christ-life" he is about to arrange a regular series of services among the hotels. Mr. Warren at one time was pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church.

WICKLY'S WOODS

By H. W. TAYLOR

Mr. Billy Hiler, talking very earnest-ly, and pounding his words home by getting down his white, over 1895 with a great dull clothing, and commenced to remove the whole looking cloth off a short coffin we saw in the Mr. and Mrs. Wesley and Sister Jones's second parlor door, and we thought we might as well go up to supper.

So we went, and the supper consisted of some fried chicken, by a long shot. When we got back to the house, Billy Hiler was sitting on the porch with a company party, who was introduced to us as the various dames and damsels who had been in the house which was reputed to be haunted and which was the cause of our being there.

Uncle Ben and his friend Smith, of the department, were in the parlor, and Billy Hiler, Sister Jones, Mr. Wesley, myself, Sister Wesley, and the company party were on the porch. We had a very pleasant time, and I was introduced to the company as a man who was a stranger to the place, and who was sent for by the Uncle Ben, Smith, and Billy Hiler, to be the cause of the house being haunted.

The company party consisted of a young man and three young ladies, and they were very pleasant and very much amused at the idea of a man being sent for to make the house haunted. We had a very pleasant time, and I was introduced to the company as a man who was sent for to make the house haunted, and I was introduced to the company as a man who was a stranger to the place, and who was sent for by the Uncle Ben, Smith, and Billy Hiler, to be the cause of the house being haunted. THE WORK OF BUSYBODIES.

Fulmination of Movement to Rush Into Nordica Tariff Revision.

Hot blows of the tariff as the "Nordica opportunity" is imputed by the "Washington correspondence of various newspapers" to the administration as an accepted policy.

The alleged necessity of doing something at once to control the plums of the Ways and Means group for Republicans. There is to be "no general revision." It is said, but there is to be an investigation of schedules, and there may be certain changes affecting the "sugar" and "tin" things, and in some cases, also, in the extra sugar. It seems.

Such talk endangers prosperity every the administration backers who are always thrown to the surface by any disturbing party movement, and who are now so much in evidence as subordinate branches of politics at Washington but are not concerned in revision or the administration.

The President unfortunately commits to the last two letters, under cover of the four years' more than enough, shouting note of intelligence given. He has not so much of a mandate as he thinks. Thirty-six states in all voted for and put into power the Harrison party and long stand. The President misinterprets the Nordica election. Harrison lost 37 electoral votes in the states of Cleveland's 1884 victory. Harrison lost 1,000,000 popular votes. He would be wrong to let the tariff strings alone. Next?

Nordica's election was a local victory, a result of local conditions, and a protest against the Harrison administration. It was not a verdict on the schedule of tariff rates.

The President, for a time, will be under a pressure for action on the tariff, and the Republican party will be under a pressure to keep its hands off. The President is sufficiently a politician to know that the tariff question is a dangerous one for the Republican party, and he will be slow to open it. He is not a tariff reformer, and he is not a tariff tinker. He is a tariff protectionist, and he will be slow to open the tariff question, and he will be slow to let it open.

SCHOOL PAPER.

Some Hindrances to the Success of the Schools and How to Remove Them

(Paper read at the Normal "Lay" by Mrs. Barnes.)

Kind Friends and Fellow Workers:

The subject which this evening falls to me, and which I shall speak upon very briefly, is of such a nature that what I shall say may seem material, as it really always the case, when we talk to people concerning what we may consider to be their duty.

But I do not wish my remarks to be of that nature, but merely a plain statement of the difficulties which we, as teachers, encounter in doing our work; and more especially, if we earnestly try to do our work faithfully and well.

My experience as a teacher has been gained during many years of work in the school room, and so it may safely be allowed that I have personal knowledge of the hindrances to be met with by the teacher in a faithful discharge of the duties of the profession.

The hindrances of which I am about to speak, are not of a local character, but are met everywhere, although they are more in evidence in some districts than in others.

My remarks will be addressed partly directly to the patrons of the schools, for with them, and them alone, lies the power to remove the hindrances to the success of the school, and secure the results resulting therefrom always supposing of course, that the teacher is fully in earnest, and a faithful doing his part.

The first and greatest drawback, to the success of the school, and to the resulting gain to the whole community is irregular attendance, for, however, it is impossible for any teacher, no matter what his attainments or zeal may be, to awaken and sustain an interest in the minds of the pupils who are present one day and absent the next, or one week, are present one day, and absent three.

They fall behind the rest of the pupils in their classes, find it impossible to regain their former places, become discouraged themselves, and are a drag upon those who are at school regularly. And the results of all this is, The young grow up in Zeno ignorance of the things they ought to learn, and would learn if they were kept in school regularly, and until the last term of the proper age to leave school. And the ignorant person, and particularly the ignorant man, is a menace to the best interests of the community. He knows nothing of the duties of the citizen which devolve upon him when he is twenty one, whether he is fitted to discharge them or not.

Then consider the case of the pupils who are in the habit of being tardy. Then note the time which they need to be giving to their lessons, they detain the rest of the scholars and the teacher who have settled down in quiet for the work of the forenoon, then from habits of laziness, and carelessness, are a bane everywhere, which habits cling to them throughout their whole lives and make them a nuisance to the people who realize that time is money, and punctuality a cardinal virtue in the business world.

Now, the remedy for both of these evils lies entirely with the patrons of the schools, the teacher being a factor of little or no importance in this matter. Now, friends you have worked hard for the money to keep up these schools, but do you not see that if your children are not present to obtain the benefit of it, that your hard earned money is wasted so far as their advancement? And your children are robbed, you actually robbed of the advantages which belong to them, which you have paid for, and robbed too, when they are too young, and have too little judgment to realize what they are losing. But parents are expected to exercise judgment for them at this period of their lives, and if they fail to do so, are they not failing in one of the first and most important of their duties?

What does it matter whether the patrons personally like the teacher very well or not, or whether the children like him or her? If he is a person of the character and attainments that it behoves him to be a teacher at all, if he advances the pupils in the path of knowledge, if he gives them that output which helps them to appreciate their duties, and to do them, he is worthy of loyal support, and it is your plain duty to stand by him in his work.

Do not, as you value the welfare of your children, listen to the little complaints, which may have absolutely no foundation in fact, or may be so distorted as to appear entirely different from the reality. Your children are not likely to be injured in the least, and even if they should meet with a little injustice at the hands of the teacher, the injury is as nothing, in the merest trifle in comparison with that which you, yourselves inflict upon them, by taking them of their school time, which, once wasted can never be regained. Is your duty in this matter less on considerations of spite or prejudice, or greed of gain, stand in the way of the everlasting welfare of your child. Send him to school regularly, and send him on time, and by so doing you will train him in the business habits of work, thrift, and punctuality, that will be worth dollars to him in his future life when he has his own way to earn in the world.

The second and next greatest trouble that we meet in this section, and all of the children come to school with habits of idleness and its sufficient, which habits are the direct result of the lack of training in the home. Pupils who have never been required to work except when they felt so inclined, but might run about as they pleased, no matter what was to be done at home, are not apt to take kindly to steady hard work in school. And nothing else but hard, steady work is the result aim with which to perform the work required of both the pupil and the teacher, if progress is to be made, if the work of the grades is to be accomplished, and the pupil make a creditable record during his school life.

Next, allow me to speak in regard to disobedient habits. Children who are accustomed to obey their parents, or not to do so, according to their own sweet will, are always rebellious when they are required to conform to the strict discipline that must be enforced if the school room is to be a place of orderly game of work and training in morals, manners and morals, as it should be, and not a circus according to the amusement of the idle and the lawless.

We have all learned that our most so many things that are hard and disagreeable, and most serious from doing things that might be pleasant to us, but duty lowers such a course is for our own best good, and also to our fellow man. Some of the pupils on the children who come to school have never been accustomed to do anything that to willfully please the teacher, regardless of their own good, and of the rights of others. Consequently, when in school, they are accustomed to do something contrary to their own wishes, or to refrain from doing something which they wish to do, they will let the teacher all concerned that they do not have to do the one, nor refrain from the other. Then comes trouble. They must be compelled to conform to the reasonable rules of the school, or all else suffer, and with it, the usefulness of the school, are at an end.

Now, when the parents uphold the lawlessness manifested by their children, and either remove them from school altogether, or make such remarks as cause them to be early, discouraged, and rebellious, and so prevent them from receiving the benefit that they should receive from their school.

In this manner the young people are taught to have no regard for law or for the rights of others, with a tendency for the extravagance of the home, the school, the church or the state. They become a set of make and remake boodlers, with to some of dangerous tendencies, a danger to the community, a nuisance to all sensible citizens, a disgrace to their respective families, and unless something alien like a miracle intervenes to prevent it, they graduate into the reformatories and the prisons of the state.

Now friends, patrons, the remedy lies with you, urge, almost entirely demand strict obedience from your children, from their earliest years, uphold the teacher when he demands the same strict obedience, keep your children in school until they are of the proper age to leave it, and then good habits of industry, obedience, and respect for law and order, will have become fixed, and when your children become of mature age, they will not depart from those good ways. And to do these things is "Your Duty" as parents and persons on the schools; and our schools are the safeguard of our liberties.

The Colonel's Waterloo

Colonel John M. Fuller, of Honey Grove, Texas, nearly met his Waterloo from Liver and Kidney trouble. In recent letter, he says: "I can easily ward of these complaints, which, although I tried my family doctor, he did me no good; so I got a bottle of your great Electric Bitters, which cured me. I consider them the best medicine, regardless of their own good, and of the rights of others. Consequently, when in school, they are accustomed to do something contrary to their own wishes, or to refrain from doing something which they wish to do, they will let the teacher all concerned that they do not have to do the one, nor refrain from the other. Then comes trouble. They must be compelled to conform to the reasonable rules of the school, or all else suffer, and with it, the usefulness of the school, are at an end.

Now, when the parents uphold the lawlessness manifested by their children, and either remove them from school altogether, or make such remarks as cause them to be early, discouraged, and rebellious, and so prevent them from receiving the benefit that they should receive from their school.

INSURANCE

IS YOUR PROPERTY INSURED

against loss by FIRE if not, why not? Thousands of business properties and dwellings as good as yours are destroyed by fire in the United States every year involving the loss of millions of dollars. Why should you expect yours to escape them year to year? Its true it costs money but it pays—and when you buy Insurance see that you get good Insurance. It costs no more in most cases to insure in a good company than a poor one. If you are interested in insurance let me know. I write insurance for good, strong companies, companies that have been tried and stood the test. I give my entire attention to the business.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Boat on Wednesday morning last to Mr. and Mrs. John Green an eleven pound girl.

The following morning Feb. 21, Mr. and Mrs. Hanover of the U. I. I. Co's camp had a newcomer, a six and a half pound girl.

The Masonic ball given Feb. 22 by Mr. and Mrs. R. McCafferty was a complete success socially and otherwise over one hundred and eight numbers being sold. A beautiful supper was served at the Beaver Hotel and sold aught.

Capt. Watts on the Beaver Queen is in St. James hother very ill with chronic nephritic disease of the heart. He was been laying in his berth all winter till recently which is loaded up on the way in Indian Harbor charlevoix island.

On Monday morning the B. I. I. R. R. had quite a wreck. The train was being pushed ahead of the engine when the front one left the track, before the locomotive could be stopped all the cars were piled up and three of them pretty badly smashed. Fortunately no one was hurt.

On Saturday Feb. 25, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hooker of Greenstown joined the procession and made another gap in the population weighing two pounds. We think this a sign of an early spring. Certainly good growing weather for girls right now. All mothers and daughters doing well.

Our mail was lost quite a time going and back to the Beaver on Satur day night. They came as far as one of the Island when they reached a drift 8 to 10 feet wide in cross. They followed along in the drifting till they could find a place possible to make a crossing, they were at the head of the Island. They reached Johnny Green's camp about half o'clock Saturday night where they spent the remainder of the night before coming home the following day. For the forest they take we feel that our mail carriers do not get pay enough for their job.

Pa and Mrs. Wilkinson gave a kindergarten party for grown people to about thirty of their friends on Saturday evening. The "kids" had a great time playing "ring around the Rosy" "Stage Coach" "Fire" "Ghost" etc. At about 2oclock refreshments were served.

Mr. Ed. Gillespie and Miss Hattie Bailey easily carried off first honors among the ladies and Mrs. W. J. Gallagher second. It only lacked one vote of being a tie among the men. Capt. Bonner winning out by one vote, John Stevens second twenty before 22 oclock. Strawberry Sundays were served with fruit punch and the party got home in time for work day.

H. F. MOELLER,

He Age is Over a Century.

Unsurrounded by any kith or kin, "Uncle" Dan Whipple of Traverse City Wednesday celebrated his 109th birthday. Although his hair is white, his eyes clear and with his stout staff, he is able to walk distances that would make many a younger man hesitate.

"Uncle" Dan as he is familiarly known for far and near, has resided in Traverse City for the winter and every day, in fair weather, when the weather is so seen on the streets.

His constant companion is a much blackened clay pipe and this he continually smokes. Ever since he can remember, he says, his pipe has been his companion and when for a great tragedy has clouded the centenarian's life, "Uncle" Dan says he is happy because he is contented. Old age has brought but few wants, just the ever increasing ache in the G. A. R. post and a few friends with whom to discuss the weather these are all.

Daniel Whipple was born in Franklinville, Cattaraugus county, New York on a homestead, March 1, 1796.

The great tragedy in his life came when he was but a young man. He fell in love with the beautiful daughter of a homesteader in the west and his love was reciprocated. They were engaged to be married, but shortly before the day of the wedding, on his return from a hunting trip, he found the cabin in ruins and the family stiffed. With some friends he found the trail of the Indians and many came up with the band. The girl was in their possession and with divine tenets the Indians used her for a shield. In fear that they would kill the girl if attacked, the frontiersmen held their fire only to have the Indians lay the girl on the ground and then drove a stake through her breast. Crazed with grief, Whipple and his companions made an attack only to be captured. They subsequently made their escape and from that day on Whipple was their most implacable foe. He does not remember how many "good Indians" his rifle made. This is the only portion of his life upon which he is reticent.

—E. E. Shaner, of Manchelinn was in town Tuesday.

—The attendance at the Epworth church at 4 p. m. Sunday.

—Rev J. P. Dunham, of Norwood is sick with Lagrippe.

—H. J. McNeil came down across the bridge on his new rig Tuesday.

—The editor of the East Jordan Herald made us a pleasant call Monday.

—Geo. Buttars, keeper at Cat Head light house, is the guest of his brother Hon. A. Buttars.

—Mrs. Emma Cole who has been sick for the past three weeks is able to be out.

—Hon. Fell is one Cayway at the high school room next Wednesday evening. Admission 25c, children 20c.

—The ladies of the Congregational church will hold their New England Supper at the church parlors on Wednesday evening, March 22d. Tickets 20c.

—Judge Mayne, who is at Honolulu, N. Y., wired yesterday morning that his mother had just passed away. The Judge will probably not return home for a week yet.

—The SENTINEL job office has received a consignment of new and up-to-date type, and will be more on the opening of navigation, with other material for doing first class work.

—Geo. Smith has bought the Ed Chalupka interest in the ice ferry line, and is building a second boat to put on the route. It is his intention to have a boat leave each dock every fifteen minutes.

—Married at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Henry Clark, on Saturday morning by Rev. J. W. Vickers, Howard Fairbanks of Marion, to Miss Annie Clark of Charlevoix. The young couple will commence housekeeping at a pleasant home on the farm of Henry Gernert, Marion.

—The new local Salvation Army administration has leased the Fagan store recently occupied by the M. W. A. gymnasium, and will use it as a hall for their meetings. They will give a social opening Saturday evening. They will hold meetings morning, afternoon and evening on Sunday. They invite all to attend their meetings.

—The C. C. D. club departed from their usual method of entertainment last Thursday evening by giving a chafing dish party. Welsh rarebit, hot cocoa, cocoa, fudges, etc., composed the bill of fare, and the dishes concocted by those of the club who are domestically inclined were praised and enjoyed to the limit. The failure of that fat man Bill Monday night of this week, when Frank P. Brown gallantly gave the girls a day trip, it was a joyful and they have decided to draft a "card of thanks" and present it to Mr. Brown for providing such a delightful trip. Mr. Brown himself chaperoned the party, and says he is thankful now to be alive.

Thirty Six years.

Just thirty six years ago this week the goldsmiter of this paper walked into Pine River (now Charlevoix), with a satchel on his back, the material for the little printing office having preceded him on a gang of logging cattle, the sank practically from Traverse City.

During the earlier years of the SENTINEL existence it encountered many steep hills, traversed many dark deserts of discouragement, and crossed many turbulent streams. Indeed, the difficulties encountered in keeping the little paper going seemed at times insurmountable. There is probably no paper in the Pine Lake region that ever fought so many battles against adversity to establish itself as did the SENTINEL the first ten years of its life. There were many times when the publisher seriously considered throwing up the enterprise and returning to the vocation of a journeyman printer.

But the nine years dragged slowly and the tide was turned, and the SENTINEL to-day is one of the best paying country weeklies in Northern Michigan. The prosperous condition of the SENTINEL is due to the work of Dr. Mary Wilkins, who was with the paper during the most of its existence, and who has been operating quite extensively in this vicinity for several years.

—Master Clarence Wood has recently completed the decorative work on a handsome book case, that exhibits a remarkable talent. It is of the barrel wood class of art, and is really a beautiful piece of work.

—Cavany's crayon sketches are revelations of beauty and artistic-ness sense is evolved from another under his deft strokes with wonderful rapidity. Landscape is changed to marine, daylight to moonlight, bleak winter to the glories of summer, dead paper and dull canvas to glowing pictures.—Ex.

—The Charlevoix Concert Band will give a concert at the high school room Friday evening of this week under the auspices of the high school. As the latter's share of the proceeds go into the senior course fund and help to make up a possible deficit, the concert should be well patronized, to say nothing of the good work of helping the band along in exactly the line of its existence. The SENTINEL has never waivered, notwithstanding the fact that to its early life the controlling business element of Charlevoix was overwhelmingly democratic. The SENTINEL withstood boodle, bribery and threats from all sides, but we are proud to say these same democrats, notwithstanding the SENTINEL's stand, have come to its rescue when help was needed to keep it alive.

We may be wrong, but we believe the opinion that the SENTINEL has earned an easy old age. It has fought more battles than any paper north of Traverse City, and has always been courteous and considerate in its position.

We believe the SENTINEL is entitled to the support of the people of Charlevoix and its contiguous territory. It is proud of its age and proud of its record. Its patronage is now on the sturdy side of life, and while it may have made mistakes, now and then in the course of its career, it has never deliberately wronged any man, woman or child.

The Northwest Electric Road.

Touching the matter of an electric road from Charlevoix to Northwood, there is a feature that deserves serious consideration.

There is not an acre of farming land within five miles of the proposed line that would not increase in value by reason of the success of the road.

This being the case the business men of both places will be very reasonably benefited, as the farmers are the backbone and mainstay of the region.

Further farmers especially will reap a generous share in the advance in the value of the land they own. Few users dream they at once toward the project two dollars will return to a hundred for argument to grow was expected.

The proposition has been not satisfied and no pro-rated the road is to be operated in fare and passenger and freight rates the operation of every farmer along the line.

Northwood people are in dead earnest about the road. Their committee was here Monday to canvass with our board of commerce, and plan how now has the matter in the consideration.

Of course, the project involves the alternate building of the road to Traverse City, a result that would naturally follow the Charlevoix-Northwood proposition.

We hope Charlevoix will join with Northwood in this important enterprise.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
Rev. James Hodges, Pb. D., Pastor.

There was a fine congregation present last Sunday morning to hear the fourth sermon in the series on "Great Perspectives" the subject was "Man in Perspective." In the evening the congregation was large to listen to Mrs. Benjamin, State President of the W. C. T. U. Mrs Benjamin gave a most clear and logical address on that coming moral subject into prominence.

Evangelistic meetings are being held each evening this week with the help of Rev. John Hill, Jackson. The spirit and interest of the meetings grows. The attendance should be larger. Mr. Hill is a forceful speaker.

Next Sunday morning the subject will be "The Bible in Perspective". In the evening there will be a Lenten Gospel Meeting in the M. E. church and if there is good interest other meetings will be continued during the week. Christ's church is good spiritual awakening and a vigorous quickening of the Social Conscience.

About Cupid—Broken Hearthgiver.

Capt. J. N. Gallagher, formerly master of the big Boyne which was burned at this port last season, has signed at least seals on the steamer Emma Stoffel, which is tied up at the ice bridge. The contract for the season has been signed by Capt. Gallagher and he has received instructions from H. F. Moller, master of the boat, to prepare to fit out at this port. The entire crew for the Winkelles for all of the minor positions on the boat, will be hired by Mr. Gallagher at once in order that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the navigation season for the Winter.

The Winkelles is one of the largest of the middle class of freighters with a total tonnage on Lakes Huron and Michigan of 1000 and that fact is regarded as a good one.

Capt. Gallagher recently passed the examination before the steamboat inspectors at Milwaukee and was given master papers for Inland Duluth, Chicago and Buffalo.

Practically the only matter in the upper peninsula which is open the year around is that at "Ontonagon." There has not been a time that vessels have been able to get into that port without the slightest difficulty, and consequently the carriers have not been subject to delays of that sort. Each other harbors on Lake Michigan have suffered from ice blockades.

NORWOOD NEWS.

The mercury was just zero saturday morning.

Mrs. A. K. Stafford of Charlevoix is here visiting friends.

Martha Bellinger of Charlevoix, is visiting Lenol Valentine at Norwood.

The crows and blue jays are singing and it begins to look like spring.

The Fisk sisters, who were to give an entertainment at Norwood on the 17th of March, have postponed their performance to a later date, due notice of which will be given.

Every thing in connection with the rail road project looks favorable. We have about $12000 signed, and will make it $20000 or more in the township. Charlevoix is interested in the matter and we have no doubt will do their full share. We have another meeting Wednesday evening and on Wednesday evening March 22nd one at the Hinton school house.

Mrs. Margery Brown died at Ellsworth on Friday last. Margery Brent was born near Bellingham and Aug 7th, 1848 and came with her parents to Canada 1856. She was married to William Brown July 1st 1866. They moved to Norwood 1880, and located on a farm in Banks, about 2 miles from here. Her husband died about 7 or 8 years ago. Mrs. Brown moved to Ellsworth; last fall with her son Henry and died at the home of her daughter Mrs Holmes. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and was loved and respected by all.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The county normal class, with Miss Hines and Miss Tuft, made a very satisfactory visit last Tuesday to Mrs. Marsh's school on the Norwood road. On their return a short stop was made at Miss Metcalf's school. Both visits give the opportunity for actual acquaintance with rural school conditions and cannot too be helpful to normal students and teachers.

At the general meeting of the Charlevoix teachers and county normal students last Saturday afternoon, committees were appointed to confer with patrons of the schools, especially mothers, on the advisability of inaugurating a "home garden" plan for children during the summer vacation. This would furnish useful and instructive occupation that could be followed by a flower and vegetable exhibition in September. Incidentally the beautifying of our town through a systematic plan of flower gardening would do much to enhance the reputation of Charlevoix and supplement the work of the Board of Commerce.

The local oratorical contest will be held at the High School on Friday evening, March 24th. Crawford Hosenbrugh, Earl Bartnier and John Pelham will contest for the honor of representing the Charlevoix Schools at the district contest to be held in Ludington on April 14. Mr. Kane, Mrs. Weeks and W. A. Smith, have been chosen as judges of thought and composition, and Judge Mayne, Dr. Hydorn and Rev. Vickers, on delivery. A small admission fee will be charged to pay expenses of the successful contestants to the district contest. This is the first year that Charlevoix has entered the district contest. The other schools entering the year are probably Bellaire, Central City, Traverse City, Ludington and perhaps Ewart and Gaylord.

Some of the high school girls in the botany class had never seen a bean growing. Which leaves the home they are from. This might be expected in a large city but it suggests that a home garden might be an expedient to teach things not found in books.

Why wouldn't it be a good thing for the Board of Commerce, or the Board of Education, or both, to offer prizes for the finest garden, flowers, and vegetables grown by pupils of the Charlevoix schools during the summer vacation? Is there any better way to interest every family in village improvement?

About Sugar Beets.

Considering it a certainty that sugar beets will again be a Charlevoix supply commodity, we publish the following:

At his Annadale farm, one mile north of Grandville, last year Lester Bridge planted an acre to sugar beets. He has now been guaranteed to him that this is one of the most profitable crops a farmer can plant in rotation with general farming.

After deducting the cost of seed and freight to Holland, a carload of beets containing 20,240 pounds brought him $97.52. Against this is charged for planting, harrowing, marking, sowing, thinning, polling, and hoeing on the acre, $11, giving a net return of $86.52 for the acre of beets. To this ship, he added $4.50 additional, giving a total profit of $91.02, for the charge against the crop is listed $6.75 for seed. This was sufficient for planting three acres, and at a third of the seed was used. In the crop was nineteen tons and 5000 pounds, giving a return of $5.70 a ton grown. The percentage of sugar in the beets was 15.6.

It is the opinion of Mr. Bridge that by using the proper seed and a good seed and rich that sugar beets are the most profitable growth for the farmer.

"It is a great mistake," he says, "to let the thinning go until the beets get too large, as when this work is done at the proper time the expense is not one quarter of what it will be when the beets become large. After thinning it is no more trouble to take care of sugar beets than it is a crop of corn—preparing the harrowing is properly done, all weeds killed before planting and the weeds thoroughly used after planting and kept in use as long as is possible without rooting up the beets."

(Central Lake Torch) E. W. Lindsay has sold his horse in this village to Williams of Charlevoix, who expects to move here during the present year.

The Slavery of Sin.

John 8:31-36.

Golden Text.—Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.—John 8:34.

Jesus is still at the Temple in Jerusalem at the Feast of Tabernacles. The narrative is broken, in the older version by the interpolation of the incident of the woman who was brought to him accused of adultery, which is placed in a new light in the revised version, which places it in the temple, and the incident of the woman who was brought to him is omitted in Jesus. He is still addressing the crowd, which "had believed on him" (verse 30), but which John does not include in his report of his talk (John 12:44).

The Truth of Christ's Teaching.

Jesus spoke as one accustomed to be heard, as indeed he was, for years and years he had been the chief teacher in the temple. A teacher who is not heard is no teacher at all. Jesus was a teacher whose teaching was heard, and he was accustomed to be heard. He was a teacher who was heard because he was a teacher who was accustomed to be heard. He was a teacher who was heard because he was a teacher who was accustomed to be heard. He was a teacher who was heard because he was a teacher who

DANGER IN PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Proof That Orator Showers Audience With Microbes.

Recent experiments in Germany recall the fairly late of the princess whose words turned into toads as they dropped from her mouth. If our news switch that a public speaker could turn from his mark with his every utterance a shower of bacteria, and with equal force be sadder than plentifully over the room in which he speaks. In Marvin Dyson's new novel that a loud speaker distributes infinite drops of his saliva in a disease of fevers. But the presence of these drops may be traced by means of the specific microbes that they contain. In further uses this test as a gauge of air contamination when we organic or germ impurities. That educational problem for the ventilation of crowded assembly halls, in addition, one proper help speculating on the possibility that a diseased orator might thus infect an audience because his audience.

A Complimentary Consideration.

A New York publisher has a reputation for supposing the humorous paragraphs and repartees in the Kansas City Journal are the happy in what he wants, and he stocks the joke letter chiefly on some good thing. Just the same it is left of the fact that so sensible a lady publisher when he sent one will his wife to an unusually handsome woman.

Not long ago she came into his office, where she expected one of her husband's friends, and asked the about, necessarily, she was not in up after long a bright little lady who had gone into her. She asked for Mr. Jones.

"Why shall I say wanted to see him, please?" he inquired.

"Tell his wife she regrets" the lady's at her to correct her error and proceed to explain.

"Why, good, I'll tell him," he said, and he did. "A lady was in to see you that says he has no time in Indianapolis."

Didn't Notice It.

She was tall, lean, lady little more than half of a dressing dissatisfied with her hat and asking her if it looked well on her. The hat was a trimmed with many flowers and the lady was dressed in the latest fashion. She was a stranger to the lady in the store, who was sure that she had seen it before somewhere. The lady was quite sure that she had seen it before somewhere. The lady was quite sure that she had seen it before somewhere. The lady was quite

CONGRESS

The Senate on Friday agreed to the conference report on the Indian post office, army and sundry civil appropriation bills. A partial report from the conferees on the army and further conference on the Indian and District of Columbia bills was presented and the usual conferences continued. In the Senate so far for the session the appropriations of the Fifty-second congress have been exceeded by about $1,000,000 and you remember what a row we had over that. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction at West Point of an officers' mess to cost $50,000 and which is now in the hands of the House committee on appropriations. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Kansas City, which Bailey claims is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Omaha, which Kinkaid claims is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Cincinnati, which Foraker says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Cleveland, which Hanna says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Toledo, which Brown says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Detroit, which Burrows says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Chicago, which Cullom says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Senate has passed a bill for the construction of a new post office at Milwaukee, which Spooner says is the worst place he knows of for a post office, and which will probably be passed by the House. The Need of Good Roads.

According to the report of the good roads commission the people of Illinois have spent approximately $[illegible] on their wagon roads during the last twenty-five years, and yet these roads are in little better condition now than they were twenty-five years ago.

Obviously there has been a great waste, which is ascribable to the haphazard methods of a temporary-lived, young, community and its neglect of a scientific study of the road problem. Owing to that weakness, egregious errors have been made when there was the least suspicion of some great expenditure of hard material just been and for satisfaction, with the evident intention of getting big returns, only to prove that labor and materials were thrown away. The fact has been found that no means of good industrial property applied upon a thoroughly defined foundation of natural soil will make a better and more lasting road than two or three feet of hard material carelessly placed upon an ill-travel foundation, as was the custom of too many road builders of the golden fifties—in fact, of too many of the present time.

Illinois good roads efforts, however, are indicative of some realization of the immense importance of good roads which is now felt as it should be throughout the country because the people can get along somehow, thanks to their natural advantages. "The American farmer is the only one in the civilized world who is rich enough to afford the luxury of mud roads" declares the report, "and it is safe to say that they cost him, directly and indirectly, twice as much as permanent hard roads would cost him under a reasonable system of state and government aid."

Such aid is justified by the value of the roads to all business interests and to all the people, and the commission suggests that in Illinois the state should pay one-half, the county one-fourth and the township one-fourth of the cost of constructing improved roads. "Let carry out its ideas it has prepared a bill that provides for a state board to serve without compensation and for the appointment of a secretary and a state engineer who shall work under the direction and control of this state commission and who shall be paid for their services.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

March 8th 1905

At the regular meeting of the common council of the village of Charlevoix, held on the above date, the following members were present: Trustees, O. E. Wallace, Wm. Poole, A. E. Cross, N. H. Washburn and Clerk Dale Shanahan. Absent, F. W. Gardner and P. D. Campbell and R. W. Miller.

On motion by A. E. Cross seconded by Wm. Poole, the following resolution was adopted by yes and nay vote as follows: Yeas all.

Resolved that the village attorney be and is hereby instructed to prepare a new contract with Henry Buchanan of Hillsdale, Mich., embodying the same terms and conditions as in the contract executed and adopted by the village council on the 20th day of June A. D. 1904 with such changes as follows. That the plant be installed and current furnished on or before June 1st 1905, the time for acceptance of said contract by Henry Buchanan to be extended from the 1st day of Charlevoix [illegible] new Sterling boiler necessitated by reason of not current not being furnished by June 1st 1905, according to the proposition submitted by letter by Henry Buchanan prior to this date. And the President and Clerk are hereby instructed to execute said contract in behalf of the village of Charlevoix on of the 8th day of March A. D. 1905.

On motion by N. H. Washburn seconded by Wm. Poole, the following resolution was adopted by a yes and nay vote as follows: Yeas all.

Resolved that the Clerk and is hereby instructed to draw a warrant on the village depository for the sum of $[illegible] to pay an order drawn on the highway fund for the purpose of paying the line order held by Evangeline Township for their share of the interest.

On motion the council then adjourned.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas Dunlevy gave a progressive euchre party on Tuesday night to a number of their friends. W. H. Johnston won 1st prize for the gentlemen and Mrs. Minnie Gibson 1st for the ladies. Capt. McGinn and Mrs. Sophia Dunlevy won the consolation.

M. J. Homer and wife gave a party Saturday evening to about 50 friends. Games and dancing occupied the guests till a late hour, when an elegant lunch was served after which the guests departed for their homes leaving the genial hostess and husband to clean up the Standard of royal entertainers.

Mrs A. M. Wilkinson received a message on Saturday afternoon stating the serious condition of her father in Charlevoix. The doctor pronounced a fog and with John Ingalsbee and Frank Floyd she succeeded in the navigation took his wife and two small children across the lake to Charlevoix the following day where another fog was immediately encountered into service to take them to Petoskey now a third team drove them through to Charlevoix a total distance of over 60 miles reaching Charlevoix by 11:30 that night. Mrs Wilkinson's father was old sore and consequent but died less than two days later. Post mortem examination revealed a case of the liver as the principal cause of his last illness.

The article from Mr. A. E. Cross recorded by Wm. Poole, the following resolution was adopted by yes and nay vote as follows: Yeas all.

Resolved that the village attorney be and is hereby instructed to prepare a new contract with Henry Buchanan of Hillsdale, Mich., embodying the same terms and conditions as in the contract executed and adopted by the village council on the 20th day of June A. D. 1904 with such changes as follows. That the plant be installed and current furnished on or before June 1st 1905, the time for acceptance of said contract by Henry Buchanan to be extended from the 1st day of Charlevoix [illegible] new Sterling boiler necessitated by reason of not current not being furnished by June 1st 1905, according to the proposition submitted by letter by Henry Buchanan prior to this date. And the President and Clerk are hereby instructed to execute said contract in behalf of the village of Charlevoix on of the 8th day of March A. D. 1905.

On motion by N. H. Washburn seconded by Wm. Poole, the following resolution was adopted by a yes and nay vote as follows: Yeas all.

Resolved that the Clerk and is hereby instructed to draw a warrant on the village depository for the sum of $[illegible] to pay an order drawn on the highway fund for the purpose of paying the line order held by Evangeline Township for their share of the interest.

On motion the council then adjourned.

Conrad Schneider, proprietor of the general store, also of the public telephone office and an old gamester, at Bellaire, is preparing to move his family on the farm, one mile east from Horton Bay, which he purchased of Mrs. Mary Wyer last autumn. His wife Hubert and Arthur, will work the farm and Mr. Schneider will continue in charge of the store and office.

Job Hofer, one of the oldest pioneers of Emmet county, was found on the streets of Cross Village Monday after noon, suffering from a severe illness. He was taken to his home where he died a few hours later. The deceased was elected county treasurer for one term in 1888 and has been a prominent democratic politician for many years. He has represented the township of Bonaparte on the board of supervisors for just after year for a long time.

Traverse City Record: Bellaire accounts for the state unemployment of the department of Michigan, to be to be held here on the 24th and 25th of June are now fully under way. Assistant Adjutant General Fayette Wardell of Lansing and Secretary William Dewey of Detroit arrived in the city last evening to confer with Adjutant Jones, No. 18, and make arrangements as to the requirements from the city for the occasion. The certain names met with the post last evening and stated what was necessary for the local committees. It was estimated that at least 600 G. A. R. delegates would be in attendance in addition to the W. R. C. ladies of the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans, also besides other veterans, making a possible crowd of from 800 to 1,000 veterans and ladies.

Cadillac News: At L. Gunter was at Manton not long ago for the purpose of persuading the farmers in that neighborhood to grow seed for the H. M. Pery Seed Company at Detroit. Mr. Cocker was busy, while he was at Manton, and didn't have time for him to return Saturday evening and appear before a grange gathering to present his proposition. Growing seeds for the seed wholesalers has become a profitable side line up in this northern Michigan county and several farmers over in the northwestern corner of this county have been in the seed business for a half dozen years or more. Ten thousand dollars was distributed among the farmers around Central Lake last fall for seeds grown for the H. M. Pery Company, and this last fall being utilized by the men at Manton in the contracts for acreage.

Traverse City Record: Sam Rose, the lake diver from Charlevoix, arrived yesterday and prepared to plunge under the ice on the bay this morning to examine the intake of the city water works. A hole 12 by 20 was cut at about ten feet of water and Mr. Rose well hundred up to with stand the very temperature quickly passed down the pipe where had been placed at his disposal and the men at the air pump kept him in touch with the air as necessary to his existence. He remained down the first time about fifteen minutes and arrived at the hole with a huge cake of ice on his head and couldn't be persuaded to tell where he found it. During the interval, meanwhile he walked towards shore and lounged up against the real thing to see, starting the numerous small boys who had gathered with wide open eyes to see what was going on. It's all right for a man to do down in the deep in such suitable times but it looks rather selfish to watch a man drop out of sight under the edge of a floe of ice suddenly and have but one chance in finding the surface again. The report, which are going on now mean that the purchase of the water by makes the time favorable for clear sight seeing, the ice merely producing a solitude which is more pleasant to work by. Mr Rose says that he never and if they have the fear of his appearance that the small boy lines they will be more scarce here after.

—The Men's meeting, at the Methodist church, on Sunday, after noon was of a very helpful character and much enjoyed by those present. The leader, Rev. Dr. Hastip, brought up a few of the of the specific questions which are now agitating the church and church attendance and these were positively discussed in an informal manner. The hope was expressed that a similar gathering might be held in the near future.

Bids for the erection of the new H. M. Pery seed warehouse are to be opened at the Charlevoix office of the company today. Only six bids were called for, viz: Charlevoix, East Jordan, Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. The contract will call for the completion of the building by June 20th, the structure will be 120x60, and three stories high. It will contain many new features not attempted in the old building, including an automatic sprinkler throughout, for fire protection.

The Board of Commerce has in preparation the copy for an elegant book of Charlevoix views and an explanatory review of the beauties and commercial advantages of Charlevoix the work will be done in Grand Rapids, and it will be a work of art. This book will be unique most works that have appeared from time to time in Northern Michigan, inasmuch as resort attractions are a secondary consideration. The Board of Commerce means that Charlevoix has business attractions of a high order, and this feature will be the leading one. The book is expected to be out some time in April or May.

Capt. P. D. Campbell returned from Washington Friday night. The captain spent a week at the capital, and spent the time profitably, besides taking in the principal sights of Washington, he visited Mount Vernon and stood at the tomb of the father of his country. With the Michigan delegation he visited the white house in special audience and shook the hand of the party to be greeted by the President. The captain says Teddy gave him a good strong grip, and in response to an invitation to visit Charlevoix, replied that nothing could please more. The captain also witnessed the inauguration ceremonies, and the big inaugural procession.

At the Methodist church, Sunday morning, Rev. De Hystop will preach. There will be no evening service owing to the union evangelistic service at the Congregational church at 7 o'clock. Epworth League at 6 p. m. Topic "The Missionary Call. Leader Miss Annie McGuinney.

The Township Caucus.

There are three calls out for independent township caucuses. Republicans, Socialist and Labor, two of which provide for the primary election system. One of the later calls, and withstanding that the party which issues it has done more talking about "primary reform," is for the old fashioned caucus.

The republicans have issued a call for a primary election, and the system will receive a fair test. There are those in Charlevoix who hold strongly to the doctrine that republican caucus and "primary reform" are antagonistic terms, entering the plea that the call should be for a "primary reform" caucus instead of a republican caucus. The republican gentlemen never permits itself to be dominated by one idea politics. It will give a fair hearing to any demand for reform. It has heretofore refused to adopt primary reform or the historical and impractical one, and will adopt measures that prove by their operation that they are for the public good.

Therefore, to give the measure a fair test, locally, the republican committee has made provision for a primary election. Inasmuch as it is possible for a candidate to receive a majority of all the votes cast, it is possible for him to secure a nomination by a plurality, or minority vote. The latter is the rule and not the exception.

It has been tried in various parts of the state and finds many opponents among those who had been its strongest advocates. Inasmuch as it is possible for a candidate to receive a majority of all the votes cast, it is possible for him to secure a nomination by a plurality, or minority vote. The latter is the rule and not the exception.

Inasmuch as it is possible for a candidate to receive a majority of all the votes cast, it is possible for him to secure a nomination by a plurality, or minority vote. The SENTINEL will not recede from its position that the fundamental principle of popular government is violated where a minority does and always rule.

Roosevelt and the S. S. S.

The last morning of the S. S. S. was not altogether a storefront, indeed, the morning dawned, was very little let or hindrance to the sunbeams. The earnest supporters of the Roosevelt ticket were out early as are all practical politicians, and by the time the sun had risen high in the heavens, the streets were fairly filled with people, and the business was the outcome of Capt. Pete Campbell's visit to Washington.

When the late president of the Charlevoix Society went to Washington to secure the accredited representative of the S. S. S., with the function of representation was duly sealed by the society paying for a $2.00 round trip ticket for the Captain. He had certain instructions. He went not only as an ex president of the Society but as an active candidate for the presidency of Charlevoix. Those honors, it was thought, might give him standing at the white house.

And Capt. Pete went, but he had no sooner gone than he joined a bunch of Michigan politicians and the S. S. S. was relegated to the rear. Briefly, Capt. Pete failed utterly fasted—to carry out his instructions. He swaggered around the New Willard Hotel, smuggled himself into the Senate gallery, went through the twenty yards, and wound up by mingling the president at the white house, inviting the chief executive to visit Charlevoix, but studiously avoiding any reference to the Society which sent him to Washington.

The only serious moment in the career days that he spent at the capital city, was when he stood at the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon. This would think that the solemn moment the Captain would think of the obligations resting upon him but not even there did the election of neglected duty take precedence at his soul.

When Roosevelt grasp his hand, not one word from Charlevoix concerning the object of his visit, or the message of good will sent by him by the S. S. S.

Capt. Finnegan moved a vote of censure, and it was unanimously carried and another motion that Capt. Pete refund to the Society the $2.00 paid for the elegant passed without a dissenting vote. It will take some time for the Captain of the Beaver to recover his lost prestige with the Society.

CHARGES ARE LIGHT.

L. P. Fishcrisis Authorities Attack State Game Warden.

A Lansing special says: The investigation of a fight to develop the fraud in the government fishery authorities and the state game warden department, and some ugly charges are made against the latter. The Senator Representative Robinson of Detroit introduced a general bill which contained, among other provisions one to require the federal fish commissioners to report to the state warden department regularly relative to its operations upon the great lakes. A number of other provisions were contained relative to the federal hatchery operations.

Superintendent Frank Clarke of the United States fish hatchery at Sandusky, Ohio, has for several days, and longer, been at Lansing, presumably with a view of direct opposition to that presented by the state warden department. Considerable lobbying is being done among the members in behalf of Clarke's bill and one of his friends said to The Press today.

The game wardens department has always been friendly to the fish hatchery and is now. The old law provides that the government fishery operations can take whitefish and lake trout during the spawning season, strip them of their eggs and fertilize them. It also allows the taking of fish for government purposes during the regular closed season. This necessitates the taking of the fish from the spawning beds.

The first thing the state of Michigan knows the government fishery staff will all of its work upon the great lakes and leave it to the state to continue the work of propagation or let the lakes be entirely depopulated. A few years ago all of the artificial propagation was done by the state at a heavy expense, but when the legislature failed to provide sufficient funds to carry on the work the government stepped in and took up the work. Today we have a dozen state hatcheries upon the lakes. This year the state will plant three hundred million whitefish and sixty million lake trout in the great lakes. Think of it. Suppose we should try to prevent the spawn, minnows and live fries will be thirty million whitefish to grow up and assist in the natural propagation. We do not relish this interference by the game warden department, and if the state leaves the government will throw up its contract altogether and let the state look after its own.

Late Current News.

Former governor Cyrus G. Luce died at his home from Coldwater Sunday.

Secretary of State Hay left for an extended trip Saturday, and has to be in office state of affairs. It is thought that he will soon resign and be succeeded by Judge Taft, now secretary of war.

Latest telegraphic advices from the seat of war state that the command of the Russian army is still making a desperate effort to secure a battle with the victorious Japanese on three flanks and rear.

Central Lake Town.

James Cameron's recent "wrassle" with the grip left him in such a weak condition he did the sensible thing last Tuesday morning when he boarded the cars for the sunny south. Undecided as to his exact destination, he will prospect around till he finds a congenial locality and then probably stay there till after Central Lake gets somewhat warmer than it is at present.

Cable to tie to the Rock of Beaver Island.

The writer is in receipt of official advices that the Charlevoix-Beaver Island cable is to go from Charlevoix to the head of the Island, from thence by land line to Beaver Harbor.

This will not change conditions materially from those involved in original plans. The Weather Bureau station will be at the church property, and continue to the harbor.

We are also informed that the cable will probably be laid in August or September. The change in plans was made, probably, with a view of enabling a display station at the Head lighthouse, which is a lesson very much to be desired, as it will give the island two display stations, and very much reduce the expense of the cable connections.

The change will also give Charlevoix direct telephone connection with the island cable to be laid as with the latter. It will also give St. James communication with the head lighthouse, which will be of incalculable benefit to both points.

The only unfavorable feature is that of the difficulty of keeping the Beaver Island line up during the winter, but that difficulty will probably be overcome.

The government and Beaver Island will be connected by telephone before Oct. 1st, 1905, and that is enough.

A letter letter from Mr. J. H. Hodgsons, chief of the telegraph division of the Weather Bureau states that he is busy at work on the specifications, and will have them ready next week. The beds for manufacturing the cable will be opened April 20th, and the contract awarded shortly after that. Mr Hodgsons states that he hopes to have the cable laid by Sept. 10th, and that he will be here July 1st.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hastings, Ph. D., Pastor.

The Evangelistic meetings held last week were very interesting and helpful, the attendance increased gradually and all who heard Rev. George Hill of Indiana were much pleased with his very earnest presentation of the gospel in simple language. The morning meeting at the M. E. Church Sunday evening was well attended and a very helpful one.

The men's meeting at the M. E. Church Sunday afternoon drew together about 80 men and the discussion of the topic, "Men and the Church" was earnest and thorough.

Next sunday morning an exchange of pulpits will be had between Rev. W. Vickers and Rev. James Hastings.

In the evening there will be another union evangelistic meeting addressed by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Vickers.

LESSON FOR MARCH 19, 1905

Healing of the Man Born Blind. John 9:1-11.

Golden Text—I am the light of the world—John 9:5.

His disciples (of Jesus) should be studied strictly as object lessons concerning spiritual truth. When Jesus prevailed had it was to teach men that He is the source of supply for all our needs and that the Heaven to be Blessed for life. When he healed the sick or the crippled, it was to teach men that He can heal wounds souls and can give health and form to our spiritual bodies. After he had been weakened and tired by sin. When He gave hearing to the deaf it was to teach men that if He would open their ears so that they can hear and recognize the voice of our Father. When He gave sight to blind eyes it was to implore the truth that He is the light of our world.

Verse Twelve says the man before Christ could not know Him and neither knew where He was able to see Him or not. Verse Twelve says that man was one who was blind from birth. Verse Twelve says that the man was called Jesus, and anointed mud on the man's eyes and said unto him, Go wash in the pool of Siloam. So he went and washed and came seeing. Verse Twelve says the man said unto them, Where is He? He said, I know not. Verse Twelve says they brought to the Pharisees the man that aforetime was blind. Verse Twelve says that the Pharisees also asked him how he received his sight. Verse Twelve says that he said unto them, He put mud upon my eyes, and I washed, and do see. Verse Twelve says that the Pharisees said unto him, This man is not of God because he keeps not the Sabbath day. Verse Twelve says that others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? Verse Twelve says that there was a division among them. Verse Twelve says that they said unto the blind man, What sayest thou of Him that hath opened thy eyes? He said, He is a prophet. Verse Twelve says that the Jews did not believe that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of the man that had received his sight. Verse Twelve says that the parents said unto them, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind. Verse Twelve says that they said unto them, We know not how he now sees, or who hath opened his eyes. Verse Twelve says that they said, He is of age, ask him. Verse Twelve says that the Pharisees called the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise. Verse Twelve says that he said, Whether He be a sinner I know not. Verse Twelve says that he said, I know not. Verse Twelve says that he said, I know that I was blind and now I see. Verse Twelve says that they said unto him, What did He to you? How opened He your eyes? Verse Twelve says that he said, I have told you already, and you did not hear. Verse Twelve says that they said, Why do you desire to hear it again? Verse Twelve says that they said, Be thou his disciple. Verse Twelve says that they said, We are Moses' disciples. Verse Twelve says that we know that God spoke unto Moses. Verse Twelve says that he said, Why, this is a marvelous thing that you know not from where He is, and yet He has opened my eyes. Verse Twelve says that we know that God hears not sinners. Verse Twelve says that he said, Since the world began it was not known that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind. Verse Twelve says that he said, If this man was not of God he could do nothing. Verse Twelve says that they said unto him, Thou art wholly born in sins, and dost thou teach us? Verse Twelve says that they cast him out. Verse Twelve says that Jesus heard that they had cast him out, and when He had found him He said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God? Verse Twelve says that he said, Who is he, Lord, that I may believe on Him? Verse Twelve says that Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen Him, and it is He that talketh with thee. Verse Twelve says that he said, Lord, I believe. Verse Twelve says that he worshipped Him.

MISS FLORENCE KENAH

This Pretty Girl Saved From Catarrh of the Lungs By Pe-ru-na

"A few months ago I caught a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and remained there so persistently that I became alarmed. I took medicine without benefit, until my digestive organs became upset, and my head and neck began to ache severely and frequently.

"I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had little faith I try to stick that I was really sick, anything. It brought me blessed relief at once, and I felt that I had the right medicine at last. Within three weeks I was completely restored and have enjoyed perfect health since.

"I now have the greatest faith in Peruna." Florence E. Kenah.

DENNY M. RICH ENDS LIFE

Millionaire Bicycle Owner Fire Which Wiped Out Business.

Denny M. Rich of the Chicago firm of Henry H. Rich & Co., dealers in milling machinery, committed suicide by shooting himself in a room at the New Southern Hotel, Michigan avenue and Thirteenth street. The body of which Mr. Rich was the head carried many financial losses in the fire which destroyed the Browning, Ring & King building last November. His store was on the third floor of the building which was the largest loser in the original and subsequent fires. Since then Mr. Rich has resided with Rudolph Gilbert Arnstein, a bicycle and automobile dealer, who has been a close friend of the deceased for many years. After the fire Mr. Rich and his creditors had come to an agreement at 50 cents and Mr. Arnstein, the bicycle and automobile manager, with certain others, formed the company Mr. Rich had just left when he shot himself. When a search was made for the cause of his depression it was found that the company had lost money on the bicycle and automobile business. A letter addressed to Mr. Arnstein was found in his room.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

New York, Monday, March 6, 1905.

Financial affairs seem to be in a very fair condition.

The market situation continues to improve. Its actions are a portent of the South has expressed confidence in the railway rates as put in effect on all of their transportation facilities, and are handling a very large traffic, preparatory for an early fall movement. The winter wheat is reported in very good condition, and the acreage is reported to be in excess of last year. The corn crop is reported in good condition, which is a very important factor in a prosperous year. The country is now in a position of hope, in contrast with the condition of despair in January and February last. The country is now in a position to enjoy a prosperous year. The cotton crop is in good condition, and the acreage is reported to be in excess of last year. The country is now in a position to enjoy a prosperous year. YOLANDE

BY WILLIAM BLACK

It was a beautiful, clear, still night and round us the lamps on the tiny isles there were seven groups of people who were talking in low tones. As Wilmerhoven passed these he stood for a moment or two, and I felt quite the Antichrist as I watched the eager faces turned toward him. Yolande was leaning back in her chair, and her eyes were half closed, as if she would shut out the world for a while. Mr. Wilmerhoven spoke to Mrs. Ogilvie, and we could see that she was introducing him to her daughter. Yolande opened her eyes and her nostrils dilated as if she had suddenly scented the fragrance of a rose. Then she rose, and we could see that she was introduced to Mr. Wilmerhoven, who bowed and seemed to be regarding her with admiration.

"Yes," said my companion, "Mr. Wilmerhoven is a very good-looking man. Yolande is very fortunate in having such a cavalier."

"Cavalier!" said I, in regarding the tall, pale, dark-haired figure at Mrs. Ogilvie's side. "He looks more like a knight-errant than a cavalier. Yolande looks as if she would like to be his lady-love."

"Yes," said Mr. Wilmerhoven, "that is just what I was thinking. Yolande is a very romantic young lady, and I should think that a knight-errant would be just the thing to please her fancy. Do you know what I was thinking when I first saw her? I was thinking that she looked as if she had been sent to the Nile to find her knight-errant."

"Indeed," said I, "and what sort of a knight-errant do you think she has found?"

"Well," said Mr. Wilmerhoven, "I think that Mr. Wilmerhoven looks as if he would be a very good knight-errant. He looks as if he would be very chivalrous and very faithful. I should think that he would be just the man to make a lady happy who had trusted him with her heart."

"Yes," said I, "I think he would be just the man to make a lady happy who had trusted him with her heart. But I should think that he would be very difficult to win."

"Why do you think so?" said Mr. Wilmerhoven.

"Because," said I, "he looks as if he had been in love with some woman who had deceived him, and who had made him feel that he could never trust any woman again."

"Yes," said Mr. Wilmerhoven, "I should think that would be the effect of such a disappointment. But I should think that he would be very slow to believe that the woman he had loved had deceived him, and I should think that he would be very slow to believe that any woman was false to her word when she had once given it to him."

"I think," said I, "that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that he had been mistaken in his estimate of woman. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal."

"Yes," said Mr. Wilmerhoven, "I think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal."

"Yes," said I, "I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal. I should think that Yolande would be just the woman to make him believe that there are women who are true and faithful and loyal."

SERIOUSLY MENACED

PHILIPPINE COMPETITION WITH DOMESTIC SUGAR.

Should the Efforts of American Farmers to Develop the "Industry" Growing in Country Be Defeated by Unfair Competition for the Far Away Tagalogs?

Before agreeing to a reduction in the tariff on sugar from the Philippines Congress should consider whether or not the interests of the American people or those of the industrious of the Philippines are of sufficient worth of consideration as a proposition.

To make a hearty reduction in the tariff on Philippine sugar would in be just the down to cheapest line with the best sugar industry of all countries? It is altogether possible the Filipinos would be delighted.

In this connection it should be noted that the cheapest transportation available is provided that the Filipinos are engaged in some business directly or indirectly connected with the transportation business. In other words, it would be more economical to the Filipinos to ship their sugar to Chicago than to ship it to Manila. Sugar can be delivered in Chicago from Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, Texas, Colorado, California and other states and countries in the world, and the Filipinos would be obliged to compete with all these countries.

Whatever may be said about the wisdom of the action of the Congress of the Philippines in trying to make sugar, it is a fact that the Philippines have been trying to do it for a long time, and they have not succeeded in a degree worthy of the name. The Philippines have been trying to do it for years, and they have not succeeded in advancement of any consequence.

The idea of the Philippines that the removal of the duty on the raw sugar would necessitate the removal of the duty on the finished product, the industry of the refinery is more than in the production of the industry of the sugar. There are no refineries in the Philippines. There are no refineries on Cuba and Porto Rico. The sugar refiner the raw is derived almost wholly from other countries. Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, Texas, Colorado, California and Utah are the only states in the Union in which sugar is produced.

The idea of the Philippines that the removal of the duty on the raw

PROGRESS OF THE EASTERN WAR.

The battle of Mukden was one of the greatest of the world's history in the number of men engaged, the length of the battle line and the long continuance of the battle. Initially it was the plan of the Japanese to attack the right wing of the Russian line, and by a flank movement cut the Russian line of retreat to Tieling. The Japanese had 200,000 men in the battle and the Russians had 300,000 men. The Japanese had 1,000 guns and the Russians had 1,000 guns. The battle lasted for nine days, or from the 23rd of February to the 1st of March, when the Russians began their retreat to Tieling, leaving the Japanese in possession of the field. The Japanese lost 20,000 men and the Russians lost 30,000 men. The Japanese claim to have captured 20,000 Russians, 50 guns and 50 machine guns. The Russian retreat was a disorderly one, and they left behind them a great quantity of stores and munitions of war. The Japanese have not been able to follow the Russians because of the condition of the roads, which are impassable for artillery and cavalry. The Japanese have occupied Mukden and are now in pursuit of the Russians.

SPECIAL SESSION.

In the course of the Senate debate Wednesday on the Dominican treaty Senator Bacon, of Georgia, made an extended statement in favor of the conservation of Far Dominican. He charged the action of the Senate committee with the intention of the Senate committee to make the Senate a mere agent of the executive. Senator Spooner, Senator Lodge and others of prominence, taking the State Department's information concerning the Dominican situation, the Dominican government and the insurgents, and on March 1, 1905, Senator Cullom reported to the Senate a resolution declaring the treaty pertinent to executive action. The Senate committee on foreign relations, by a vote of 10 to 3, on March 2, reported a resolution that the Senate disapprove the action of the President in making the treaty with the Dominican Republic. The vote was taken in executive session, and it was stated that the majority of the committee had decided that the Senate should not ratify the treaty. The Senate committee on foreign relations then Daniel Blakely and William N. Ward are opposing candidates for supervisor in the township of Torch Lake.

Kalkaska is evidently conflicted a bough by the hunter game law of whom tried to commit suicide there last week.

Mr. Frank Martinek who was last Sunday's original search clock and jewelry man, after being out of the trade since selling, has again went into the trade at Cedar Lake.

Central Lake is to have a public building, a proposition to bond the village in the sum of $1,000 for that purpose having carried by a large majority in the recent village election.

Elk Rapids is having a crisis with reference to the abandonment of the N. M. Trains on account of which, there idlers better docking facilities are provided. The Board of Trade proposes to meet the demand.

Not having any of the advantages or necessities to make the city a summer resort, such as lakes, like the people of Charlevoix will provide a street fair and carnival to attract the people of northern Michigan there to a week during July.

Superintendent W. M. Aitchison of the public schools resigned the board of Petoskey and he would still accept a appointment for four years, and he told his entirely satisfied Principal H. M. Kimball of the High School to succeed him. Mr. Aitchison expressed tendency for the last seven years has been satisfactory and regretted, he will probably engage in business.

Cadillac Evening News: There's wooing and pooning of north at Frankfort these days, and well may there be, for the official announcement was made that the Royal, from Chicago to that is not to be opened for the 1905 summer season. Mr. Kirby, representing the Ann Arbor railway company, the hotel owner, issued the announcement and the official reason is that the Royal Proposition is a money loser.

The Northern Michigan High school track team will be held in Traverse City some time in May. After considering the matter, the local High School Athletic association has decided to issue invitations to Petoskey, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Bear City, Cadillac and Manistee. The athletic association has decided to offer a cup as a trophy also gold medals for first place, silver medals for second and bronze medals for third.

Enthusiasm ran high at the Petoskey Board of Trade banquet at the Perry hotel lately. A committee was appointed to confer with the passenger council relative to forming company between Petoskey and Bay View for resort purposes. Southmen was strong to bond the city to make it more pleasant and attractive to tourists. It was agreed to spare no money in making Petoskey the best resort town. The sentiment is favor of bonding the city to induce factories to come there was just as strong.

Jim Holmes, last Friday convicted hunter and trapper, has been seized by state game warden Chapman to explore two mink and two muskrat traps for the Detroit. The game laws permit the taking of any wild animals for scientific purposes, and it is claimed that the purpose of the officials of the Detroit was to exchange the skins with the German government for a pair of rare species of squirrel which the American authorities are anxious to experiment with the German taking for which of the same purpose. One pair of the beaver will go to Berlin and the other to Hamburg. Mr. Holmes is convinced of the location of a colony of beaver on the Fence river and does not anticipate much trouble in filling an order. Beaver have been protected by law for some years and are again becoming quite plentiful in the upper peninsula.

—Bellaire Independent: The Charlevoix Sentinel entered the 37th year of its publication last week. It is one of the best weekly papers published in Northern Michigan.

—Capt. Wm. Finnegan left here Monday for Manistee, and left that place yesterday for Chicago. The Captain will leave Chicago for the north to morrow (Friday).

—A. J. Sutfern has resigned his position as book-keeper at the Charlevoix Lbr. Co's office, to accept a similar position with the East Jordan Lumber Co. He will remove there at once.

—In some of our correspondence we are obliged to leave out paragraphs frequently because of indistinct writing. Will our correspondents please write their matter plainly.

—The rest made by the government detectives, Inspectors are extremely severe this year owing to the new government regulations. For the first time vessel owners have been obliged to have loaded boats from the davits on the top decks to the water.

—The 7, 11, 12, Club enjoyed an other pleasant evening at Pine Cliff cottage, when Miss Myra Hallman entertained. The young ladies come in juvenile costume and report a most amusing time. Miss Hallman served a dainty luncheon, after which Miss Ruth Smith daddy Stiffler, sketched the members in pal plus costs. Miss Marion Harris entertains next week.

—Cadillac News: Willard A. Smith recently entered upon his thirty-seventh consecutive year as the editor and publisher of the Charlevoix Sentinel, one of northern Michigan's representative newspapers. Willard Smith was in his twenties when he first journeyed to Charlevoix, in 1869 just after the war, and his Christianness were as young as his years. He has grown old, as time is measured, with his home village, there's a streak of white now and then in his hair, but his heart is as young as it used to be and his enthusiasms have not grown gray. Charlevoix owes not a little to Willard Smith and his faithful and that both may live long and prosper will be a felicitation from not only the village but from every newspaper team in Michigan.

—To be frank, the SENTINEL is disappointed that the majority township ticket was not elected. So far as the township board element of either ticket was concerned, that personnel could not be attacked. It was local issues that did the business, and therein we think many regrettable ones were led astray—unknown as that matter was fought out at the primary. If there were grounds for complaint against the old township board, the republican ticket provided practically a new board. Hence we say, these issues were foreclosed and nullified by the action of the republican primary. Perhaps there are reasons for so in the result, both political an economic. Republicans should get together, profit by the lesson and pay their taxes with after their duty thus more up to fortyeight.

—The Monthly Business Meeting of the Epworth League was held at the M. E. Parsonage on Tuesday evening. Reports from the departments were encouraging and five new members were received. After the transaction of business, the members were pleasantly entertained by Cecelia E. D. Campbell, who gave a most interesting account of her recent visit to Washington. The Captain is a keen observer and enthusiastic sight seer and delivered graphically the principal points of interest in our most beautiful city.

—The Mother Beaver is filing out, and expects to reach the Island next week.

—Capt. Small of the tug Wheeler reports to what was said to our Mackinaw clipping of last week regarding the wrecking bill rendered against the N. M. Trans. Co. for services in the case of the stranding of the Illinois last season. He says the bill of the Tug Co. was only for $100, which, he asserts is a just and fair claim.

—Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat-Chronicle: William H. Phelps died at his home on the Webster road last night at 7:30 o'clock after a lingering illness. Mr. Phelps was born in Grand Island, N. Y., February 26, 1831. Some years later he moved to Michigan and remained there until nine years ago, when he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Hodges of this place. One year latter he was seriously injured by falling from the wall of a building on Chestnut street, suffering injuries from which he had never fully recovered. He came to the place some after and had made it his home since. Mr. Phelps came from a family of twelve children. He is survived by his wife, one children by a former marriage Orville Phelps, of Conway, N. H., and Mrs. George Meggison, of Charlevoix Mich., his aged mother, Diana Phelps 91 years of age living in Fairfax, Vt., four brothers, Hon. Julian Phelps of Albion, Ia., ex-consul to Germany, D. S. H. Phelps and G. L. Phelps, of Vermont and Byron, of Iowa, two sisters Mrs. M. F. Landon and Mrs. Josephine Reynolds of Vermont.

—A Mackinaw special of the tugs says: Almost given up by their consorts, three shipwrecked fishermen in a helpless gasoline launch were picked up seventy miles out in Lake Michigan and towed into port by tugs, south of the tug Elizabeth 2. They had been out in the lake over two hours. The three men who had this thrilling experience were Charles Boats, Frank Lawrence and Capt. Jos. Loeb. The story of how their craft became disabled, and the tearful watch on shore of the wives of the three men, is one of the most dramatic that Mackinaw has entertained. The young ladies came in juvenile costume and report a most amusing time. Miss Hallman served a dainty luncheon, after which Miss Ruth Smith daddy Stiffler, sketched the members in pal plus costs. Miss Marion Harris entertains next week.

THE ELECTION.

Charlevoix Township Elects the Entire Union Ticket.

It seems to have been "Union Day" in Charlevoix Monday, the idea thus defeating the republican ticket by 17 majority on the head of the ticket. There were 190 votes cast. The very aggressive feature of the election is the fact that one hundred citizens who voted the township ticket failed to vote the state ticket, notwithstanding the candidacy of a local man in the republican ticket. It seems to us that local pride should have induced this majority. We say this not in a partisan sense, but as a citizen who believes in Charlevoix against all the rest of creation. The ticket elected is as follows

Supervisor—H. I. Hodges.
Clerk, W. H. Smith.
Treasurer, Karl Hardop.
Justice full term—Alex Cameron.
Justice vacancy—A. A. Smith.
Highway Commr.—Geo. Barnes.
School Inspector—W. H. Miller.
Board of Review—J. A. Marshall.

The result in no some remote party strength, the battle being fought on local issues in which party lines were practically obliterated.

The issue in the contest is that portion of the ticket which constitutes the township board. Of the present of the board no serious fault can be found. Mr. Hodges is a citizen of well known and acknowledged ability, and should make a strong member of the county board.

Election Notes.

Returns from all four counties of the judicial circuit indicate that Judge Mayne's majority is at least 2,500, and will probably exceed that figure. We understand that Mr. Pratt conceds Mayne's election.

Traverse City elected A. V. Field 13th Deal mayor, and in Petoskey Chas. Norton, republican candidate for mayor, was defeated by Dr. Hopcraft by 200 majority.

Hour, democrat candidate for mayor of Chicago was elected Tuesday by a good majority over Harlan, republican.

Judge Connellan, of Cadillac, failed of a nomination in the judicial convention, and ran as an independent candidate. He was elected.

There were good congregations both morning and evening last Sunday. The Hymns commenced his sixth year of ministry here, to which event, he made strong references, by reviewing the work of the past five years. His morning sermon was on the subject, Highways, Waymarks and Progress based on Jeremiah 31:21. Our evening sermon was on "The Final Necessity for the Christians." The Sunday School & Christian Endeavor sessions were well attended and interesting.

The Oratorio entitled "The Coming of the King" by Dudley Buck, will be given in the church Friday evening of this week, beginning promptly at 7 o'clock. All lover of music will cordially make an effort to hear this celebrated work by Architect's most distinguished composer especially of church music. It will include organ prelude, duet and female chorus, solos and choruses, the whole will be accompanied by organ, piano and other instruments and it is hoped that local talent will be encouraged to this kind of effort by a large audience. All tickets 25c and no reserved seats.

First Hour Vanished.

When Coxey's army marched into Washington, the first hour vanished, his last hope perished, his last support failed, his last recovery for consumption, coughs and colds, kept him out of his grave. He says: "This great specific completely cured me, and saved my life. Since then, I have used it for over 10 years, and remember it a marvelous throat and lung cure." Guaranteed to cure for Coughs, Sore Throats or Lungs, your protection if Pneumonia, Guaranteed 50c and $1.00 bottles at M. Wiley & Co. drug store. Trial bottle free.

TUG WHEELER SUNK.

Catches Fire the Plug Leaks and Sinks in one Hundred Feet of Water.

The tug Irma L. Wheeler, of this port for 8 at the bottom of Pine Lake in one hundred feet of water, off the mouth of tyster Bay.

The Wheeler had been to Boyne City, having followed up the wake of the steamer Winnebago, Monday, through the heavy ice. She was returning, a Monday night, through the still practically open channel, with ice-fields on either side, when fire was discovered in the hold.

When discovered by Capt. Small the entire forward compartment was like a roaring furnace. To reach shallow water was impossible and taking chances as to the depth of water, the valves were opened, and the tug went down in one hundred feet of water. The crew all reach the shore on the ice.

The Wheeler was owned by the Charlevoix and Vessel Owners Tug Association, of which the stockholders are the Hansen, L. Olsson and John Schumer, of Milwaukee, W. H. Allen's Sons, of Kewaha, W. L. French of East Jordan, and G. C. Crekan and R. S. Small, of Charlevoix. Capt. R. S. Small was her master.

Of course there is no hope of ever raising the tug.

A Matter of Public Policy.

The Charlevoix Board of Commerce is not a sine federation nor a vigilance committee. Its purpose is, or should be, to unite all factions and elements in the work of promoting the industrial prosperity of Charlevoix. It was not organized for literary research—that is the province of the Historical Society and the Current Event Club. The reformation of drunkards does not properly come within its sphere of duty—that is left to the Salvation Army and the W. C. T. U. It is not a secret service department or a detective bureau.

If there are weeds growing in the public truck-patch, dig them up, but do not throw the dead refuse into the Board of Commerce fodder-trough. If we have any dirty linen don't hang it in the front yard and the board of commerce room is not in. If there are any rats we kill, take them out behind the barn.

We do not question the good faith, sincerity or good intentions of the board of commerce committee which recently investigated township affairs. It is composed of some of our best citizens. So far as we know, its findings may be true and proper, and, under any other label but that of the board of commerce, would be the exercise of an honest, only public light but public duty.

Investigation of this character should come from the people through a committee appointed at the annual township meeting.

The board of commerce, gentlemen, should devote itself, unit-ely, to the work of talking Charlevoix at all times and everywhere. It cannot do this effectively with discord in its ranks. Let the good work go on. If investigation of public affairs seems necessary, let that go on but do it properly, and in order.

Don't tie it to the coat tails of the board of commerce.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Perhaps the most important school event since the last published "school notes" was the local oratorical contest last Wednesday evening the result of which has already been announced as a victory for Crawford Hastings. But the contest was by no means a walk-a-way for him. Out of a total number of points recorded by the six judges amounting to 1500, there were only 12½ points between the orations given second and third place, and 34½ points between the first and second. This is a good indication of the general excellence of all the orations, and with the further improvement that can be made before April 14, Charlevoix's representative in the district contest stands a fair chance of getting close to the final.

Marvelous Cure for Coughs and Colds.

Mr. Geo. W. Hogg, Appleton, Wis., writes: "I feel it my duty to inform you of the wonderful effects of Kennedy's Medical Discovery. Last winter I had a cough and was very much run down in health. I had tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician, but was not improving. I had lost my appetite and was very much emaciated. I had also a very bad cough. I had heard of your Discovery, and thought I would try it. I have taken in all six bottles, and am now in good health. I weigh more than I ever did before, and my cough is entirely gone. I cannot say too much for your Discovery."

LAMPS AND LIGHTS

You are the light of the world.—Matt. v. 14.

The Scriptures of the Christian are called their precious more valuable a hundred times than the gold of Ophir. Every chapter, whether it be those in which God speaks to us in the Ten Commandments, or those in which we speak to God in prayer, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of history, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of prophecy, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of poetry, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of proverbs, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of epistles, or those in which we speak to one another in the form of apocalypse, every chapter, every verse, every word, every letter, every point, is a lamp to guide the feet of the pilgrim, and a light to shine upon his path. Yet how many there are who do not use the Bible as a lamp or a light! The Bible was given for a purpose, and that purpose is not fulfilled by its being left on the shelf. The Bible was not given to be a mere ornament on the parlor table, to be a mere thing to be looked at, to be a mere thing to be talked about, but it was given to be a lamp to guide the feet, and a light to shine upon the path. Now, I want to show you how the Bible may be used as a lamp and a light.

I. The Bible may be used as a lamp to show us our sins. The Bible is a mirror in which we see our sins. Some people say they do not see any sin in themselves. They look into the Bible, and they see there that they are sinners. The Bible shows us our sins. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of God's countenance. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the cross of Christ. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the judgment seat of God. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal hell. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Heaven. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal life. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal glory. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal God. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Christ. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Holy Ghost. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Trinity. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah-God. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah-God-Man. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah-God-Man-Spirit. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah-God-Man-Spirit-Trinity. The Bible shows us our sins in the light of the eternal Jehovah-God-Man-Spirit-Trinity-Unity. GIN BELOW THE VINEGAR

Sailors' Smart Trick Deceived Officer for a Month.

Whenever the Chinese steward in the commissary mess on board the U. S. cruiser was in a generous and munificent disposition he served apples. They go to waste in the regular mess of the cruiser, and the Chinaman was enabled to get a barrel of them for a little money. He put them in the commissary mess room, and the officer who was responsible for the mess was pleased with the idea of having a barrel of apples for his men. The officer was not well versed in sea pranks, and he was pleased when the men began to drink the apples in the mess room instead of the fresh water which was provided for them. The officer was astonished when the men began to ask for more apples, and he was still more astonished when he found that the men were drunk on the apples. The officer was a teetotaler himself, and he was not well versed in the ways of the men who drink whisky. He ordered the mess room closed and the barrel of apples to be rolled into the hold. The men were drunk for a week, and the officer was puzzled to know how they had obtained the whisky. Finally he had the barrel of apples rolled out on the deck and had it opened. The officer was astonished when he found that the barrel was full of whisky. The Chinaman had put the whisky into the barrel of apples by means of a long tube which he had secured on the outside of the barrel. The tube was hidden among the apples, and the Chinaman had no difficulty in filling the barrel with whisky. The officer was puzzled to know how the whisky was put into the barrel of apples, but he was not long in discovering the trick when he had the barrel of apples rolled into the hold. The officer was not a drinking man himself, and he was not well versed in the ways of the men who drink whisky. The officer was a good deal of a sailor, however, and

"I hope you will give me a chance, Miss Winterbourne, and be—

"Oh, you will promise, and she, in the meantime, to—

"I have no ambition of marriage," said he, with a very grave countenance; "I think it would be a great piece of folly. I have seen many cases where people married in haste and repented at leisure. I think when people have lived long enough to know what they want, they are better able to make a choice. I have no ambition to be married, and I think it would be a great piece of folly to me. I am very well as I am; I have no wish for a change; I have lived long enough to know what I want, and I am not in a hurry to make a change. I am very well as I am, and I think it would be a great piece of folly to me if I married."

The Marquis of Lorn was well known in the world, and was well known for his frankness of speech.

"Why, man alive," said he, "what has my title to do with the question of marriage? But think for a little, man, gently. Of course, I don't know Yolande; I should like to know her, and I know she would be charmed to know me; but, I repeat, that I should think it quite a hard hardship, and unfair, if I should be called upon to change my name because I happened to be married to a young lady who happened to be the daughter of a Duke. I should think it unfair and cruel. It is not in the course of things that a young man like me should be called upon to change his name because he happens to be married to a Duke's daughter

THE GRANGE

INFLUENCE OF THE GRANGE

It Represents the Farming Population With Fairness.

Does the grange as an organization wield the influence it might in public opinion? In answer to this question I could do just what the Master of the New York state grange was in the habit of doing, namely, quote from the reports of the various grange lecturers. But there are a very large number of persons throughout the state and particularly in the cities who will say on this question the opposite when those that will say the grange has adopted with its aims some of these questions. Not question but it will be said that the opinion of the grange in all matters affecting legislation is influential. It is without question the most conservative force in the state. Now and then it may be thought that it does not represent the population of the state, but conservatism is a quality that an organization of farmers, more than any other, represents. New York and Buffalo have certainly more than half the population of the state, but conservatism is a quality that more resembles the slow and deliberate movement of the country than the quick and sometimes rash movements of the city. Perhaps it is not too much to say that the influence of the grange is felt in the settlements of New York and Buffalo. Perhaps it is not too much to say that the influence of the grange is felt in the settlements of Chicago and upon the members of one organization every hour of the day and every day of the week upon the work of the subordinate grange and its members. This is one and not important because it is seen in the public eye than the work of the grange. Perhaps it is seen in the public eye, but it exists far more in the very heart of the interests of the grange to help the men and women on the farm.—Grange Bulletin.

The Grange and the Common School.

The grange throughout the United States should take a deeper interest in the common schools than they do in most sections, not only in relation to matters within the school building, but outside of it. In making the grounds attractive, keeping the buildings in good condition, setting out shade trees and doing more work than is now done the school a pleasant and attractive place for children. Every subordinate grange in a rural community should take a connection with and exercise a watch care over the school, and perhaps it would be well for the subordinate grange in each community to the subordinate grange to select from its members a committee, consisting of one male and female, to visit the school at least once during the term of school, for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of the school and its wants, and report to the subordinate grange at some subsequent meeting. The committee should make a report to the subordinate grange in regard to the condition of the school, and the wants of the school, and if there should be any wants which the subordinate grange can supply, it should do so. The committee should also report the condition of the school house to the subordinate grange, and if it should be in a condition to be a disgrace to the district, the subordinate grange should take some action to have the school house put in a condition to be a credit to the district.—Mrs. E. D. Frost.

WOMAN'S WORK.

Its Importance Should Be Fully Appreciated.

The work of the Farmer's wife cannot be overrated. The women of the grange in our state are ever on the alert to encourage her. The women's work committee of the New York state grange, Mrs. Jennie Cornell, Lockport, Mrs. Ella Lockwood, Ontario, Mrs. Ella Lockwood, Ontario, Mrs. Ella Lockwood, Ontario

WILL MARRY ALFONSO

PLAN FOR PRINCESS PATRICIA OF CONNAUGHT

London Papers Note Preliminaries for Alliance Have Been Satisfactorily Arranged—Sensationalism of Cashier Cause Wreck of Bank in Portage, Ind.

The London Daily Mirror is in a position to be authoritative on the subject of the engagement of Princess Patricia of Connaught and Prince Alfonso, and publishes a long and detailed account of the negotiations which have resulted in the announcement of the betrothal. The Mirror says that the idea of a marriage between the Princess Patricia and Prince Alfonso was first suggested by King Edward, who asked the former if she would be willing to accept a proposal from the young Prince. The King's suggestion was made in the form of a request, and the Princess at once consented to the arrangement.

BANK OF LAPORTE CLOSED.

Overwhelmed by Withdrawals—Cause Unknown.

Five Hundred Creditors Will Share Pro Rata—Liabilities Not Yet Known—Bank Was Reorganized Last Year.

Laporte, Ind., Special.—The Laporte National Bank, one of the leading financial institutions of this city, closed its doors today. The stockholders met last evening and decided to close the bank. It is said that the bank will be able to pay its creditors in full.

The Laporte National Bank was organized in 1865 as the First National Bank of Laporte, and was one of the oldest banks in Indiana. It was reorganized last year, the capital stock being reduced from $200,000 to $100,000. The bank has been considered one of the most conservative banks in Northern Indiana. It has a large number of depositors in Laporte and the surrounding country.

The cause of the bank's failure is not known, but it is said that it was overwhelmed by a sudden and unexpected demand for its deposits. The bank's capital stock is $100,000, and it has a surplus of $50,000. The bank's deposits are not known, but they are believed to be large. The bank has a number of large accounts with Chicago and other eastern banks, which it was able to draw upon to meet the demand for its deposits. The bank's liabilities are not known, but it is said that it will be able to pay its creditors in full.

Patient in Nebraska Asylum Escapes the Hot Blasts of Solitude.

Lincoln, Neb., Special.—Escaping from a peculiar case of mania, the United States asylum for the insane at Hot Springs, S. D., arrived in this city last night in charge of a special attendant and two patients, who were taken to the Nebraska asylum for the insane. The patient escaped from the asylum at Hot Springs a few days ago, and was found in a deserted house in this city. The house was well furnished, and the patient had taken up his abode there. He was found by a special officer who was sent here by the Hot Springs authorities. The patient was taken back to the asylum, and he was accompanied by his wife, who had been visiting him for some time. The patient is said to be perfectly sane when he is not in the grip of his mania, which is a peculiar one. He is said to be a wonderful musician, and he has composed many beautiful pieces of music while in the asylum. He is said to be a graduate of a German university, and his family is one of prominence in Germany. He is said to be a nephew of a German nobleman.

Bubonic Plague Disappearing.

Cape Town, Special.—The bubonic plague is disappearing in Cape Town, only two cases having been reported during the last week. The total number of cases since the outbreak of the plague in Cape Town is 1,000, of which 900 have been fatal.

ALL NATIONS ARE INVITED.

Tribute Hundredth Anniversary of Bethlehem of Jamaica, L. I.

Thousands of people from all parts of America, as well as from other parts of the world, are expected to be represented in a great celebration to be held at the Bethlehem of Jamaica, L. I., when President Roosevelt will be the principal speaker. Invitations have been issued to the rulers of the world to be represented in the celebration, which will be held on the Fourth of July. The celebration will last for a week, and will be participated in by the people of Jamaica, L. I., who are proud of the fact that the town is the oldest in the state of New York.

Martinez Hit Chicago Brothers.

Dunning, Ill., Special.—Two Chicago brothers, Frank and Ernest Martinez, aged 22 and 20 years, respectively, were shot and killed here by a man who had been their friend for years. The murder was committed in the presence of a number of people, who had gathered in a saloon to witness a game of pool between the three men. The murderer, who is a Mexican, escaped.

Cotton in Southern Ginning.

Washington, Special.—Cotton was ginned in the United States prior to March 25, 1904, to the amount of 1,000,000 bales, as compared with 1,000,000 bales ginned in 1903, and 1,000,000 bales ginned in 1902, according to a report issued by the census bureau today.

Agent Sought Wife's Fortune.

San Bernardino, Special.—Mrs. Ella Wilson, who was married to Frank Wilson, a Mormon elder, in Salt Lake City, Utah, last November, has begun suit for a divorce from her husband. Wilson, who is a traveling salesman, is a resident of Los Angeles, and it is said he married Mrs. Wilson for her money.

Life Imprisonment for Boy.

Judge Dayton, of Lexington, sentenced James A. Inglis, Jr., a boy of fifteen years, to life imprisonment in the penitentiary for the murder of Mrs. Della Price. The 17-year-old criminal made no plea in the crime but admitted that it occurred while he was robbing the house of Mrs. Price, who was a widow living in comfortable circumstances in the place. Young Inglis is the son of a well-to-do farmer in Breathitt county, and did not plead the protection of youth for his crime.

Chicago Grain Drops.

Chicago, Special.—The Chicago grain market dropped from 1 to 2 cents a bushel today, the decline being the result of a weak cable from Liverpool and the fact that the Chicago market had been carried up to a point where it was considerably above the Liverpool market. The decline was not so great in the case of the cash grain, but the futures were very weak.

Wife Deserted Husband.

Kansas City, Special.—Mrs. Ella Wilson, who was married to Frank Wilson, a Mormon elder, in Salt Lake City, Utah, last November, has begun suit for a divorce from her husband. Wilson, who is a traveling salesman, is a resident of Los Angeles, and it is said he married Mrs. Wilson for her money.

Cleveland Expect Wealth Day.

Washington, Special.—Cleveland will be the scene of a great celebration on the occasion of the visit of the Ohio delegation to the Jamestown exposition, which will be held on Wednesday, June 22, and which will be known as Wealth Day. The Ohio delegation will be headed by Governor Herbert S. Bond, of Ohio, and will be accompanied by a large number of prominent citizens of Ohio.

Fire Loss in Buffalo.

The building 78 Pearl street, Buffalo, was a rather costly one when it was destroyed by fire early last Friday morning. The building was occupied by Sawyer, attorney at law, and by the Buffalo Electric Company. The loss on the building is $15,000, and on the contents of the law office, $1,000. The electric company's loss will be $2,000. The fire was caused by a defective wire.

Woman Cremated in Bed.

After building a blaze of unusual proportions in her bedroom, Mrs. Mary Ann Hoffman, a widow, 60 years of age, was cremated early Friday morning in her home, 1,114 Cranston street, Providence, R. I.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

The map of the Boyne City & Southeastern railroad extension to Gaylord has been filed with the war railroad commissioner.

Central Lake is not to have a base ball club yet. The village voted in favor of bonding for its share if $1,000, but the township voted against subscribing its share of $10,000.

The wife of a former living near Central Lake village, during the last three months of 1895 has marketed 256 dozen eggs for which she received $56.32. The number of hens kept was a little less than one hundred, and it looks a good deal as though her lot of poultry has been working overtime.

Central Lake Torch: E. B. Hanson has resigned his position as pilot master at Central Lake. Inspection in this place he offers for sale his beautiful house and grounds. Mr. Hanson informs us that he expects to engage in newspaper work, but at present is undecided as to where he will locate.

Boyne Citizen: Rev. Mr. Whitman, who will be remembered by old residents here as pastor of the Methodist church nearly twenty-five years ago, has recently purchased and moved on to the Hanson farm near Deer Lake. Mr. Whitman and his adopted daughter, Miss Hettie Dake, comes to Deer Lake to stay, spending the rest of their days upon the farm of the week.

East Jordan Enterprise: The bill to extend the limits of East Jordan so as to take in Antrim's Addition, the cooperage plant, and south Arm was passed by the legislature and became a law last week. This measure was amended and passed by the house before many people here knew anything about it. Then a remonstrance was sent to Lansing that it be so amended that a vote would be taken upon it but this was too late, and by virtue of the authority of the Michigan legislature over Michigan villages the territory of East Jordan is considerably more than doubled.

Boyne Citizen: In a statement by the attorney of the Boyne City & Southeastern it is to be last week's Citizen; the people were informed that Company had secured the funds to build and equip their road to Gaylord the coming summer and that it is expected the tracks will be reaching by August 1st, that to secure the subscribers for outstanding obligations of the B. C. A. S. E. Co. were to be taken up and this road with its extension bonded to secure the amount under, now just White & Co. had guaranteed the interest on the bonds, that it is expected labor to extend the road through to Alpena within five years. It also states that the road will cross the G. R. & I. at or near Bonaparte.

In June, W. Harris the new publisher and editor of the Elk Rapids Progress, Antrim county has acquired a large and public-spirited citizen. Mr. Harris has been in the newspaper business for over a quarter of a century, and his ever been known as a man of ability in his own business and an energetic leader in all that was progressive and for the benefit of his community. Mr. Harris's record speaks stronger than even words of praise. He published the Reporter Gazette for 10 years, during a part of which time he was secretary and treasurer of the Michigan Press Association. He edited the Coldwater Republican for four years and was a deputy internal revenue collector under Harrison. He was connected with the State Republican at Lansing for two years, and has been a prominent salesman on the road.

Central Lake Torch: We have in our possession the copy of a warrant on road district number 6, township of Central Lake that has been lying around in somebody's hands ever since 1874. It was filed by S. B. Davis, deputy town clerk, and contains the names of John Erdman, Geo. E. Bradshaw, Fred Barber, Wm. Davis, Peter Higgins, Ed. Higgins, H. McCracker, Harvey Scott, Simeon Wells, Andrew Young, John Mathers, Jesse Mathers, Frank Bisbee and Lemuel W. Kile. At that time Central Lake and Echo were in one township. These highway commissioners had charge of affairs at that time as shown by the signatures to the warrant. They were Noble I. March, J. Wattle and S. B. Davis. We found that John H. Mathers was charged with one dollar poll tax which we tried to collect, but he is so positive that the same had been paid that we finally gave the matter up as a bad job.

Frightful Suffering Relieved.
Suffering frightfully from the virulent poisons of undigested food, C. F. Grayson, of Lula, Miss., took Dr. King's New Life Pills, "with the result," he writes, "that I was cured. All stomach and bowel disorders gone away to their tools. Invaluable. Also at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store, guaranteed.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

New York, Thursday, Nov. 14, 1907.

Trade, credit, crop and industrial reports are in the main very satisfactory, exceptions being noted in the South, where cotton planting is to a record acreage in view of the high price of cotton, a few points in the West where industrial activity has made labor scarce, and in Chicago and other parts of the country where the strike of teamsters is causing much inconvenience. Speculation in stocks has been very active, with a rather sharp decline in the prices of most of the leading issues, which is attributed to the fact that the Treasury has been unable to do anything for the relief of the money market, and that the Stock Exchange Governors have been unable to devise any means for the relief of the situation. Money has been very tight, and the rate for call loans has ranged from 6 to 125 per cent, the average being about 20 per cent. Time money has been very hard to obtain, and the rates have ranged from 6 to 25 per cent, the latter rate being for a loan for one day only. Stocks have been very active, and the prices have ranged from 1 to 10 per cent lower than the previous week, the decline being in the main due to the tight money situation. Bonds have been quiet, but prices have ranged lower. Wheat has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the unfavorable weather for the winter wheat crop, the small receipts of wheat from the Northwest, and the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of wheat for the Philippines. Corn has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the small receipts, the strong demand for export, and the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of corn for the Philippines. Pork has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the strong demand for export and the small receipts of hogs. Lard has been very active and higher, the advance being due to the strong demand for export and the small receipts of hogs. Cotton has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the unfavorable weather, the small receipts, the strong demand for export, and the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of cotton for the Philippines. Coffee has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the unfavorable weather in Brazil, the small receipts, and the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of coffee for the Philippines. Sugar has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of sugar for the Philippines. Flour has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the small receipts of wheat, the strong demand for export, and the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of flour for the Philippines. Rice has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of rice for the Philippines. Tobacco has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of tobacco for the Philippines. Copper has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of copper for the Philippines. Tin has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of tin for the Philippines. Lead has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of lead for the Philippines. Pig iron has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of pig iron for the Philippines. Wool has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of wool for the Philippines. Hides have been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of hides for the Philippines. Leather has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of leather for the Philippines. Petroleum has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of petroleum for the Philippines. Rubber has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of rubber for the Philippines. Silver has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of silver for the Philippines. Gold has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of gold for the Philippines. Iron has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of iron for the Philippines. Steel has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of steel for the Philippines. Zinc has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of zinc for the Philippines. Aluminum has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of aluminum for the Philippines. Nickel has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of nickel for the Philippines. Antimony has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of antimony for the Philippines. Platinum has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of platinum for the Philippines. Iridium has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of iridium for the Philippines. Palladium has been very active and much higher, the advance being due to the belief that the Government will be a large buyer of palladium for the Philippines. Kansas and the Federal Government Point Out Practical Plans That Do Not Involve Futile Experiments in Tinkering the Tariff

Merely lowering duties and reducing conditions are found to exist here and there in our twenty-odd scores of national trusts by no means sufficient reasons for attacking the tariff. These conditions exist to a very limited extent, if at all, as the result of the tariff.

The combinations of the Anti-Trust Court have to contend with one fact. There is no tariff on anthracite coal.

The power to regulate that is in settlement is exercised by the Supreme Court to put curbers upon the tariff. There is no law in existence. Congressman Cousins of Kansas has found a way to deal with Standard Oil operations without resorting to tariff tinkering. He has introduced and the House has passed a resolution directing the Interstate Commerce Commission and Commissioner of Corporations and Labor to undertake a thorough investigation into the maintenance of the Standard Oil company in violation of the Kansas anti-trust law, and other Western laws, also against the Standard Oil operations, and the investigation search for the Congressman's conviction was not had for lack of willing and competent witnesses. A search of the records of the Western tribunals shows that the prosecutors of the Standard Oil company failed to appear to the hearings and prosecution. IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles Sanger Mellen, who before a committee of the Connecticut Legislature declared that great abuses exist in railway rates, and that if in time they were stopped, he is president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Road, and one of the best known railway men in the country. He was born in 1851 in Salem, Mass., graduated at Harvard College in 1871, and began his railway career as a clerk in the service of the New Hampshire Northern road. His rise was rapid. For years he was president in one manager of the Boston & Lowell, a consolidated railway, then he became president of the Boston & Maine, and later president of the Northern Pacific. He is also president of the New York & New England, and was vice president of the Northern Pacific.

Theodore P. Shonts, a leading spirit in the Panamanian affairs, is a native of Indiana, and by his own efforts has risen from a boy's position in a telegraph office to the presidency of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railway. He is a Republican and a Methodist, and is a member of the Union Club, the Chicago Club, the Chicago Athletic Association, the Chicago Golf Club, the Chicago Club of Washington, and the Chicago Club of New York. WILLARD & [illegible] EDITORS

Letter From "Billy" Miller

[illegible] April 1st.

To the Editor:

Well I am in Greenville, S. C., on my way home to "Charlevoix the Beautiful." Last night I went to see Black Patti, with her forty other colored singers and dancers. It was the best I ever attended, the gallery was given to the niggers, and I never saw so many in one crowd in my life.

Greenville is one of the coming cities of the south, sixteen thousand inhabitants, fifteen large cotton mills and no saloons. There is a regular army of men, women and children turned out of each mill. Property in this city has nearly doubled in two years, twenty acres just outside of the city I was offered ten $2,000 two years ago, the price now is $4,000, and all city property accordingly.

I was with "Pap" Carpenter about three months at Port Orange, Fla., on the Halifax. I got in the most of my time on the river fishing and hunting. Was for some time mate of the launch Yale. Made several trips up the Tomoka River, where the alligators and turtles live. My first trip we saw seventeen alligators on the banks, they will not come for a launch coming but you cannot get within gun shot of them in a skiff. They do not allow them to shoot on this river.

One other trip I made several times was up Spruce Creek, this is a small crooked river and you can see as many alligators and turtles as you want to. Very little water in this creek ever some of the oyster bars, and very crooked up at the head of the creek. My outfit, the yale launch, had a nice pavilion and drove a team, and you can go there and take canoes and get all the game or oysters you want to shoot. One trip I took and had a fine time was a cow hunt, was gone three days and three nights, camped out in the flat woods, or what the cow boys call camping. Built a good log fire, cooked supper, took our saddle for a pillow, and a blanket and we were hard for the night. We had twenty cow boys round us about 2000 cows and calves.

My next trip was across the country 75 miles to Delland. Myself and my cracker friend Johnny took a camper of Florida people, left Port Orange at 6 o'clock a. m., rode half way, stopped at the cracker camp, got our coffee, fed the ponies, arriving at Delland at 7 p. m. During this ride we did not see one cracker. So you can see the amount of travel on the main roads in this country. The next day we came back to the old Sanford road, by Orange City and Lake Helen. Saw some very fine orange groves in this section, but it looks to me that you have to use too much fertilizer to make it profitable. Only a rich man can afford to own one and keep it up. A good farmer in Charlevoix county can raise more grain on 20 acres of land than could be raised in the 75 miles of country I passed through during my trip.

But leave the land out, and talk about climate, the best got to be Florida. March 26th, the day we crossed the country it was 35 when we crossed at Delland. The 26th at 9 a. m. when we left the city, 87 in the shade. The old road across the country several years for one mile at a stretch the horses would be in water up to their knees. Some creeks we crossed a man wants his boots on to keep dry. It was all fun for me I went to see the country.

Had had a good time for the winter, but now as spring is here I am anxious to get back to "Charlevoix the Beautiful" which is good enough for Bill.

Yours,

B. W. MILLER.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Crawford Rosebrugh returned safely from the oratorical contest at Ludington. He says he experienced no "stage fright" whatever and stood up bravely among the last three survivors. Ludington captured the prize this year, Charlevoix's turn will come later.

The belated Caveny entertainment was given last night at the high school, beginning about a quarter after nine o'clock. Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour the room was nearly filled with a good natured audience. Caveny proved himself an artist in word painting as well as in using crayons with both hands. His one minute portraiture of the "open countenance" of one of Charlevoix's popular physicians was the "hit" of the evening.

Four or five high school students and about twice that number in the seventh and eighth grades will compete for the prize medals offered by the Grand Army of Michigan for the best essays on patriotic subjects. Winners will be announced later.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Henry Chamberlain, for some time manager of Liken & Brown's lumbering interests at Ewen, died at Minneola last week.

Newspaper changes in Antrim county have been plentiful since January of last year. The Gaylord Herald, the Central Lake Torch, the Elk Rapids Progress and the Alden Wave have changed hands and the Sentinel has moved from Bellaire to Atlas. The independent is the only paper that remains without change.

The farmers in the Grand Rapids at Bayne City have about three hundred bushels of potatoes which they desire to sell at 25c per bushel, and will deliver when four or more bushels are ordered. These potatoes were raised by the farmers, and the entire amount raised from them is divided among them according to their plan of partnership. The boys have also about fifty bushels of white navy beans which they desire to convert into cash.

Central Lake Torch: After 13 years of continuous business at Atwood, the Smallegan & Smith store property, including stock, fixtures, building, good will etc., will on the 25th of the present month pass into the hands of Henry Klooster, a farmer of Banks township. Smallegan & Smith take the Klooster farm in part payment. Thirteen years ago John Smallegan bought the Atwood store, which, with Mr. Smallegan's efficient help, has run successful for 10 years. He then took for a partner his brother-in-law John Smith, and as Smallegan & Smith the business has been run ever since. This firm has always been noted for its integrity and square dealing, and many of its customers will be sorry to see the Atwood store. Knowing Mr. Klooster as we do, however, we predict that in all essential points he will prove a worthy successor to the retiring firm. Mr. Smith retains his interest in the business of Smallegan Smith & Co. at this place, but for the present will devote himself mainly to turning bull stock raising for which occupations he is very partial.

The city of Cadillac did not repeal the election of a temperance board in the recent municipal contest, but the new administration began with them very one meeting, a campaign against the saloons of that city. Last year licenses were issued to twenty one saloon keepers, but it is safe to guess the number this year will be greatly decreased. The Evening News, of that city, explains the matter as follows: Five hundred dollars for a state license, twenty-five dollars for a government license and two hundred dollars for a municipal license, the last ever assessed in this city, with a total of seven hundred and twenty-five dollars, and bonds of five thousand dollars, instead of three thousand, as heretofore, are the prohibitory requirements that will be at least, if I depend correctly on Gardner, beginning with the first day of next month. It is through the adoption of ordinance two hundred and ten passed by the new council at its first meeting that the city is to benefit across and collect the additional two hundred dollars for a municipal license and that the bonds have been increased to five thousand dollars from three thousand. Music in musical instruments, singing or entertainments of any sort, is to be allowed, or upon the adjacent sidewalks is strictly prohibited.

A Barrelful Ride

Physicians were helpless but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly healed it." Soothes and heals burns like magic. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co. druggists.

NORWOOD NEWS.

William Cline was here visiting friends last week and left for Detroit Saturday.

The Peck sisters will give their long deferred exhibition at the Town Hall in the village of Norwood Wednesday evening April 26th.

The funeral services of Jason Bolton who died last Tuesday were held at the Epworth church Sunday. Jason Bolton was born near Oxford England, Sept. 17, 1826, and was married to Mrs Hulse over 60 years ago. They came to this country in 1854, came from Buffalo around the lakes, and landed at Milwaukee and settled in Dane county. The remained there a few years, and then moved to Missouri. During the border troubles 1858 60, they moved to Iowa. They moved to Norwood Mich 1876 and located at Norwood. Mr. Bolton was Post Master at Norwood from the organization of the office till discontinued last year. There are 5 children 4 of whom are living, one daughter about 15 years old died in 1897.

Puzzle of Great Lakes.

Supposers in the lake region are puzzled over the cause of the phenomenal rise in the levels of the great lakes in the last nineteen years. At the same time they are asking whether the agency which has caused the rise will still add more to the depth of water in the important lake channels in the future.

This matter is receiving the attention of vessel owners who, because very foot of added draught for their ships means the addition of thousands of dollars in their freight carrying capacity.

As far as is known, no theory yet has been advanced by men of science which seems to explain in every particular the increased volume of water in the lakes. The most natural explanation, that of increased rainfall, is shown to be hardly worth taken in view of the statistics of the weather bureau, which show that during the last ten years the average precipitation in the lake region has been considerably below the average for each year.

Between low water mark in 1895 and high water mark in 1900 Lake Ontario shows a variation of four and one-half feet.

Prof. T. C. Mendenhall, of Columbia College, is quoted as authority for the statement that, owing to the fixing of the outlet lake region, towards the Mississippi river, it would be only a matter of a few thousand years before Lake Michigan would be entirely submerged. This theory is in part based on the fact that Lake Michigan was a foot and one-half higher last year than it was ten years ago. Should there be a corresponding increase in future years, however, Prof. Henry's prediction of drainage would come long before its scheduled time. It is left to show the south is responsible for the rising up of the southerly lakes, the water must come from the north. Yet Lake Superior has gained slightly in volume during the ten years.

The marine men are not worrying, however about any inundation of Lake cities, but they would like to know if they can continue to ignore on their boats carrying many more thousand tons of freight during the season on account of the increased draught of water in connecting the channels and harbors.

On a ten-thousand ton steamer, now the standard for the lakes, one foot added draught means an additional carrying capacity of from five hundred to six hundred tons. Figuring on the basis of last year's iron ore rate, this would mean an increased earning capacity of nearly $1,000 during the season. Last season boats drawing 18½ feet of water frequently crossed La Salle street tunnel in Chicago river, although the average depth for the season was close to eighteen feet. Ten years ago a captain thought himself lucky to get over that obstruction when the lake displaced 16½ feet.

There is a theory that the lakes are fed by hidden springs.—Chicago Chronicle.

A private train of two coaches, containing F. A. Wann, vice president, Weston Cutler, general manager, A. Patriarch, general traffic manager, and H. F. Moeller, general passenger agent of the Pere Marquette arrived in the city at 2 o'clock this afternoon, leaving ten minutes later for Petoskey, after which they will return to Ludington. They are out on an official tour of inspection and in an interview Mr. Wann stated that they were amply equipped for a fine season's business having one hundred new locomotives capable of handling the great increase in business which has come to the system.

"We want the public to know that we are after the business and I will be here again in a month or six weeks when I am able to take a short breathing spell and then I shall spend a half day in your city and meet the shippers personally." There will be some division changes for the entire system which will operate for the betterment of the service which will be installed as soon as feasible. Vice President Wann, who has only occupied his office since December, is covering the system in order to become familiar with it.

BEAGLE HAD HOMING INSTINCT.

Traveled Long Distance to Reach His Former Master.

County Commissioner Henry P. Mann of Baltimore county, who lives at Orangeville, near Baltimore, is credited with telling the following story of the return of a beagle hound to Orangeville from Kent county:

"About three years ago I gave away a beagle hound, which was taken to Kent county. One night recently I and my family were startled to see the dog walk into our home and take position near the stove. It was very cold and blustery.

"I cannot account for how the dog got here unless it crossed the bay from Back Neck to Baltimore county and walked home to my home. We have had frequently hunted in the section of the county through which it had to pass, if it came all the way from the bay shore.

"This is no more remarkable than a homing pigeon flying ten miles back to its home."—Baltimore Sun.

—It has leaked out that Charlevoix Lodge No. 252 F. & A. M. is seriously considering the question of erecting a temple on land for at the corner of Bridge and Mason streets. The office has been made and specifications for some time. The building will be of solid brick about 60x80 feet, and three stories in height. There will be two stores on the ground floor, an entrance or vestibule on the second floor, with lodge rooms, parlors and banquet hall on the third floor. The building will cost something over $5000. It is pretty safe to say that the building will be erected within two years, and may be completed within a year. The lodge has the money, and it is the time for interest to note that a people should prosper so fast, yet there has been accumulated a settled fund where it was necessary.

—Earl Travis, stenographer in Dr. Patter's dispensary and the writer of this were working "for good" through a Mormon meeting that has been established by a man for fifty years or more. He received permission to read a small tract aloud on the dead theory. He picked it up, and it proved to be one of the most interesting things ever found on this interesting island. The poor man a lame cripple, begins 1845 when Zachariah Taylor was elected. The uncle of General Taylor shooting beside his mare in the pasture when the tidings was made and around the city in the Indian are the words "Hi ugh and Dandy," the subject "Taylor—elected at the battle of Buena Vista. Force were on duty some 60 Mormons were in full swing in Beaver Island and there is not the slightest doubt that the tract was lost by a Mormon, and that it has lain in the old Mormon hold for more than fifty years. Our Father Zacheder preserved it in the wilds on the spot, and we consider it a most valuable relic.

Governor's Arbor Day Proclamation.

Governor Warner has made the following proclamation relating to the observance of "Arbor Day":

"In accordance with the act approved March 1, twenty, Compiled Laws, April 28 is set as Arbor Day. The general observance of the day is recommended. In the city and on the farm, in private and exemplar, as a people let us demonstrate that we can be one that can walk from the ordinary things of life and inculcate lessons relating to the beauty and usefulness of forests of humanity, by planting trees and by public discussions of the subject of forestry. The necessary for preserving at least a remnant of that rich heritage which has been wantonly exhausted—the forest trees of Michigan should be impressed upon all our people. Let a tree be planted at the home by every member of the household able to do so, and those too young should have one planted for them. Let there be exercises and exercises in the schools appropriate to the day. There is well spent in teaching the beauties of nature, and our school grounds and surroundings should show that the lesson was not only taught but applied. If the day is observed as it should be, our homes and our country will be made more beautiful, and due, in itself, will teach patriotism and make the generation soon to assume the duties of citizenship a home loving, country loving people, a nation's richest treasure in time of peace and best defense in time of war."

NEW ORDER OF THINGS

Beaver Island Industries Booming and Earning Interests Improving.

The editor spent three days on Beaver Island the past week, and was more than ever impressed with the fact that an era of prosperity is dawning for that interesting portion of Charlevoix county.

Any person who thinks that the old order of things prevails on the island will find his mistake by taking the trip, and spending a day going about the country, as we did.

Industrially, in the sense that we use the word on the main land, St James is certainly enjoying a "boom." The Beaver Island Lumber Co's mill, with its transportation accessories, is an industry of great importance to the Island in a sense that can be duplicated by few. The more direct feature of a manufacturing enterprise, and the secondary, but no less important fact that it is clearing the hardwood forests from as fine farming land as there is in Charlevoix county.

This year's cut of timber will foot up seven million feet, and five million hardwood barrel staves will be produced, besides a large output of shingles. They have a well built narrow gauge railroad in operation, seven miles into the interior of the Island, and the rails will be extended three miles this spring. Every year the road will be extended until their large area of timberlands is all reached.

But a ride up through the island is what will open your eyes to the certain future that is beginning to loom ahead. On the main road that skirts the east side of the island, you pass large well tilled farms, with modern farm machinery, good stock sheds and sleek cattle and sheep in the pastures. In places you look across a whole section of tilled fields and see the farm houses on the west road, a mile distant. You almost imagine yourself going down through Marion or Norwood townships.

And as you drive along, admiring the beautiful rustic scenery you hear a whistle, look a little and a logging train rushes past ahead of you.

That the settlement of the vast tracts of fine, rich lands that are being cleared will follow the axe is as certain as that day follows night. And there can be no more effective and to that work than the cable that will soon connect the Island with the main land. Colonies of thrifty farmers will be brought in and Beaver Island will in a very short time take rank as one of the most thrifty agricultural sections of the county.

St James, with its magnificent harbor, will develop into a great distributing and shipping point, where warehouses will receive and handle the varied products of the Isle. Even this year, it is said, nearly 40,000 bushels of seed peas will come from Beaver Island.

—The Easter exercises at the M. E. church were successful both in interest shown and numbers in attendance at services. On Good Friday evening a good congregation assembled, members of other churches being present. Rev. Dr. Hyslop assisted the pastor who preached from "The Seven Words from the Cross." Mrs. Starling sang impressively Gounod's "There is a Green Hill Far Away." At six o'clock on Sunday an Easter Dawn service was held and the Epworth League room was filled. Miss Charlesworth was leader of the meeting. At 10:30 the church with its usual floral decorations was filled with a large congregation, the familiar Easter hymns were heartily sung, the organ was reinforced by cornets played by Dr. E. H. Wilkes and I. W. VanDuzen. The choir sang Gounod's famous anthem "Praise Ye The Lord." At the close of the sermon on "The Resurrection as Connected With Immortality" Mr. and Mrs. Starling sang with their usual taste and expression, the duet by Sudd, "O Love Divine." The children's exercises at 5 p. m. called out another large audience. The recitations and singing were most creditably given. The children's offering for missions was over $15.

A FOOL BILL.

A Measure Introduced in the Legislature to Tax Fish Nets.

In the combined record of legislation in all the "Hawbuck" and "Sprawbuck" legislatures there has been more crazy nonsense exhibited in connection with the commercial fishing industry than in any other of the many fields of "legislative endeavor."

These legislative fish spasms have been been either "trust" or "anti-trust" in their inception, but in either one or both the fisherman has always been between the upper and the nether mill stone, and the victim of some wise guy who has staked his all on getting a bill thro' whether it was wise or otherwise, merely to make a "record."

While in the larger field of politics the solons at Lansing, at the hustings and among the constituency had much to say about the protection of our "infant industries," they looked over the heads of the fishermen in search of "primary reform" or some other ignis fatuus that would gain votes for them in the next campaign.

In all this fuss the legislators have done very little to encourage and nurture the fishing industry of Michigan waters. The city angler and duck hunter have had their interests looked after, and the deer laws have been very carefully and thoughtfully framed.

And now representative Ming, of Cheboygan, without regard to the eternal fitness of things, has introduced a bill to tax gill-nets from twenty five to fifty cents each. The bill has been reported favorably to the House by the committee on fisheries.

The bill should be killed as dead as Julius Cæsar, and killed quick.

WORK TO MOVE.

The Standard Portland Cement Co. Inaugurating Active Construction Campaign.

Mr. Robert F. Wentz, general manager of the Standard Portland Cement Co. arrived here Tuesday accompanied by Mr. L. U. Leh, constructing engineer, who will remain until the plant is completed.

Mr. Wentz reports everything in fine shape, and is enthusiastic over the outlook. Work will be rushed to the limit all along the line. A good force of men have for the past week been at work on the railroad and lime kilns, and the force will be rapidly and largely increased as construction material arrives.

While away Mr. Wentz submitted to the U. S. government cement expert a sample of the shale recently discovered on the company's land, which, after an analysis, pronounced it the most perfect in all essential properties of any he had examined. The expert assured Mr. Wentz that the value of the shale as an assett, in the manufacture of cement, could not be overestimated.

The possession of this element, taken in connection with the enormous deposits of lime-stone that exists on the spot, makes the Charlevoix plant of the Standard Co. the most promising of any cement plant in Michigan, and one of the best, in point of economical production, in the United States.

—At the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. March 12th 1905 the following ladies were elected to the Executive Board. President, Mrs. M. B. Heston; Cor. Sec., L. M. Markham; Rec. Sec., B. P. Wilkinson; Fin. Sec., S. J. Allrox; Treas., Mrs. B. B. Blair. Vice President, M. E. Church, Mrs. J. W. Vickers, Baptist Church, Mrs. B. B. Armstrong; Episcopal Church, Mrs. H. C. Cooper, Catholic Church, Mrs. S. Orlowski; Congregational Church, Mrs. A. T. Barnett. Seven departments of work are to be duplicated with Superintendents as follows: Flower Mission, Mrs. Geo. Burns, Assistants, Mrs. Alice Dewitt, Mrs. L. E. Greer; Literature, Mrs. J. Hawkins; Parliamentary Law, Mrs. M. E. Heston; Press, Mrs. J. Connor; Red Letter Days, Mrs. G. G. Williams; Scientific Temperance Ins. Mrs. J. W. Vickers; Soldiers, Sailors and Lumbermen, Mrs. A. Ackert. The meeting with Mrs. Heston last Friday was largely attended and program beautifully rendered. Lathrop Memorial offering two dollars.

PLACE OF SKULLS

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF PARTS OF CALIFORNIA LAND.

One Million Acres, Especially Tempting Open to Entry, Regardless of Sex and Better—Stream with the Reputation of Prospectors and Scores of Settlers.

On June 15, 1891, a million acres of land in California were thrown open to entry. This land is not a mile from the road and any of the Southern Pacific in Southern Oregon. The acres were taken from Reservation No. 1 in the Klamath River Reservation, and are now open to settlers under the Homestead laws.

We wish to warn all intending settlers to be not misled into thinking that this is a land locked with timber, requiring the expenditure of a fortune in order to make a home. The land is not timber land, but is a prairie, with a few groves of timber, and is as free from stumps, rocks, brush and timber as any land in the United States. The soil is a deep black loam, and is of the richest character. It is well watered by streams and springs, and is well adapted to the production of all kinds of fruit, grain, vegetables, and stock raising. The climate is mild and healthful, and is free from the extreme heat of the Eastern States and from the blizzards of the Northern States. The land

THE IDEAL PAVEMENT.

Durability Pavement Meets Approval of All.

Mankind evidently made a wise selection for a permanent pavement when the old fathers chose bituliths pavement. Two winters have passed since the pavement was laid on some of the streets, and today the streets have the same appearance of newness and stability which they wore a week or two after the completion of the work on them. Many citizens have passed over the two and one-half miles of streets this spring, expecting or anticipating the finding of flaws, made apparent by the spring thaw. But surprise has been manifest with all, and the fact that not a crack in vehicle which is not as perfect as when laid has resulted in unanimous approval of the pavement.

The wonder continues of the pavement and its power to withstand the effects of heat and cold has been brought more particularly to view by the action of a spring on Maple street, almost in front of Lincoln hall. During the winter it was noticed that the pavement had raised somewhat above the level of the surrounding street, a spot several feet square appearing to have been caught in its bulging.

Not a crack or seam was noticeable, as soon as the frost was out of the ground the pavement took back into place. A natural spring had imbibed by himself the pavement and on the water found it expanded. The pavement is again as perfect as when first laid.

On Park and Maple streets the grade of brick pavement would be a trifle worse than for an animal to wet weather if any other kind of pavement had been used. But the roughly roughened surface of the bituliths pavement, combined with its compactness, makes it as firm as a dime's back, even on the level streets.

As a sanitary pavement the bituliths pavement is far in advance of all others. There is absolutely no dust, and the regular winds sweep the street well cleaned of all the dirt which comes from side streets. In one year no attention had been given the streets by the street department, as compared to the Alpena street sweeping.

Several prominent citizens have intimated to the Alpena-News that if the bituliths pavement would endure even brick pavement, advancing the theory that there was practically no wear to the pavement because of its resilience, the pavement moving with the road instead of standing rigid, as would be the case with other materials on a hard pavement will chip, while an elastic pavement will not.

Bituliths pavement would appear to be as rigid as possible when it is considered that there is seldom more than ten per cent of bitumen in the material and yet, like steel, the City street per cent being constant since varying in size from one thousandth of an inch to one and one-half inches. This is natural at a temperature of 200 degrees Fahrenheit, the proportions being predetermined by laboratory tests.

Sir Mason Dunham of Cadillac, who is at present attopping at the Iaeln house, is enthusiastic in his praise of bituliths pavement, a long stretch of it having been laid in his city the last year.

Several local people have custom plated building walks and driveways of the bituliths pavement, and it is a certainty that there will be a great rise in the number in the near future.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Ice still covers the bay and lake to a depth of 18 inches, so dog team from Cross Village. The weather being so warm and the lake still open, excursions to Beaver Island from Petoskey had to cut down six with the rest of the world to keep old enough to permit Capt. Campbell to get here with our mail and make the regular round. We will therefore accept the fact with the best grace possible, and await Capt. Pete's pleasure, meanwhile getting our news of the out side world through side trips and stray mail leaks which have been floating out of Chicago by the place two weeks, as well as the foreign passing on which our day sailing fleet had frequently.

Farmers are anxiously waiting the arrival of their seed potatoes, most of them having been planted all placed and harrowed and nearly fit for seed. Our Capt. contributed probably thinks it is time early for sowing peas so the farmers are showing no gentle solicitation.

Noted the seventh arrival in one of the classrooms this week out of a family of six, the single face of Capt. Gaffney and while boarding understanding as we have been heard with the social. It seems that within about 48 hours the family are the happiest of the family. Mother and child are doing well, thanks to the good care they are receiving from Mrs. Capt. Gaffney, and the Captain and family are doing nicely, thanks to the good care they are receiving from Mrs. Capt. Gaffney.

The last time we of Cedarville saw a passing good looking as the gang plank with the tow mate backed to shoving off the Beaver steaming in to passed out of Cedarville harbor on Monday. Handsome, shapely, healthy looking creature the brave captain and tow boy down, naturally, and we took long down upon the tow and Mr. Beaver's and found on Whiskey Island and there passed up in a Chicago's tug. Metal daylight. Tow had should have out on the lake a week or two ago, by big storms it working till the mishap got so bad.

Dazzed and the Devil.

Shortly after the entrance into the Mackinaw Straits of the Chicago and Milwaukee Lake Steamer, Capt. Watts called to the pilot house for a glass of water. Capt. Watts asked as the water for dinner. Capt. Watts asked as the water for dinner. Capt. Watts stepped into the hot tub place of the owner of the Beaver Queen.

The Capt. Michael and Indian Chief are busy taking for Soo ships having little trouble with ice.

Capt. Pat Martin of the tug Martin Warren arrived with his tug Monday morning from Chicago, April 30th, leaving Charlevoix four hours previously. He brought no mail but had a passenger in the person of Mrs. W. Hoyle of this place who had a visit to see her brother in Kansas Springs, the purchaser given.

Capt. Gaffney and his tug D. W. Knapp were in port the 15th, on of discovery the fish and noticed in a long distance the tug Knapp.

Business Automobile reports that the Minnesota has been to and out of Charlevoix, but have it in April if and not too much ice in the bloody.

Land was low coming in by the combination of fog and ice, Jacobs, who are growing thick for 11 days in the ice.

The steamer Silver Spray is down as mail boat during the enforced lay up of the Beaver for Charlevoix.

Frank Stafford, accompanied by his family, is doing business in Traverse City this week.

Mrs. Hume and daughter, master of spring of Mrs. W. Jones in this place, returned to their home in Northport, Monday morning and on Tuesday, for one on the tug.

R. H. Sampson of the Beaver Island business, left last Friday for business on business.

The Schooner Rouse Simmons is loading with two lots barkwood in the Lumber's yards.

The large Pine Lake arrived Monday with a load of Lumber for the Lumber Co.

The Hot Line made its last call one Saturday night for the season.

John Walkinshaw, an employee of the Lumber Co., was struck on the head by a falling limb while at work in the woods on Friday afternoon resulting in a fracture of the skull. Death occurred Sunday afternoon.

All kinds of fishing is excellent here now. Good business for perch and several fish are coming in daily by the tons, perch nets are busted. White fish and trout are abundant.

W. A. Smith, of Charlevoix, calls on business with all business men with a social call on Hy. F. Zogelder Saturday and Sunday.

Easter services were held at Holy Cross church Sunday morning and in the evening at the Union Church.

Rev. Fr. Augustine left for a trip to Grand Rapids and points east Monday morning.

SCHOOL NOTES.

James Frances Dillon will gain a school, date of which is probably in the history course in the school of the senior class. This program will be an "Old Fashion" of some famous readings and music and will, doubt, has been planning that "The Sign of the Cross."

FACTS EXAGGERATED

CONDITION OF POORER CLASSES IN AMERICA.

In Spite of Large Immigration an Consequent Overcrowding Employment is Abundant and the Average of Destitution in Large Cities is Extremely Small.

While on one occasion that the condition of the poorer classes through out the country is far better than our British cousins, who it bothers to find friends in any other country on the face of the globe, yet we hear time time to little most astonishing statements of misery in New York, which if true, are sufficient to call for retribution. We are frequently told that from one to two hundred thousand souls are out of work, that thousands upon upon upon are homeless to redeed every morning and that a small army subsists on a dollar a month. It would not be easy interpreting a little talented man, who was in our country last year, and who, in a few years, gained a fortune, and that many times more than twelve thousand of the population of the metropolis, and a close look at the facts, proves, if true or be subject of charity or other things.

It has been said in one of the papers, in reference of the introduction of a protective tariff that the immense population of this country has been able to enjoy the comfortable and the necessary number of newspapers, who seem to be so enthusiastic as to overall adopted the idea that the Dingley tariff. And we will argue that it would not be exceeding if about half of the people of this country thought some of the papers of the country. Of course the thousand editors that keep the presses every morning, for fortune to secure every morning, for a penny, and the other half, perhaps not absolutely abject.

For some reason these facts have been overlooked in the discussion of the tariff, and the result has been that the tariff has been accused of all the evils of the time. In the discussion of the tariff, Mr. Bryan, Mr. Charles Organ and others, will not be found in the same line, because the tariff is the subject of discussion, and the tariff is the subject of discussion, and the tariff is the subject of discussion, and

OLD PORTRAITS IN HORN.

The Likenesses of Many Historical Characters Thus Preserved.

Most of the specimens that have been handed down to us of impressed horn work, are greatly valued at the time, says the London Queen. Taken from ancient use statements vouching for the early part of the nineteenth, but it was from the middle of the period, about 1750 that the best specimens have been left us.

When the well-dressed lovers in Queen Anne's reign took to carving small boxes this seems to have been in an art production by softening the horn in hot water, and so pressing it into molds, when were typically shepherds and cows of outline. In this way many portraits have been handed down to us no doubt always of some king or other brought prominently forward by the Stuart kind of loyal hero-worship with the Jacobites, and the arms of noted families have been preserved with their portraits.

The two most famous artists in horn work were John Cookson, who was hard at work in Amsterdam in the twenty decade of the seventeenth century, and John Dixon whose handiwork was very extended in England early in the eighteenth.

Tortoise shell horns are hard and wind were treated in the same fashion. The wooden tobacco-boxes so portraits to Germany, and shows very numerous one depicting Louis X. King of France, survives.

Many of the best examples of this horn work are not in silver as the fine large shown at Windsor and Mary.

THOSE IRISH JAP GENERALS

O'Yama and O'Keough Their Real Names—How It All Happened.

New York was again Japanese day was year at the St. Patrick's banquet of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Lexington Ave. South Brooklyn. The enthusiasm of his brethren in a little pinch by Gen. Kuroki and Gen. Yamagata generals, Okama and Oku were reminiscent of Tinkham and Ryan, the national Irish leagues of old time but slightly modified.

Yamata is of Irish ancestry and Kuroki "said he came an original" before he his nationality was O'Yama. The original O'Yama, whose given name was Patrick, left Ireland during the Elizabethan era for reasons he was supposed to be the son of Tyrone and received in a Spanish ship bound for the Philippines. He was taken there and died after.

"The Lieutenant went to Japan and married materials in the country, fashion into. Intermarriage with the natives gave them standing and possession of the throne, which they advanced by their activity in military affairs.

"Gen. Oku's name originally was O'Keough. Gen. Yamagata, a military genius, was a poor hand at spelling. The signs of the Japanese alphabet proved too great for him, and in the permit order he was given permission to call himself by a name. This the family name became Oku."—New York Sun.

FIRST DUEL IN AMERICA.

Fought Between Two Servants in New England in 1621.

The first duel on record in America was fought June 1st, 1621 in Duxbury, between two servants who fought with swords and daggers and both were wounded. They were sentenced to have their hands and feet tied together, and to be twenty-four hours without meat or drink. In 1728, one young man killed another in this manner in a night duel with swords. The survivor escaped from the country, and a severe law against dueling was enacted. During the Revolutionary wars there were a number of duels Charles Lee and John Laurens fought, and the former was wounded. Lee was a major of the Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia. Gen. Green was twice challenged, but refused to fight. Gen. Washington appointed Lee to the command of the Continental Army, and Lee was taken prisoner. Hamilton was slain by Aaron Burr.

Chamber now the burning days
Of the sweet-tongued Queen of Praise
Like the sound of some sweet song
Come to me long ago
Where it may hide away
Till I can find it, I know not how
Among all these pots and pans.

No hand is down the stairs to hear.
No hand to smooth the tangled hair
Nor any one to make that laugher
The lonesome in the one room.
I long to hear the patter
Of little feet in the hallway
And listen to hear it
But still he hath not fallen away
Only a little while, I know
Yet it seems long to me
They always do I guess
He is passed a little while ago and sup
And been a little nation up

Too Realistic.

The miner of the story packed a pack mule across at Cape Nome. He had his companions had for a year or more, but only barely given, at a place known for their size and stature. Then both, when all were asleep, the man in question was awakened by a light nibbling on his face. The cold was intense, and not caring to move unless it was necessary he lay still. Again the light nibbling on his cheek. He got up on his hands and his fingers came in contact with a small object in the bushes of his beard. A companion roused to the investigation endeavored, but failed. A candle and reveal-gated.

The mouse had selected the beard as a warm and eligible site for a temporary home and had built a good nest and other brought prominently forward. The Stuart kind of loyal hero-worship with the Jacobites, and the arms of noted families have been preserved with their portraits.

NO EXTRA TARIFF SESSION.

New York Newspapers in Error in Quoting Secretary Shaw.

It turns out that the New York Herald and the New York Sun of March 21 were in error in stating that Secretary Shaw had announced the promulgation of the President to call an extra session of Congress some time in October or early in November, to consider a readjustment of the tariff schedules. Secretary Shaw on the following day denied that he had made no such announcement. He is reported to the Detroit Sun as saying:

The question whether or not the President would call an extra session of Congress was entirely a matter for consider either the regular session of the session of the 58th Congress and adjourn, and if such a question had been asked I would not have ventured to express an opinion as to what the President would do.

The statement may be safely accepted as emphatically negativing the assumption that the President had so indicated anybody to say that he had fully decided to convene a special session of Congress. The opening up of the question of the revision of an extra session is of course much more in the air now. The President has not gathered his advisers together, and it is not authoritatively known that he intends such action.

The Herald was equally wide of the mark when it said:

It looks now as if the Senate Finance Committee, in the absence of the chairman, Senator Aldrich, who is abroad, had been in the city when Monday conferring with representatives of various trades and in consultation in relation to the proposed revision.

The last thing in outlook that which has not been made public is that the Republican party intends to revise the tariff schedules without regard to the tariff question will be in the market. Members are now busy in preparing schedules but from the same source we learn that no one knows how long it will take to revise the tariff schedules. Every member has been waiting for some to take the lead. Mr. Aldrich is the man.

From his return to Washington he appears to be considerably at sea. Senator New York Senator Senator Allison was "knocked to pieces" by the unexpected news of getting the Senate Finance Committee to work on the tariff that it might have a report ready for use on the meeting of Congress relative to the revenues. If the Government, we can readily believe that the Iowa Senator was somewhat upset at the information that he was engaged in a tariff revising still hung. Mr. Allison is only the nominal the act Senator. Senator Aldrich, the real chairman of the committee, who will return from Europe in a few days. Moreover again the Senate cannot estimate revenue until it is enacted, and to change in a single paragraph of the tariff act of to Senator Allison would not be in view of the purpose to tamper lightly with the work of the House regarding the Senate's correction of House revisions, have a tendency to improve matters.

Evolution of Synonyms.

At first it was tariff reform; then tariff amendment. The Republican machine played with it all Chicago tariff adjustment. It has been tariff revision; then tariff revising and tariff reduction. Now they speak of it as tariff "correction." They are still the words alternately "revision," "revision," "adjustment," "revision," "revision." Also the words "rate, tear, cut, carve, slash, cook and lacerate." It is time we too sooner they might use the words scratch, scrape, scarify, cross slash or castrate to say nothing of tickle or titillate. On the whole, perhaps the two will come nearer being right than any of the others and tariff "tinking" or tariff "titillation" may be the words to use in speaking of the "tariff revision"—Hill that Tribune.

Better the Devil Known.

President Roosevelt heard a Philadelphia newspaper say he was not yet informed whether or not he knew enough at his test the passage to Congress which such "Revise" is a different and present threatening than a house full of carelessness with which the President could not to have and correct. We shall have the utility, and house full of ignorance also sacrifice, just as soon as the tariff tinkering outbreak is consummated. The President should hesitate to give the signal to the house advocate, greatly over by Uncle "Joe" Cannon—Pittsburg Press.

At the Expense of Americans.

Judge Taft thinks that the Philippines can be made more prosperous by sacrificing some of our home interests to them. Thus the tariff bill, in favor of which he spoke so warmly, proposes to sacrifice the sugar industry of Louisiana and the sugar beet growers of the West in order to stimulate the cultivation of cane in our Pacific colonies, and to shelter rubber, the tobacco, fruit and other American products with a tax of 25 per cent. The failure of the Philippine tariff bill is sufficient evidence that Congress did not take this wonderfully altruistic view of the case. But not one in the widest of suitable Philippine the expense of Americans—New Orleans Times.

Canada Wants Men of It.

The Canadian premier, Mr. Wilfrid Laurier, has politely informed Washington that it will be "impossible for the Joint High Commission to reconvene." Canada is somewhat too dignified to confess the offer to write anything under existing conditions. After repeated rebuffs from our side our northern neighbor has at last become indifferent to the whole matter of better trade relations with us. Instead, Canada has turned to cultivating commercial independence through a protective tariff of her own and to cultivating closer relations with the mother country by preferential duties.—Buffalo (Me) Press.

TRADE WITH GERMANY.

Not Likely a Retaliation Policy Will Be Adopted.

There is a marked tendency among close observers of international trade relations at present to place the blame for recent feeling between the United States and Germany. The probability of such an event, if it come, will be the result of the new tariff law which the Germans have adopted.

For some years American trade has enjoyed the benefits of the most favored nation clause, as a result of a treaty agreement with Germany. As a consequence, the agricultural interests of Germany have felt the competition of our American products, and now, for many reasons, have succeeded in obtaining a tariff law which practically shuts out the favors which they have received. There is no reason to expect that concessions will be made and that a new agreement will be entered into between the two countries which will restore the old conditions. This would be against the interest of the agricultural classes of Germany.

Moreover the United States would be unreasonable from making a special concession which would increase our trade at a disadvantage to the American manufacturer because of the necessity of meeting the trade competition of England. The latter country receives no preferential treatment in Germany. It is the land to great specific favors to European nations, the German government would stipulate some of the tariff concessions which it has made to Austria, Germany and Italy. Germany, however, is not in a position to make such a demand upon the United States, and it is probable that the tariff will be put into effect without modification.

It may be admitted that some attempt will be taken by Congress which it may draw on the merits of the question of tariff revision in light of that time. It would be hazardous in the extreme, however, to assume what the action will be—Milwaukee Journal.

Give Business a Chance.

The prompt correction by President Shaw of the erroneous statement issued from Washington to the effect that the President had tacitly acquiesced upon bringing the tariff question up for an extra session of Congress to the delight of Democrats of this state was timely and welcome. Neither the President nor the Secretary of the Treasury entertained any such idea. Experience in starting the business world with an announcement of this kind six or seven months ahead of time. To do this would only hasten and prolong a period of suspense and uncertainty that will prove injurious enough for the good of business when Congress shall have convened and actually begun the revision of the tariff. What it would be to announce the business world that the tariff would be considered in the near future. Such an announcement would be practically disastrous.

The fact is that no emergency in the affairs of business industry demands such a special session. The revenues now available either through a postponement of this matter or that the revenues are small indeed, when compared with the vast volume of the list of production, of trade and of business. The revenues are sufficient enough tariff upheaval. It has been said that there is nothing to fight as a million dollars coming to be laid upon the dollars. Capital is bold enough under conditions of normal stability to assemble several million dollars to the cause of unemployment.

When the assured prospect of unknown and unreasonable tariff changes is thrown into the well of right months would capital be bold or timid? There would be but one answer to the question. Many hundreds of millions already invested will hesitate to venture on contracts for future production and delivery. Business cannot survive trade upheavals and changing conditions.

Canada's Tariff Policy.

If Canada should adopt a tariff approximating that of the United States greatly many of those who have taken a policy merely as a measure of retaliation would be a disgrace to a progressive and the good effects of adequate protection that they would see which to reduce the tariff even if the United States should offer to reciprocate. The true protectionist does not believe in the principle of "reciprocity of tariffs," but holds that the tariff should be based on the needs of his own country regardless of what other nations may do. It would be good policy for Canada to adopt a tariff approximating that of the United States, not as a measure of retaliation, but because the tariff of the United States has demonstrated that such a policy is conducive to building up home industries of all kinds, developing natural resources and creating a home market for farmers.—Industrial Canada.

Tariff and Politics.

Before we can talk of repeal and revision of the tariff question it must be taken out of politics. The people of the country must come to a common tariff ground. Either the Democrats must abandon free trade or the Republicans forsake their protective ideas. With the country agreed on the principle of the tariff, the time of which it should be for an adjustment of the schedules would be not so difficult. We have fell pray—Trenton Gazette.

"Black Sheep" of Well-Known Family Manipulates Evidence and Lands Himself in Toils—Original Torpedo Hold-Deatmann, Wanted in Brief.

A sensational $15,000 robbery committed some time ago in the home of Mrs. Thomas Emery, of Avondale Hills, Cincinnati, is unearthed in a letter in New York Journal. It is said to be the "black sheep" of a well-known family. The letter was received from a young man who is now in Chicago. It reads:

"Without a doubt, the most daring robbery of valuables ever made was known as Emery Jewel Robbery. It happened about a year ago. Mrs. Emery lived in Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio. Her husband was a prominent capitalist with the power to wield his wealth in a big way and was adopted. Her western railroad president, Mr. Hoyt, of Cincinnati, a lifelong friend, uncle and of course, we all know he is everything a good person ought to be.

"Well, I was the black sheep of the family. Mrs. Emery's father was a millionaire, and I was her favorite nephew. I was known as Emery Jewel Robbery. I was a gambler and a bad boy. Traverse City Record. The committee on grounds and buildings, of the board of supervisors, have made arrangements to have the new 75 foot flag staff in place on court square, ready to receive the handsome new flag which was recently presented to Mc Pherson Post by the W. R. C., on May 30, Memorial day. Hon F. W. Mayne of Charlevoix, circuit judge of this circuit, has been engaged as speaker of the day on that occasion. It is intended to run a rope from an upper story window in the court house to the new flag staff, and from the rope the large 35x60 feet flag, owned by the G. A. R., will be hung as a background for the speaker. It will be something new and the effect will be very striking.

Traverse City Eagle: Robert D. Agosa of Northport, was in the city today on his way home from a business trip to Manistee, Frankfort and Ludington, where he went on matters pertaining to the claim of the Chippewa and Ottawa Indians, in regard to moneys at Washington to be divided among them. Mr. Agosa succeeded in securing the signature of 10 Indians who are in some of the papers, and these names will be taken to Washington, D. C., by their attorney, C. A. Pull Snap of Petoskey. At present there is about $62,000 on hand at the United States treasury to be divided between these two tribes. Mr. Agosa thinks that the prospects for a satisfactory settlement with the government are very bright.

MARINE NOTES.

The gasoline boats are now making two trips per day.

The steamer Silver Spray goes to Manistique to dock for re-caulking.

The steamer Beaver sailed to North Manitou Island Saturday to dredge a dock front.

The U. S. lighthouse tender Dahlia was to port Huron Could Thursday and Friday of last week.

Chas. Noves left Monday for Manistique as an oiler engineer of the N. M. Trans. Co.'s steamer Kansas.

The new steamer Tuscan arrived again from Escanaba Tender night. This time, on a draught of fifteen feet she came up the river all right.

The steamer Searchlight, of the Petoskey Harbor Springs ferry line was here Tuesday on her way to Escanaba where she has been charter for two months about some 15th to transport Escanaba and Gladstone.

The Schooner H. P. Mason, with 60,000 feet of hardwood from Gladstone, was towed down and out Manistique recently. A tug from Cedar River worked unsuccessfully all day following. The crew went ashore at the local west to passes.

Supervising Inspector H. W. Scott, of the eighth district, is determined that all steamboat inspectors must enforce the new inspection rules, and threatens that violators will loose their licenses as soon as they are found out. He has issued a sharp letter to local inspectors. He intends later to make a personal inspection to see the local inspectors are obeying the rules.

The steamer being prepared which will give the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co. the largest sidewheeler of marine propeller on the world. The new boat will coal about 2000 tons and it is fitted to have her running be tween Detroit and Cleveland early in June, 1906. The new steamer will have an excursion capacity of 1,500 passengers on regular trips. A thousand tons of freight will be needed for a cargo. There will be 320 state rooms and 20 parlors with baths. The new boat will have 6,000 horse power. A speed of 23 to 24 knots an hour will be maintained by the mammoth fliers, which will enable it to make the run between Detroit and Cleveland in about five hours.

"Well," said the woman, sadly, "I'm very bitter indeed to my Aunt Leslie for thinking that have not behaved as she treated me—seeing I did not want that. I mentioned the matter to her and went home on consulting I was quite prepared for some little disagreeable remarks from her; but I never saw a more astonished face than hers when I told her what I had done. I suppose she had expected a little angry lecture about the folly of throwing away a good situation for a mere whim. Well, I don't care; I feel much happier now that I have left the place. Of course, I shall have to look out for another situation, but I don't mind that. I shall be able to get a situation in a shop, I dare say, if I can't get anything else. She thinks I ought to be grateful to her for having taken me into her house when I was left without a friend in the world; but I don't see that I owe her anything for that. I was her dead brother's child, and I was her nearest relation, and I was left without a friend in the world, and I had to go somewhere. I don't see that I owe her anything for that. I don't see that I owe her anything for having taken me into her house when I was left without a friend in the world; and I don't see that I owe her anything for having treated me as she did afterwards. I don't mind that; I don't mind anything; I feel much happier now that I have left the place. I shall be able to get a situation in a shop, I dare say, if I can't get anything else. I don't care what I do, so long as I am not with my aunt. I feel much happier now that I have left her house

SOME COINCIDENCES

BAD BUNDLE OF FACTS FOR TARIFF REVISIONISTS.

Nine Millions a Year Added to the Wages of Steel Workers—Average English Price of Rails for the Past Five Years as High as in This Country.

One can imagine the outlines of an argument and chapter exploranded by the commercial students of tariff reform and the strenuous advocates of tariff revision when they read the following, reported to the New York Times:

Pittsburg, March 31.—The boards of 75,000 workmen in the Pittsburg district were made glad tonight by notices posted in the different mills of the United States Steel Corporation to the effect that at the close of the day the men would be working on a readjustment of wages.

"This means they are about to receive a raise in wages long expected, and which no doubt will enable them their wage claim from the New York office, it is understood it means an average increase of 10 per cent for common labor to 5 and 7½ per cent for the various skilled men, in other words, it is the intention of the big corporation to put the men back into the next year about December on had the money which the workmen lost and within the last eighteen months through cuts.

"The plants where notices of the readjustment were posted are as follows: American Bridge Works, National Tube Works, Lorain steel company, Ohio, Upper Union Iron Mill, Pittsburg, Duquesne Furnaces, Carrie Furnaces, Homestead Mill, Homestead steel, Wonder Tinplate and Steel Works, American Steel & Wire Company Youngstown Steel Works, Girard (Ohio) Mills and the works of the American Tin Plate Company.

"The action of the United States Steel Corporation in granting wage increases is the choice of annual wages to 75,000 Americans, is the result of the tariff reform point of view most comprehensive. It seems to have run a purpose on the part of that great corporation to share its profits and its prosperity with all the men of workmen in its employ. This action comes from trade organizations, it can be done and is being done. Yet it can be done and has been done, in fact, it is always done at a time when expenses of large employment, and substantial profits under protection.

"For 37 to date with wrong time and tariff revisionists, tariff reformers and the tariff revisionists are had fully convinced upon a heavy reduction, if not the complete removal, of the tariff on iron and steel. They say the burden of their consumption, the king pin of their well last scheme of tariff reform. Now comes a big increase in wages, a big increase in the purchasing power of 75,000 men and steel workers, amounting to $9,000,000 a year. It is very welcomed on both sides, and we have such a thing happen as fresh a time.

"It is almost or somewhere almost as gratifying as was the shocking that to the effect that the Pittsburg, Kansas & Washburn declared could be sold at a profit at $16 per ton there was $18.75 worth of pig iron alone, to say nothing of the other ingredients, the fuel, the waste and the labor involved in converting a ton and a quarter of pig iron into a ton of steel rails. This is all wrong. It cannot not to be so." To prove it Mr. Washburn from being made to look like a nonsensical pig iron ought to have been selling at $12 instead of $16.75, and there should have been no such things as other ingredients, fuel, labor and waste involved in the production of steel rails.

"Then, again there is the undeniable fact that in the last five years, commencing with 1900, the price of steel rails in free trade England has been practically the same as in the United States. In 1900 and 1901 the English price was considerably higher than the American price, while the average for the whole five years quite seems almost identically the same in both countries.

"All these things make up a bad bundle for the tariff reformer and the tariff revisionist. It almost seems as though its bad bundle had accumulated to compel meddling fools to let the tariff alone.

Protection's Aim.

"It has been argued conspicuously by the high protectionists of the United States that American goods at every description could be dumped upon the foreign markets indiscriminately, and as long as desired. This argument receives a fade-away by the recent action of many European governments.—Boston Globe.

The high protectionists hold as such view and entertain no such opinion. They do not believe that with the existing standard of wages and the standard of living established by protection it is the natural or normal function of this country to do the manufacturing for the rest of the world. They know better. The aim of protection is to insure the benefits of the home market to domestic labor and manufacture, and to make home always the main consideration. That accomplished, foreign trade comes in voluntarily and as an auxiliary, a minor factor. Under protection foreign trade has constantly gained in bulk and importance until today the United States is more than its share of the world's trade, and more than its share of its population of international trade. Exports of manufactures produce low quality on the average, and if exports of food products and raw materials show a falling off it is because of high prices and an increased demand for home consumption and use. Protection points to present conditions of unalloyed prosperity at home trade as the result of world trade as exceeding the highest recorded achievement in commercial enterprise. With that protection was well about to be settled. It is not borrowing any trouble about foreign tariffs nor losing any sleep about foreign trade.

SHARE OF THE TRUST

A RATHER SMALL PROPORTION OF OUR INCREASED WEALTH.

Out of the Average Annual Increase of Wealth Amounting to $3,400,000,000, the Portion of the Trusts is Only About One-Fourteenth of the Whole.

In the hand of tariff reformers Republicans and Democratic alike, to be made shame upon the assertion that the gross gain of domestic gain in nation is unprecedented by trusts, and that the prosperity born in previous economy is so small that it is proper to ignore them altogether in stating the effect of tariff reduction as a cause remote. This idea is a good and palpable error is well demonstrated by an editorial in the New York Times dealing with the issue in connection in The Weekly Times, for magazine.

Already you can come upon the fingers of the trust for issues that are wholly other than our tariff in the entire increase in wealth.

"The fact is, the Times is declining to propagate idea into our wages in the examination and analysis of this such statement. Certainly the Times cannot be ignorant of the information to put "Free Trade" to another that the tariff in the matter of trusts. Were the Times more to do it gets at the real facts as to the share which the trusts have in the industrial output of the country! finds that according to the Report of the Industrial Commission, the total value of the products of the country in 1900 was $13,000,000,000 in round numbers, and that the combinations of capital paid out in wages for

BAD BUNDLE OF FACTS FOR TARIFF REVISIONISTS.

Nine Millions a Year Added to the Wages of Steel Workers—Average English Price of Rails for the Past Five Years as High as in This Country.

One can imagine the feelings of astonishment and chagrin experienced by the conscientious members of tariff reform and the strenuous advocates of tariff revision when they read the following dispatch to the New York Press:

PITTSBURG, March 31.—The hearts of 25,000 workmen in the Pittsburg district were made glad enough to entirely patch in the different mills of the United States Steel Corporation in the shape of a notice that on the day the men could be working on a readjustment of wages.

This means that the men must be paid a raise in wages from current and while no details are forthcoming yet they might come from the New York office, it is understood it means an average increase of 10 per cent for nearly 25,000 men in the mills, for the various skilled men, in other words, it is the intention of the new corporation to pay back wages within next year about $9,000,000 or half the money which the company has lost within the last eighteen months through cuts.

The plants affect neither of the readjustment were posted are as follows: Jones and Laughlin Steel (formerly Ohio Upper and Lower Duquesne, Miscellaneous, Monongahela Carnegie Company, Beaver Falls, Homestead Steel Works, Jacobs, Scott Works American Steel & Wire Company, Youngstown Steel Tube Giraff (Ohio) Mills and the works of the American Tin Plate Company.

This action of the United States Steel Corporation is regarded as the beginning to the end of lower wages in the American mills from the tariff reform point of view most reprehensible. It seems in fact cause a purpose on the part of that great corporation to share in profits and the prosperity which it owes to the workers on its payrolls. This according to free trade authorities can not be done and is every man. Yet it can be done and has been done. In fact, it is always done as a direct consequence of large employment and substantially useful profit-producing.

But it is done at the worst time and under irritating circumstances. The tariff reformers and the tariff revisionists had fully determined upon a heavy reduction. If not the total removal of the tariff on iron and steel. This was the bulwark of their contention, the king pin of their well laid scheme of tariff ripping. Now comes a big increase in wages, a big increase in the purchasing power of carbon iron and steel workers, amounting to $9,000,000 a year. It is confessedly a very embarrassing piece of luck such a thing happens at such a time.

It is almost as annoying almost as mortifying as was the shawing that in the April issue of the Atlantic Monthly, it declared could be sold at a profit at $16 per ton steel rails which at one time not long ago sold for $28 per ton. Yet the fact is all wrong. It might not be so at all. To prevent Mr. Wanamaker from being made to look like a numbskull pig iron could to have been selling at $12 instead of $16.50, and labor should have been as much, things as other ingredients, fuel labor and waste involved in the production of steel rails.

Then again there is the unpleasant fact that in the last five years, commencing with 1897, the price of steel rails in free trade England has been practically the same as in the United States. In 1897 and 1898 the English price was considerably higher than the American price, while the average price in the last five years approximates almost identically the same in both countries.

All these things make up a bad bundle for the tariff reformer and the tariff reviser. It almost seems as though events had conspired and combined in compact modelling footsteps to let the tariff alone.

Protection's Aim.

"It has been argued conclusively by the high protectionists of the United States that American goods of every description could be doubled in the foreign markets indefinitely and, as fast as created. This argument receives a rude shock by the recent action of many European governments.—Boston Globe.

The high protectionists hold to such view and entertain no such expectation. They do not believe that with the existing standard of wages and the standard of living established by protection it is the natural or normal function of this country to do the manufacturing for the rest of the world. They know better. The aim of protection is to insure the benefits of the home market to domestic labor and production, to make home trade always the main consideration. That accomplished, foreign trade comes incidentally and as an auxiliary, a minor factor. Under protection foreign trade has constantly grown in bulk and importance, until today the United States has more than its usual per capita proportion of the international trade. Reports of manufactured products are steadily on the increase, and if exports of food products and raw materials show a falling off it is because of high prices and an increased demand for home consumption and use. Protection points to present conditions of assured control of home trade and a home market the world trade as exhibiting the highest standard achievement in commercial economics. With that protection can well afford to be satisfied. It is not sorrowing any trouble about foreign tariffs nor being any sleep about foreign trade.

Out of the Average Annual Increase of Wealth Amounting to $3,000,000,000, the Portion of the Trusts is Only About One-Fourteenth of the Whole.

"It is the hand of tariff reformers, Republican and Democratic alike, to lay which upon the protection that the great bulk of domestic goods or those a competitor for trade, and that the proposition before the national Congress is in itself that it is proper to ignore these arguments for clinging the effect of tariff reduction as a reason. That this is a strong and palpable error is well demonstrated in an editorial in the New York Times jostling with the initial statements in Tom Watson's Populist magazine.

"Already, one can mount from the pages of our times the trusts that an equally different name than that of the entire increase in wealth.

The Sun says: "It is a great mistake to parallel bills limited any value in the aggregate and annually, in full each succeeding Congress. Times cannot be assured of an open, free, no artificial or unfair competition. Times cannot be assured of an open, free, no artificial or unfair competition. The tariff is the mother of trusts

CENSUS EXPERTS WATCH CENTER OF POPULATION.

Claim that Movement of People Westward Is Decreasing and East and South Are Filling Up Confluence Is Still Many Miles Away.

Experts in the United States census bureau are supplied by telegraph with the results of the census in the various towns and cities of the country as soon as the figures are tabulated. Some of the most interesting figures thus furnished are those showing the center of population, which is now, according to the census of 1900, in Bartlett, Indiana, more than 50 miles west of the city of Indianapolis. It is a matter of some importance to know the center of population, for it is from this point that the census experts can tell whether the population is moving east, west, north or south. In the census report of 1900 the center of population was located in Indiana for the first time. The census experts have been at work on the census of 1910 for some time, and it is expected that the center of population will be located in Indiana for the second time. CONFESSES KILLING MAYOR.

Great Prairie Owner Is Staying the Executive of Beaudette, Minn.

Fort Frances, Ontario, Special.—The district of Rainy River is agitated over the murder of Mayor Hume, the Governor of Angel island in the Rainy lake, and the capture of the murderer, who is one of the Kooseys band of Indians, who live on the Kooseys and Nelson rivers, in the district of Kootenay, in the province of British Columbia. The murder has been suspected for some time, but it was not known that the murderer had been captured and brought to Fort Frances, on the Canadian side of the Rainy lake, until Monday. The murderer was captured and brought to Fort Frances by Constable Ward, of the Royal Northwest mounted police, who arrived in Fort Frances on Monday morning with the prisoner. The murderer is a half breed Indian, and he confesses that he killed Mayor Hume because he was angry at the Mayor because he had taken his land from him and given it to a white man.

OLD BREACH HEALED.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN BAPTISTS MEET TOGETHER.

First Time Since the Civil War That National Convention of Denomination Is Held—Reformers Makes Novel Attempt to Stop Sunday Ball Games.

The Baptists of America began their annual session in Los Angeles, Cal., last week. The convention is composed of delegates from all parts of the country. The Baptists are strong in the South, and the convention was held there for the first time since the Civil war. The old breach between the Northern and Southern Baptists was healed at the convention. Rev. Frank Gunsaulus, of Chicago, made a strong appeal for a reunion of the Baptists of the North and South, and his appeal was responded to by a vote of the convention. The Baptists are the second largest denomination in the United States, the Methodists being the largest. The Baptists have 5,000,000 members in the United States, and the Methodists 5,500,000. The Baptists are strong in the South, and the Methodists are strong in the North. The Baptists are the only denomination that has not been divided since the Civil war. THE GRANGE FOR FARMERS.

A Good Suggestion For Many Granges to Adopt.

Some one asks what a grange should do where through death, removal and change of business the membership comes to be composed largely of village people who have little interest in farming. My suggestion would be to work such a grange somewhat along the lines of a village mercantile society, says Hiram A. Whittaker in the New Hampshire Farmer. Study trade trusts and ways for farm. Work for a law against fraudulent adulterations of the food. Interest the members in the care of schoolhouse grounds, cemetery, the common and other public grounds. Make it a point to improve roads and be a general spirit of civic pride about the premises of farm. Try to make your town more beautiful. Such work is closely allied to agriculture, using the word in its broader sense. Plenty of agricultural for the young people to sell, but remember that the village has a serious job and its prosperity is its opportunity as well. If the members are not interested in cultivating fruit fields, do what you can for the most successful cultivation of the roadside trees, the cemetery shrubs the village lawns, the glass of the lawns. In this way you are carrying the grange principles.

But I insist that in the original table of members the grange should be a farm grange, and I am sure that in a majority of instances it is. Let a number of independent farmers get together and organize by the Grange form of the order. Let them work in the grange because they want to be benefited. I admit that such a grange should be made up of active business men, and not mere sentimentalists. It should be composed of men who are ready to work for practical results. Let the grange be a school for practical discussion, where the members can learn how farm business can be made to pay, and how farm life can be made more attractive. Let the grange become the center of all the social life of the farm. Let it be a school for the training of the young people in self-reliance, in the development of the individual.

Dozen of Ex-Governor Lore.

The Michigan state grange, through its lecturer, one of the officials of the state agricultural society and a leading worker in the Order, ex-Governor Lore, whose death occurred a few weeks ago.

Its library, chairman of the executive committee of the New York state grange, has been appointed to the board of state fair commissioners by Governor Odell.

The Grange Is Popular.

There never has been such a call for grange work in our section as at the present time. The mother's office is in constant receipt of letters from outlying of the state where the grange is little known, and the first speakers we sent there to preach grange gospel. This is the message New York sends to other states.

Gorham grange, Fulton county, recently conferred degrees upon a class of thirty-nine in the Junior division of Pomona, the grange was organized a year ago, with forty-seven members, and now numbers 93.

WHY JOIN THE GRANGE?

A Few Reasons, Specifically Stated, That Should Appeal.

Why should I join the grange? What will I get out of it?

You should join the grange because it is a great educational organization and you are a farmer, second, organization you can promote proper legislation in the state and national assemblies, then, you will come into close contact with the best men and women your profession, and only contact will produce and strengthen and refine you. Sixth, it will create possible contacts in helping enterprise and in setting up ideals for your boys and girls. Seventh, educational institutions exist in an inefficient, little, slipshod way make good society better and prosperity go along.

You will get big out of it. You will have your horizon lifted to where you behold your profession as it exists as a unit of our country, and, in such superior light, you will be able to take other books, the grange represents a organized, and you will be able to see the relation of your business to the institutions with which it has come into contact.

Could you ignore years this? Would one this subject you to look on the grange?

How and when were conferences in the idea that so some other work in the grange, and the work in the social social state. They are to the grange work, and the work in the grange work, and the work in the grange work, and the work in

DECLINING RURAL POPULATION.

Population Increasing in Towns and Decreasing in Country Districts.

A recent State census indicates that while the town and city population of Illinois is increasing, every county is decreasing. Growth is cited as a sign of prosperity, and yet the census shows that the country must, in spite of the increase, be depopulated. In 1890 the population of Illinois was 3,826,351, in 1895 it was 4,039,507, and in 1900, 4,821,550. There are fewer people on the farms in 1900 than there were in 1890. Illinois is not the only State in which the country is losing people. The same tendency is observed in Missouri and Iowa, and it is probably true of all the States. One cause of the loss of farm population is the increased value of land. Many of the young generation of farmers have gone West to take up lands at cheap rates, and to land increase and turn money and to land increase. Farm lands are selling at from $100 to $125 per acre, it will be remembered, in Iowa. In Illinois they cost from $100 to $125 per acre, it will be seen, in Nebraska. The world is ever moving, and the tendency is to make the best of the world. The population of Illinois is now 4,821,550, and it is a good thing. The Blood prayer is the realization of the perfect relations of the All Father with all the children.

THE CHILDHOOD OF CHRIST.

By Rev. T. Dwight Timms, D. D.

Text—"And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him."—Luke 2:40.

By humbling himself to wear the likeness of men the Son of God became a brother to the human race, and, at the same time, he entered into a special family relation. By this birth, Christ, the Incarnate God, was made a member of the human family. He was born of a woman, but a member of the family of Abraham, a son of the royal house of David, and a son according to the law. He became subject to all the feelings with which we are familiar, and to all the ties, but some facts are recording worthy of the highest significance and of the most intelligent study. Christ was born in Bethlehem, in the stable, and there were merely no accommodations for him in the inn. It was not a place of comfort, and yet it was a place of great honor. It was not a place of comfort, and yet it was a place of great honor. It was not a place of comfort, and yet it was a place of great honor

A $7,000 GRANGE HALL.

Prosperous New York Granger Has New Home.

West Hoosick (N. Y.) grange recently dedicated a new grange hall which will remain favorably with the best halls in the state. The time chosen for the dedication is the last week of the anniversary of the organization of the grange, which occurred in June, and as a matter of interest at today has been 42 members in good standing. The new hall is 30x60 feet and is two stories above the ground. The lifting crew, and which was the Hoosick, which is located in a convenient place and is substantial above ground in plan, grade of 7 feet. The first floor is fitted up for a public hall and could hold 500 comfortably with 300 fine opera chairs, a stage with curtains and other fixtures and a good piano. The second floor is entirely for grange purposes and is fitted with large anterooms and dens, rooms also with the ceiling of the grange hall proper is 16x30 feet, with eaves four ceiling. The building is lighted also in gas light, the model ceiling gives the room a very cozy appearance. The cost of the building, including the lot, was $7,000, of which sum raised to subscribed contributions to the building fund, the balance being paid by the grange. The hall was opened for public inspection on the day of the dedication, the occasion of the joint meeting of the Patrons of Husbandry of Rensselaer and Washington counties. Over 1,000 were present.

Grange Undertaking.

There is no end to the further of the grange that can be made quite prominent than the observance of its anniversary occasions. These should be for as a Patrons's Day, be in the hands of the chairter members, and all those who have ever been active should be invited to attend. Grange committees in offices managed by a meeting of this kind and suggestions may be brought back who for various reasons have changed out of the order during the present year there will come in New Hampshire many interesting incidents, and sentiment, with anecdotes, some of which should be recorded in a by without be observing of it. Hardly.

Members Profitable Contests.

Michigan's experimental contests in schoolhouse and Patrons grange for best report of farm products grown this season. The student this season will be confined to corn, potatoes and sweet corn, and produced on two acres of acres of ground. The contest is open to all graduate Juvenile contests in a county or Pomona called the winners in which again compete in a district contest.

One hundred and five granges were organized and reorganized in the first quarter of 1905. The leading states were as follows: Vermont, 15; Ohio, 14; Michigan, 13; Massachusetts, 11; New York, 10.

A Sharp Voice.

"Mr. Bunker has a rather sharp voice, hasn't she?"

"Sharp? Well, it's a voice that cuts most any thing. She was at the theater one night in a box seat and talked so loud all through the play, and finally the manager sent a messenger boy to march drawing very loud, saying that he would not be able to go on if the noise didn't stop. The boy came out, he was the usher and said that if he saw falling in one of the boxes didn't stop the play couldn't go on, and the audience applauded wildly."

What not New Hampshire Grange? The we not that she cut out the last two nets and then cut for home.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Sweet Potato King."

H. F. Watson, the wood potato king of Tuscaloosa, last year raised 6,000 bushels of sweet potatoes and this year he will plant fifty acres to that crop. Mr. Watson intends to use practically every potato raising region in California, and the acreage will be much larger than ever before. He is sanguine of a good crop.

It Depended.

"Bobby, if I were to give Willie $5 to spend, would you have much would you give?"

"I guess, but I think I could lick half of it out of him."

MACHEN SAYS GUILTY

THE EX-POSTAL EMPLOYE SENTENCED ON NEW CHARGE.

Takes Two Years Longer Imprisonment in Prison—Confession of Indictments Not Was Filled in Home—Explosion in Columbus, Ohio.

Agent W. Machen, under sentence of two years imprisonment for embezzlement of postal funds, pleaded guilty in Washington to an indictment charging him with the larceny of a letter which was at once sentenced to an additional two years imprisonment. Several other indictments involving similar charges will be seen. It seems that Machen begged the prosecution of the case in private. He said to Mr. Bristow at the time he made his formal plea of guilty and the reporters were not present, that he thought the prisoner who have visited defrauded of letters by Machen and sensitive friends and it would be an unpleasant publicity to make this addition. Although I do not directly or indirectly interfere with the prosecution of the committee that received and considered the respective bills under which the prisoner set forth to the indictment was wanted and convicted, yet I know as much as any person and also of the profits accruing from it. I feel and know at the time that I was guilty of the law. With all the force and earnestness in my command I do not think that any plea shall not affect the interests of the other defendants, under the indictment.

BATTLE WITH RIVER PIRATES.

New York Harbor Police Make Gallant Raid—Many Shots Fired.

A battle was fought in the upper part of harbor police and a band of river pirates in New York resulted in the capture of the latter and the recovery of five boats stolen from the harbor craft. The fight was a fierce affair lasted half an hour, the police firing more than a hundred shots. Not one of the pirates escaped.

ENGINE EXPLOSION KILLS SIX.

Columbus, O., Locomotive Mail Train Reduced and Was Being Taken.

The boiler of an engine that was standing in the yards of the Pennsylvania road exploded at 8 o'clock. The engine was being taken to the round-house to be repaired. The explosion was so great that it was felt in the city. The engine had been overhauled and was being taken to the round-house. The force of the boiler being blown out first. The force of the explosion was so great that it tore up a portion of the roadway. Six men are killed, including a fireman, who was on the engine at the time of the explosion. The engine was a mass of wreck. The men who were killed were all employed in the shops.

FIT TASK TO CRANIUM.

Union Pacific Railway to Have Phrenological Showing.

Engineers of the Union Pacific Road are about to have the heads of their heads interpreted by a phrenologist. He is to examine all the engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen and others who want to have a professor finger their bumps, but somewhere among the executive officials of the road is a man who wants to know if every man on his job, under the phrenologist. Although notice of the impending examination was given to the employes several days ago, at the main office in Omaha, the significance of the announcement has just begun to dawn on their minds. The idea of having the examination made that the railroad is found selling tickets for nickels with a round discount when the order that he would make a better engineer than work by jumping on the engineer. No one seems to know who is responsible for making this order and whoever it is is keeping quiet. It is understood that the order came from E. H. Harriman himself. It is not the intention of the Union Pacific to discharge any employes who are found to be lack-heads, but to promote them. The engineers may be promoted to the Harriman idea that no engineer is fit to be a fireman. Promotions will be made, however, to the men who are most qualified, and the Union Pacific officials can be established the service.

BOMB KILLS IN WARSAW.

Man Who Tried to Slay Governor and Detectives Blown to Atoms.

A workman who was trying to avoid the observation of detectives in the Medowa street, Warsaw, Russia, by entering a house, stumbled on the steps and a bomb which he was carrying in his pocket exploded killing the workman, the detectives in question and two who were passing by. It is believed the bomb was intended for Gen. Trepoff, the governor of Warsaw, who was expected to pass the spot on his way to the house of an engineer with an infuriated bull in a Madison street, Chicago, on Saturday. Nearly three years. A city paper says the force of the explosion was heard for miles, and the windows in the neighborhood were smashed and a large crowd was soon on the ground. The force report was that the bomb was thrown by a man who was in a carriage and was aimed at the house of the engineer. The force report was to the effect that the bomb was thrown among four officials who were in the house at the time. The women and children were crushed and the men were injured

Local News.

—L. E. Frazier has a new ad. this week.

—Did you ever hear of a flood in Northern Michigan?

—At 2 p. m. Sunday there will be a preaching service at Howard's Church.

—Lee Howland's cement side-walk contr. is at East Jordan for a few weeks.

—J. W. Harris, who is now at work at Lockington, spent Sunday with his family here.

—The steamer Columbia was here Friday with the annual excursion of the Traverse City high school seniors.

—A. S. See, Frank Clausmyer, A. A. Swinton and Nick Sinclair are in the upper peninsula catching trout.

—The steamship Illinois still begin running on summer schedule the 14th of this month, and the Missouri the 18th.

—Capt. Wm. Hulme's schooner, the Oliver Mitchell is unloading coal at St. James this week, and then takes lumber from Cheboygan to Cleveland.

—The Standard Oil Co. has let contracts for the erection of new tanks and wind mills, their grounds here and the work will be commenced this week.

—Mrs. Joseph Insley returned from Chicago on the Missouri Sunday, on her way home to St. Joseph. She was accompanied by a nurse, who will spend the summer there.

—Nat Wadsworth in Old Settlers' Day at Petoskey, and probably it was the biggest event in the history of the Old Settlers' Association. Every old settler in the region should go.

—Dr. J. H. Tinlen arrived from the West and joined his family here yesterday. We are authorized to say that the doctor has come to stay, and will resume his practice as soon as he can get settled.

—There is not an idle bread winner in Charlevoix, unless he be a loafer from preference. Every man is at work or can get work by speaking for it. This includes both skilled and common labor. More than this Charlevoix is growing—not like a mush room, but steadily, and the growth is solid, but the city is beautiful meanwhile. The growth of Charlevoix is substantial and permanent. It always have got a non-returnable package before you know what they are. No man's order house helped to build the little white school house in your district or improve the road past your door. No man order house ever took you by the hand when you were in distress and told you to be that little secondrel go until after harvest. No man order house ever sold you merchandise and then spent every cent of its profits right in the community where you and your neighbors could see it all back again. No man order house ever showed its patent leather shoes under your table and welcomed with you when you were to sign a petition asking the county to pave Bellevue avenue with Bitulithic. He has informed signers that the road will cost no less than $2.10 per square yard. He has also informed them that this will include a concrete base. The cost of the Charlevoix paving through Corner Park was $2.10 per yard without a concrete base. Davis and his company would surprise the natives with no less art, using to do the job being a big one.

—Mr. Letourneau, other assistant U. S. weighmaster, in charge of the further improvements on the river, was here last Friday, looking over further contributions, with a view of making necessary improvements. A corps of engineers will be here soon to make a survey, and not until their report is made will the matter of the work be determined. Mr. Letourneau practically stated however, that the work would consist of the revetment of the north side of the channel from the mouth of the pier to the bridge. This cannot be done before next spring, as it will be too late to begin work this season, after the plans and specifications are prepared and approved at Washington. The advertising for bids will probably be done the coming winter. The superintendent of the revetment on the south side of the channel, above the bridge will also be required. The matter of dredging will also be passed upon after the survey is made.

—A movement is on foot, with good promise of success, to establish a pool of sailing station at Beaver Harbor. The plan has the endorsement of the superintendent and inspector. Tom Kimball the general superintendent will visit the lakes this summer, and has promised to consider the matter. The island in question only a volunteer station.

—Frank Coleman's new restaurant near the Wilbur dock, opened Monday evening. The place is very much ahead of any restaurant yet operated in Charlevoix, and is a credit to the town. The front portion is devoted to an ordinary lunch counter, while back of this is a neat dining room. A well appointed kitchen is in the rear. Everything neat and up-to-date. It is the purpose of Mr. Coleman to cater to the better class of patrons, and there will find here just what they want.

—We had to through train from the south, and consequently no mail, for forty eight hours, on account of the washout of the Muskegon river bridge Monday. The whole section of country with a radius of twenty miles, about Grand Rapids has suffered great damage, and especially to the railroads, from the cloudburst which swept the section Monday night. Railroad bridges and trestles have been destroyed, buildings washed away or destroyed, and many other disasters have taken place.

—Because of failing health and age, Dr. Samuel Brooks, who has been on the Kalamazoo college faculty for 50 years, has tendered his resignation to Charles Willard professor of the Latin language and literature. The latter is one of the oldest college instructors in Michigan. He took his degrees from Brown university, Franklin college and Newton theological institution, and was for a number of years previous to his going to Kalamazoo teacher and principal in eastern states. Dr. Brooks is one of the best known of the pioneers of the Charlevoix Summer Home Association, having been one of the founders of that resort when it was known as the Chautauqua Bluffs Resort." He still spends his summers here.

Just Casual Observations.

—Just imagine what Charlevoix would be today, in the matter of natural beauty, if shade trees had been better protected. We so frequently the opinion that half as many trees as are now standing have been ruined by being stripped of their bark by boards. And, notwithstanding the ordinance, we occasionally see a farmer or thoughtless so to leave his horse standing at a hitching post.

—Attention Bees. Capt. Hayes has an extra nice of Bridge street home for exchange for a good farm property. Now is the time after the busy work of fruit is ended for exchanges.

—Now, in the matter of local patriotism, by your leave, is when that school yard gets good and busy, some girl is sunburn themselves.

—The "school girl graduate" seems to have given way for the honey bug graduate, in fashionable circles. The latter are cutting up the high jinks. It was the other way formerly.

—Whenever you hear of some one saying that Charlevoix is money, tell him all you know and just right, that it only catches fish and snake receipts, remember Topic! Hopefully wind forth with big slogan and none of "less to raise funds." But don dress did the business. Charlevoix has several dim dims experts, figuratively speaking.

—Now don't get excited over the first city election. Keep cool, and be sensible. Don't lift on gasoline for the sake of quarreling.

—Again we are constrained to observe, in the light of the recent southern Michigan floods and cyclones, that Northern Michigan is always exempt from these visitations. We are never drowned out, or blown away. About the only thing Southern Michigan can say of us, by way of offset, is that we freeze up in the winter, which of course, is not true. Our average record of low temperature does not reach that of Southern Michigan or Northern Illinois. Judging by the for twenty months of the year, the floods and cyclones and snow drifts of Southern Michigan debar more rational people than the snow drifts of Northern Michigan.

—Harrison Berdan has bought the Dapinaw boat livery.

—At the meeting of the state Medical Society, at Petoskey the 28th, Dr. H. B. Armstrong, of that locality, will read a paper on "Asthma and Hay Fever."

—Notwithstanding the protest of the people, about Grand Rapids the government survey of the Muskegon river will begin in to be brought to the lakes from Benton.

—Some street in Traverse City from Cass street to Railroad avenue will be paved with bitulithic pavement. Work was the action taken Monday night at the regular council meeting.

—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank held Monday evening the following officers were elected: President, F. E. Terrell; vice president, O. C. Gerkey; cashier, C. E. Carroll; directors, C. C. Gerkey, E. W. Crozier, H. L. Iddings, John Burns, Dudley E. Waters, Grand Rapids; H. S. Bigelow. The fixtures and furniture for the bank are delayed, but Mr. Terrell expects to open for business inside of a week, even if it is necessary to use temporary fixtures.

—Detroit Journal: Mr. Davis, of the Central Bitulithic Co. in winning the council over to favoring bitulithic paving, has rendered a remarkably effective campaign in Fairview for four months. He has induced two-thirds of the abutting property owners to sign a petition asking the council to pave Bellevue avenue with bitulithic. He has informed signers that the road will cost no less than $2.10 per square yard. He has also informed them that this will include a concrete base. The cost of the Charlevoix paving through Corner Park was $2.10 per yard without a concrete base. Davis and his company would surprise the natives with no less art, using to do the job being a big one.

Body Found.

The Remains of Karl Lundquist Is Picked Up on the Beach Near the Traverse Dock.

On Saturday morning a fisherman discovered a dead body lying on the beach of Pine Lake near the Indian camp grounds, about a mile northeast of the transfer dock. He went to John Martin's office to find relief and the information in the city.

A party, including Frank Lamphear, went at once to the place, and, although the body was in a badly decomposed condition, it was easily identified by the clothing as the body of Karl Lundquist, who, about a week ago with his companions, John Holdeen was drowned from a canoe in Nelson's bay on the opposite side of the lake from where the body was found.

The remains were at once brought to Sam's undertaking rooms and Coroner Dougherty, who was in the city, was notified. Arrangements for an inquest were made for Monday afternoon.

The funeral was held from the Methodist church at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Hoffman officiating. The church was profusely and elegantly embellished with flowers and plants, and it may truthfully be said that no previous commencement event was more successfully carried out.

The Alumni Association very properly eschewed the customary lacquer to the class, with its long-winded, midnight post prandial speeches and straight backed chairs. In its place, on Friday night, they gave the class a very enjoyable reception at the Park hall. Following the reception came a hop with Levinson's orchestra furnishing the music. It was a fine affair, and we are sure was appreciated by the class.

The SENTINEL extends its greetings and cordial good will to the Class of 1905 of the Charlevoix High school. May the members thereof make their lives both successful and happy.

COMMENCEMENT.

The Charlevoix High School Class of 1905 Thrown Out Upon the Cold World.

The annual series of commencement events for the past school year are "all in," and the eight lonely boys and one bright girl that all the honors were heaped upon are up against the cold thing in the struggle of life. Following is the roster of the class:

Marcia H. Zoulek.
Lucy W. Miller.
Nellie E. Smith.
Jessie A. Smith.
Gertrude M. Norton.
Chauncey M. Hosmer.
Ralph A. Bangham.
Albert D. Campbell.
A. Louis Chaloupka.

The event of all was that at the M. E. church Thursday evening when the class received its parchments. The attendance was large, and the exercises endeared a particularly interesting program, well rendered. For looking to the program:

YOLANDE

CHAPTER XVI. (Continued.)

Now for the moment Yolande was completely transparent. It was a point she had not foreseen; it was a point, therefore, on which she had asked no counsel. She had been assured by Mr. Morrison that the young man was not thinking seriously of her; and she had accepted that assurance as the easiest way out of a difficult position. But there was a look in the face of her visitor that was not to be mistaken; and she was quite prepared for the question that was now put to her.

"Do you love him?" he asked, in a low voice.

"I—I don't know what you mean," she faltered, with her eyes cast down.

"Do you love him enough to marry him?"

"I have not thought of it," she said, in the same low voice.

"Do you think you could?"

"I—I don't know what you mean," she repeated, with a little more firmness.

"Do you think you could love him enough to marry him?"

"I have not thought of it," she said, coldly, and the subject was dropped.

Then he passed over another point that had drawn out the clergyman's objections—namely, the question of her inheritance, and her generous determination to share her fortune with her cousin. Mr. Morrison had assured him that Yolande had herself suggested the idea, and had insisted on it against her father's opposition; and that, if any one was to blame for the matter, it was Mr. Morrison himself, who had thus encouraged the young lady in her generosity. But Yolande herself was quite unable to understand, and to make allowance for, the scruples of her lover.

"Do you think, if I have been so ungenerous as to—as to—as to—

FUROR SUBSIDING

TARIFF TINKERING RACE SEEMS TO BE DYING OUT

Outside of the Northwestern Democrats and Their Republican Free-Trade Auxiliaries There is Little Sentiment in Favor of Changing the Schedules.

It would seem that in the West the rage for tariff tinkering has greatly subsided. Immediately following the extraordinary victory of Nov. 8, 1904, which would naturally have been stimulated to an overwhelming triumph of Republican action, there did seem to be a large popularity for some time to be most important among these problems. As the Chicago Tribune put it, "Something must be done to the tariff." Nobody was prepared to say exactly what should be done. Even the Tribune declined to enter into particulars but contented itself with demanding immediate downward revision. This cry was taken up to a remarkably large number of Republican newspapers and the cause of tariff revision was their principal theme. But the agitation was mostly confined to newspaper columns. It's people generally did not take part in it. Public sentiment did not respond to the subject of railroad rate regulation enough to fan it into a live issue. Even the President's recommendation on tariff revision ceased to be a burning question. It has pretty much burned itself out, according to Senator Dolliver, who is quoted in the Evening Post-Washington correspondence of April 21 as saying:

"There is little demand for tariff revision in Iowa or in the West generally so far as I can tell. I do not believe the Fifty-ninth Congress is now inquiring well be a standard Congress. I look for no tariff change at its hands. Theoretically, it is true that slight changes here and there in the existing schedules might be made if this were the most effective opening up the whole subject, yet I believe the interest of business which is certainly important in considering a revision of the tariff, would be currently far more harm than good by changes which Congress is likely to make would be good. Therefore I favor, for the present at least, leaving the tariff alone.

How about the reports which Will not meet Congress in December and then not getting to work on revision of the Dingley schedules, both customs and internal revenue.

It is hard to answer the question now. It was definitely a mistake to cut off no compulsory session at the close of the Spanish war. It was, of course, gratifying to group the desk clean and go back to our old tasks, but it should have been remembered that the Spanish war created certain permanent conditions in the so far reaching the government upon, and I think it would have been better to reach the more easily in one of the same sessions instead. That would have saved us the trouble of revisiting them.

What is the feeling in the West regarding railroad legislation?

"Altogether different from the feeling for tariff revision. One is a living issue, while the other is some pretty near being a dead issue."

What is true of the West in regard to tariff revision is true of the whole country. The enthusiastic revisionists have very largely subsided, and even the ranks of such free-trade agitators as Clemenceau of Iowa and Fossel Massachusetts there is very little sentiment among Republicans who are able to any consideration of the tariff at the extra session of Congress to be called in October. The country is rapidly settling down to the older and sensible conclusion that the tariff will do very well as it is for a considerable time to come.

Mr. Roosevelt—That is us.

Mr. Westinghouse—That is us.

Coming to the Front.

Secretary Shaw is gradually coming to the front as the leading advocate of standing pat. He is telling the people that, while tariff tinkering will bring a change, it will be a change for the worse and not for the better. He is opening this battle gently so as not to force in business and trade where the agitation sentiment is particularly strong. The sentiment is growing that it is more desirable that the agricultural communities of those states have protection for their crops than for duties on manufactured articles.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Trees in Africa.

More trees are needed in South Africa, as other parts of the dark continent. The Oriental character of the trees has changed the appearance of the country in comparatively recent times. The trees seen by the traveler from Cairo to the pyramids were introduced by Mehemet Ali, and the palms of the Nile are not the ones seen by those in the days of Herodotus or Napoleon. The prickly pears and the plum trees of North Africa have changed the country entirely since the Carthaginian period. In the intervals [illegible] many of the shrubs which give a tone to the landscape have come in the last eighty years from Asia and America.

SAFE, SANE, PRUDENT

HOW TO BE INDEPENDENT BUT NOT EXCLUSIVE.

Go Far Enough Prohibiting the Interchange of Commodities. Protection Has Added a Billion Dollars to Our Foreign Trade Since 1890.

Wilkins, persistently and stupidly the Indianapolis News is trying to raise a question of the American Reciprocity, persuasive and reasonable that it is what it says.

We will waste no time in show that the protective principle was not a serious thing in the history of our country in its universality argument. It is seen we should not be seeking a title to freedom, or free trade, or free exchange, for the reason that we have sought to find that it would be impossible for us to do anything of the kind. And that is the reasonable thing. Each nation is necessarily independent, and it is proper that it should be so. It is not well that it should be otherwise. Each nation should be independent, but not exclusive. Each should be independent of the world in the matter of its own necessities, but not exclusive of the world in the matter of exchanging what it has for what it needs. Each should be independent in the matter of its own necessities, but not exclusive of the world in the matter of exchanging what it has for what it needs. Each should be independent in the matter of its own necessities, but not exclusive of the world in the matter of exchanging what it has for what it needs. Each should be independent in the matter of its own necessities, but not exclusive of the world in the matter of exchanging what it has for what it needs.

The Indianapolis News is trying to make out of this a question of protection and free trade. It is not a question of protection and free trade. It is not a question of protection and free trade. It is not

VERY CLEVER TRICK.

THIEF GETS SACHEL AND $800 IN CLEVELAND

Finds Bakery Company's Cashier Into Leaving Receipts Unprotected and Runs Away in Crowd—Loser Finally Captured by Down Walkell Messenger.

A number of years ago there used to be a saying in the Cleveland Plain Dealer office to the effect that if anything happened outside of Cleveland it was Cleveland's duty to find out about it. Acting on the assumption that what happens in this city should be known in other places, we give the world a little more than it wants to know about the manner in which Cleveland's money was taken from the pocket of its owner, and how it was finally recovered by the police.

Yesterday morning a man who gave his name as Frank Ellis, who is said to be a resident of Akron, came to Cleveland on a visit. He had a little money with him, and he had a sachel in which he had placed the receipts of his employer, a bakery company, for the previous day. He had been instructed to deposit the money in the bank, and was on his way to the place when he met a man who was a stranger to him. The stranger said he was a cashier for a bakery company in Akron, and he had come to Cleveland on a visit. He said he was on his way to the Ohio building to see the cashier of the bakery company, and he asked Ellis if he knew the way. Ellis informed him that he was going there himself, and they started together. The stranger said he was carrying a large sum of money, and he was afraid of being robbed. He said he had a sachel in his hand which was full of money, and he was afraid someone would take it away from him. He said he was a stranger in the city, and he was afraid he would be robbed. He said he was carrying a large sum of money belonging to his employer, and he was afraid someone would take it away from him. He said he was a stranger in the city, and he was afraid he would be robbed. He said he was carrying a large sum of money belonging to his employer, and he was afraid someone would take it away from him.

Ellis was a good-natured fellow, and he felt sorry for the stranger, who was evidently very much excited over the matter. He said he would carry the sachel for him, and they started for the Ohio building. When they had gone a few blocks they came to a place where there was a large crowd. The stranger said he was afraid someone would take the sachel from him, and he asked Ellis if he would let him have it. Ellis did so, and the stranger said he would carry it himself. He said he was afraid someone would take it from him, and he was afraid someone would take it from him. He said he was a stranger in the city, and he was afraid he would be robbed. He said he was carrying a large sum of money belonging to his employer, and he was afraid someone would take it away

Petoskey Democrat: H. O. Hardman, of Grand Rapids, who has leased the Imperial Hotel for the summer, arrived in the city Sunday and is making preparations for the opening of the for the season.

Cheboygan is encouraging a proposition of a Mr. Barnum, of Minneapolis, to erect a $150,000 hotel, provided the citizens will take about $50,000 worth of stock. The house will contain 150 rooms, elevators and all modern conveniences.

The Shanty mill at Carlton together with some 12,000 feet of lumber was destroyed by fire on Thursday last, with no insurance. This is the second loss by fire at the mill within the past few months and it is not likely to be rebuilt.

The pottery at Pellston was burglarized early last week Tuesday morning and the safe blown open. A small quantity of silver and change was taken, which cost $30 in bills and a package containing a large amount of stamps was overlooked.

Fred Beardsley, of Boyne City, accidentally shot himself with a revolver he was handling the first of the week, and shortly after died from the effects of the wound. He was nineteen years of age and the oldest son of A. J. Beardsley, a well known merchant of Boyne.

Geo. Empey, 26, carried out of one of the oldest residents of Bangor township, was taken to Bellaire recently by the sheriff to await the action of probate court next Monday. Empey is mentally unbalanced and for the past few weeks has been so violent that he has been under a guard to keep him from injuring someone.

The report comes from Traverse City that during the storm there Monday morning hail stones at least six inches in circumference fell, causing great damage. A funeral was conducted in the cemetery at the time and it was necessary for the service to be discontinued for a time as people and horses could seek places of safety.

There is apparently trouble ahead for the Supervisor and perhaps Board of Review at Big Rapids. In the assessment roll recently made and passed the Big Rapids Iron Co. was assessed at about $400,000 and the Cement Company at about $70,000. The trouble will come in the fact that the Tax Commission had ordered but the assessment of the Iron Co. should be $750,000 and the Cement Co. $670,000.

John McDonald, a respected pioneer of Acme, died at the family home two miles from the town last Saturday the cause of death being a general breaking down due to old age, death occurring in his seventy-seventh year. John McDonald was a gentleman by birth and education though his life was mainly spent in America, where he came when in his teens. For many years he followed the profession of fisherman in Huron waters and after forsaking his pursuit he settled at Acme twenty five years ago and has since made the first his home.

Central Lake Torch: A number of weeks ago E. B. Ramsey resigned his office as postmaster of Central Lake several petitions for the appointment were circulated among the same but owing to complications, largely of a political nature, no apparent progress was made toward getting a live man in the office, and Mr. Ramsey who was anxious to be released so that he could devote his attention to other matters has been obliged to keep on filling the duties of the position. It is a case of one man wanting to get out, several anxious to get in, and nobody satisfied. Much has transpired of late that we are not at liberty to publish. The Republican county committee is evidently satisfied of the delay and surprise anyone of the party is said is anxious to get the matter off its hands. The recent developments make it practically certain that a new postmaster will be appointed very soon—possibly within the coming week.

Central Lake Special 5th. George Morrow, aged 28 years, was struck by lightning this afternoon at 1 o'clock and rendered unconscious, and his right side was paralyzed and the hair turned from his head. It is hoped however, that his life can be saved. Morrow, who is a son of Gilbert M. Morrow, a prominent farmer residing two miles north of the village, was in his house on the farm, with three other men, for shelter from the downpour of rain which lasted three hours this afternoon. A bolt of lightning entered the house and struck him on the head, burning the hair and eyebrows off and burning the back. As his clothing but the shirtband were torn from his body. The three other men were all considerably shocked by the bolt. Although Morrow has rallied somewhat, he is still unconscious the unconscious state in fact. He is a widower, his wife having died but two weeks ago.

DISASTROUS FLOOD

Bantwell, Ford City and Nine Towns Inundated.

It is now estimated that the damage to the flooded in Western Michigan will reach $10,000,000. Every road leading into Grand Rapids is cut up save the except ion of those running south. Hundreds of railroad bridges have been swiped out and towns flooded.

Among the important towns inundated are Ionia, Lowell, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Whitehall, Montague, Pentwater, Hart and Cedar springs. The damage on the westside, Grand Rapids, where hundreds of homes were again flooded amounted to $100,000.

Telephone lines are badly demoralized. Local papers are making valiant efforts to prevent towns with automobiles and launches on Grand River.

A tidal wave at Michigan City, Ind was fourteen feet high, the worst ever known there. The wharfs and shipping were badly damaged.

As the result of the cloud burst Monday night Indian Mill creek overflowed its banks inundating a section of the west side of Grand Rapids. Nearly eight sewer blocks are under water and more than 500 homes are surrounded by water and the residents are being taken from the affected districts in row boats.

In speaking of the recent meeting of the Mackinac park commission, who have the island in their charge, the Adrian Daily Times quotes Chas. C. Miller, of that city a member of the commission, with the following report. While making excursions near the front nally part of the fort, the superintendent found a walled up excavation 2 or 12 feet deep. From that a walled passageway was traced for the first time in forty years. An arched in the front wall of the fort. This was followed for 65 feet, when different sections and a good deal of it was carefully walled up with stone on 50 feet sides, and is 5 feet high and 3 feet wide. It was probably built during the first part of the last century, when the British held the fort. It is the intention as soon as possible to follow this passageway to determine if it is supposed to be a secret entrance and exit to the fort, and will probably open up at the outer edge of the foundation of rocks under the walls. The passageway has remained unknown at least since the occupation of the fort by the United States at the close of the war of 1812.

"Now will they," said Yolande, and she stood in the sitting-room, and placed the little sugar-basin on the mantel-shelf. "Then we must have a little talk about matters. I suppose you are as astonished at my coming home as everybody else was when I first came to Ladlow. I wonder what they thought of me. I wonder what you were doing when I came in—if you were sitting in indignation, or in a good and kind mood, or in a good and kind mood, but with a little pity for my weakness and depression. I wonder what you thought of me then and afterwards when I came to Ladlow."

"I was in a good and kind mood, but very in need of your help," said the other, in her low voice.

"Yes, I remember that," said Yolande, gravely; and she regarded her another long time. "I wonder what you thought of me. I wonder what you thought of me when I came to Ladlow, and met you for the first time, and afterwards. I have everything prepared for you. The tea-kettle was almost boiling when I came in. I wonder what you thought of me then. I wonder if you thought I was a bad girl. The tea-kettle was the first to remind me that I had not seen my mother for a long time. Jane, bring a cup and saucer and a plate from the cupboard, and take some from the tea, and some of the cake, and some of the bread-and-butter. Now, Jane, you can go. Mother, I have brought you some tea and some cake and some bread-and-butter. Do you not remember that I used to do so when you were sitting in your room? Do you not remember that I used to do so when you were sitting in your room? Do you not remember that I used to do so when you were sitting in your room?

DEMOCRACY AND SOCIALISM HITCH UP TOGETHER.

The Democratic Donkey Yearns for the Free-Trade Thistle Patch, While the Socialistic Steer Pulls Toward the Fat Pasture of Government Ownership.

Aggressive Democracy is in the saddle. We are told. That was the text given delivered by Chauncey now mayor, Judge Dunne in his speech at the Jackson dinner of April 13. Time is the new program.

If the Democratic leaders will take time from in hour of the government ownership of railroads, the income and estate taxation and another in favor of the abolition of the protective tariff, I have no doubt that it will win.

If the platform can be so shaped as to combine the strong elements of the party of immediate, of unconscious of free trade, income and inheritance taxes, government ownership of railroads, free raw materials and free trade in America will be a mighty force in our country.

Free trade notions go with these three, expressed with democratic phraseology. Time will the democratic party will be pressing to the front once more in the guise of some radical form of some certain. Will a national government ownership plan be the next issue? If not, there may be a battle on the tariff and free trade. Free raw materials is more of a question. But if the present rate of gas will hold, it is designed by politicians to be used well on the rest of the donkey. They will be pressing to the front once more in the ungovernment ownership. The Democratic wagon will be loaded. Chicago has twenty-seven the sixth and seventh of four hundred. The sixth is the Democratic.

Democracy is a mighty force in our country. Socialism is a mighty force in our country. Free trade is a mighty force in our country. Put together the three, and the combination is a mighty force in our country. Will the democratic party

OSWEGO MILLIONAIRE OFFERS REWARD FOR MISCREANT.

Unknown Writer Sends Letters Threatening to Kill Favorite Child if Large Sum Is Not Paid—Tobacco Manuel Temple Is Indicated.

Threats aimed at the point of destroying someone unless thousands of dollars are deposited in a certain place have been received by John Jay Tucker, a wealthy and prominent citizen of Oswego, N. Y., and consequently the office of a sergeant of police for the detailing of a detective for two years from his service, the letters have accompanied a proposal of money or else death to the members of the family. Mr. Tucker, who is a member of Masonic lodge, and is one of the most prominent men in Oswego, is the father of two children, one of whom, a little girl, is the favorite of her father. The threatening letters have appeared in the mail addressed to the family home for the last three months, and have been delivered by the regular mail carrier. The letters have evidently been written by a person who is familiar with the ways of the family, and who knows the ways of Mr. Tucker. The letters have been written in a fine, fine, cramped hand, and are signed "Tobacco Manuel Temple" in indicated.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Central Lake Canning Co. has contracted for the product of sixty acres of acres of corn, peas, etc. for their work in canning season.

Elk Rapids will hold a special election on June 19th to decide the question of bonding the village for $20,000 for electric lights, and $10,000 for building a bridge across Elk River.

East Jordan Enterprise: Chas. Gotham and family departed last week for California, going by the "Soo" and the Great Northern route. Eureka will be their present destination.

It looks now as though a proposition to bond the village of Central Lake in sum not to exceed $20,000, for the purpose of taking municipal control of the local water works and the electric lighting plant is likely to come before the voters during the present season.

Mrs Hunter Williams of Harbor Springs is writing a history of her life which promises experiences with the Ottawas on Beaver Island, and many other interesting things. It will be published in book form and will undoubtedly meet with a good sale.

On Tuesday last there was boxing on a boat at the Ward Estate docks a pine plank from their mill at Deward that at the rating market price is worth $16. The plank was 16 ft. long, four inches thick and 42 inches wide—clear cork pine worth $160 per M.

The celebrated case of Pere Marquette Railroad Co. vs. John Brown over the payment for the right-of-way across his land, has finally been settled, the railroad company having been beaten at every point, and Brown not only receives the pay for his land but also his trouble and expense incurred. The Elk Rapids Iron Co. was also mixed up in the case against Brown.

The immense Home farm near Old Mission, 100 acres in extent, under the management of C. H. Pulver, is receiving many improvements. There has been over two miles of woven wire fence built on the place this year; the water which was formerly pumped by a wind mill is now being pumped from the lake, a distance of 1,200 feet, by a steam pump; the dragging this spring is being done by a steam traction engine which will carry three plows, thus doing the work of three teams and also only two men instead of three. The fall of concrete on pine 11th to double the question of bonding the village for $20,000 for electric lights, and $10,000 for building a bridge across Elk River.

Joe Maddock, one of Cole's former baseball stars, is busy and locally as ever has been visiting friends in Ann Arbor for a few days. He left Friday night for his home in East Jordan, where he will customs during the summer. He has been coaching in the University of Utah for the past year, and has made a great success.

Not to be out-done by Petoskey, some of the business business barbers of Boyne City have organized a joint stock company to prospect in the ground and find out what is under them than can be commercially or industrially realized upon. It is likely that tests will be made in Evangeline township where there is favorable promise for gas and oil.

The little village of Northport is coming to the front this summer with street paving, and so far three walks are planned. Waukazoo street, running from the Hotel Stott north to the corner of Nagonaba street is being paved on the east side, and Nagonaba street from the corner of Waukazoo and Nagonaba by to the depot on Bay street will be improved with cement walks both sides of the street being paved.

Traverse City boasts of the "largest cherry market in the world." Commencing at noon of the average of ten years, train numbers Bag, will be in that city during the entanglement, the date of their appearance having been fixed for June 20. Not only is this hard the largest in the world but has a large and well learned repertoire so that the pleasure of listening to their music is fully equal to that of their clever players.

Harbor Springs Herald: A recent communication from Mrs. Walter Chrysler to her mother, Mrs. Conkey, states that she is teaching School in Chena, Alaska, for which she is receiving $2.00 per day. She has also assisted in establishing an Epworth League there and is secretary of the same. Mr. Chrysler is engaged with his mining interests, timber and building houses for the mining camp, which they think is certain to come to that section. The maple processing which they took there with them will be some time a fabulous sum when the season opens. Their town is at the extreme end of navigation, also the terminus of the Canadian railroad and railway.

Hans Hall a farmer near the Hebron church in Marion N. H., was called upon by his pastor, who expressed in his quiet, solemn way, the fear of his parishioner taking offence at his pastoral visits. Mr. Moore on the way to his pulpit, said "I always shared with a sermon "good morning" instead of a rebuke for disapproval. At last when he could stand it no longer he stopped and in reply to the deacons astonishment, said "Deacon you know you are a pastor is to your flock to look after the wandering sheep of your flock."

"Oh, yes, yes, yes, yes," promptly replied the deacon, "I'm coming right after the sheep, but I've nothing to do with the goats."

—When four cities call out from Detroit Thursday afternoon the passenger steamer Harriet A. Hall, of the Greenbay Transportation Co., caught fire and burned. The fire started among a pile of life preservers between the engine room and the boiler house. The steam pumps could not be made to work and the crew could do nothing with the hand pumps. The crew and crew jumped to escape safety in the small boats and the tug Anchor line steamer, the Juniata, happened along just in time to pick them up. The passengers were taken to Mackinac City while the captain and crew went to Detroit. The boat last was worth $35,000.

Near the cemetery Miley ran into the Indian, knocking him off the wheel, with which he returned to town. Marshal Berdan picked up the Indian later in the day.

—Detroit News: James L. Hackett, stenographer and clerk in the law office of Iven A. Williams, 1 Ionia block, was arrested this morning by Detective Brooks and Sheriff Elmer W. Dunlap, of Charlevoix county, charged with larceny by bailee. Roberts a village owner at East Jordan, Mich. Hackett is 25 years old and came to Detroit in March, having his wife in East Jordan. Hackett denies the charge.

While some of the sons of Northern Michigan pioneers are continuing certain of their professional brethren for unprofessional personalities we beg the privilege of saying that Grayling journalistic effusions are not near so unentertaining to the ordinary readers as to read in certain Northern Michigan papers about "pretty June weddings" or "pretty home weddings." But we question that the brilliant society sisters who so persistently use the phrase simply find joys of Megantic shakes and have it standing ready on the gallery."

—The Michigan, "old Ironsides," the only United States warship in fresh water, is moored, according to the Army and Navy Journal. The old ship will be dismantled. The Michigan is well known all over the great lakes and especially to Detroiters, as her guns were placed on that port. The Michigan was of solid iron construction and was built in Pittsburg, was then taken overland to Erie where she was launched. She was built before the civil war and which is a date by herself. It is doubtful if there is another armed ship far in the world, not one which could travel slower when going at full speed abaft. One of the two engines building of 1,000 horse power with become her course Michigan's radio and will constitute the highest type of a fighting machine either in the United States or any other navy.

Hon. Arthur J. Sinnott, representative from Charlevoix county in the lower house of the State legislature, was in town one day last week.

It is not known to his friends here exposes the belief that there is no chance of Hughes being renominated in spite of the most determined opposition of the Hearst forces. Nothing cannot do it, and probably will not. But I believe that a pair of automobile omnibuses run between these points in the Hughes campaign pay. While you are raising money to put up a third monument from both points to the park, making hourly runs for each, that is a system when you are getting, "Hughes Democratic Schoolmaster" was a Republican.

Over at the head of Antrim county, under the hill, stands a relic of old days. The younger generation in passing it thoughtlessly, or ignorantly, or indifferent it awakens memories. It is an age-blackened, time ravaged house that forty years ago was the home of William Taylor and wife. Both have been dead years and their children gone. The Taylors were the parents of Mrs. Capt. M. Ashton, who lost her life in the Champlain disaster. Mrs. Taylor was the sister of Uncle "Johnny" Woods who still lives on the same street and in the same house that he did forty years ago.

Of course we can not do everything at once, but we believe it will be the city to purchase a steam road roller. We believe every taxpayer would the machine could be used to country roads at an annual rental that would pay good interest on the investment. The campaign of street improvement begun this year will unquestionably be continued, within bounds, until all streets are macadamized. Much better work can be done with a steam roller than by the use of the "white elephant" that we now possess, and very much more economical. Now, that we have a water main along the foot of Pine Lake, why not set the Sibby and use the proceeds toward the purchase of a road machine? We believe this matter should be seriously considered.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Methodist Church.

Quarterly meeting services will be held on Sunday as follows: At 10:00 a. m. Lowell; At 2:00 p. m. Charlevoix; "Horsesheds" This will be followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. At 7:30 p. m. Rev. M. D. Carter Presiding Elder, will preach. This will be his last opportunity of hearing him as his term of office expires at Conference. It is hoped a large number will avail themselves of these services.

Baptist Church.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will give a sermon subject "Highlights in History." This will be of special interest and importance to Baptists in particular, and everybody in general. At the evening service "Baptists" will be the subject of the sermon after which the ordinance will be administered.

The Sunday School has adopted the "Bible study Union Lessons" and will begin the study the first Sunday in July. The method studies is much superior in every way to the International series, and will result much to the school in attendance, interest, a clearer understanding of the Bible and in spiritual growth.

The pastor will preach at Horgan school house at 3 p. m.

A Bad Scare.

Some day you will get a bad scare when you feel a pain in your bowels and fear appendicitis. Safety lies in Dr. King's New Life Pills, a sure cure for all bowel and stomach diseases such as headache, biliousness, costiveness, etc. Guaranteed at F. H. Hines & Co. drug store, only 25c. try them.

E. W. and Eunice Coates and wife of Charlevoix were visitors of Mrs W. C. Hurd on Sunday.

Emma Bentley and Hannah Sayre decided to take a lay off on Thursday of this week and go on a fishing tour over Cedar River.

G. M. Penzle, of Central Lake, is repairing the Hunter man for 35 years for a day or two.

Wm. Greenman and wife, Mrs. Mary Elliott, Betsy Blow, Mrs. Flanagin, Adam Harwood and others are at Traverse City attending the soldiers' Reunion.

Rainer Gamer, of Hastings, who fell Almond 32 years ago, is looking at the old home town. It is claimed that the change is wonderful.

To the surprise of many Chas Hogan, who left for parts unknown 30 years ago, was not supposed to be dead, came here Tuesday. He was one of the early settlers.

The Charlevoix Celebration Promises to be a Notable Event.

The various committees have made good use of their time in arranging for the forthcoming celebration.

The other feature of the day will be the oration of Hon. Archie Brodeman of Kalamazoo. Mr Brodeman ranks as one of the most distinguished lawyers of Michigan. The committee made a big stroke when it secured him.

There will be three bands in town—not even the Petoskey Military Band, and the celebrated Sutton Bay boys band.

A ball game of long fame between the Jubakers team and a Chicago team will be played off at Athletic Park.

The fire-works crew, their whom there is no better aspirant, will give an exhibition drill, including all features of its work, and other games and sports will occupy the day to the more entertainment of all who come. Celebrate the 4th at Charlevoix!

We remember well that when a railway was incorporated as a village there were those who opposed it on claiming that like old Ironsides, it was good enough, that it would "increase the taxes, etc."

And now we have taken another step forward. If the garment seems too large at first, we shall soon grow into it, and we are certain that the time will not come when we shall wish ourselves clothed again in the old almost shrunken vestments. We shall feel better and appear better in the new Prince Albert.

The casual observer if he be a stranger within our gates this week would naturally think the conclusion that the new city charter provides for a Mayor's salary of $5,000 and an alderman's pay at $5 one and the trade off" on paving and sewer jobs. Well, it is an open question, but the first Mayor of Charlevoix. May the best man win.

Some one remarked in our hearing that the Sentinel "ought to have a fountain was granted for an electric street car line from the Belvedere to Pere Marquette Springs. Nothing cannot do it, and probably will not. But I believe that a pair of automobile omnibuses run between these points in the Hughes campaign pay. YOLANDE

BY WILLIAM BLACK

CHAPTER XX.

"Now then, Miss Yolande, will you come?" Yolande rose and again said good-morning to the young man, who was now and always such an interesting person. He had seen her last supper. And now when she was trying about the silence of Winthrop with her mother and found a strange interest in the question as to where of some interest he had spoken of. He had a very pleasant time of it, too, in which, as the reader would be sure to know, the Duchess of Wiltshire was not forgotten. He had to say very much about her, and he was very fond of her. Yolande was glad to hear that the Duchess was so well, and that the duke was so well, and that the duke was so well, and that the duke

Strong Appeal for Calm Judgment and Conservative Action.

Another forty months addition to the Statutes of the statute which is to be built shall be enacted can be made. It is to the hope of a signal by Joseph Pulitzer, formerly United States Senator from the state the Massachusetts ship-builder. This, Pulitzer and his Tariff Reformer, said, was written long ago but after the further careful study and very thoroughly investigation. He has proved to satisfaction to the people of the land, as he has, so also the American people, which is larger in the hands of the Republicans to vote long ago, and Republicans, who have long ago, and Republicans, who have long ago, and Republicans, who have

DEATH REVEALS SECRET TO SON-IN-LAW.

Pseudo Lawyer-Son Finally in Somerville, Mass., and Another in Milwaukee—Separate of Bonanza to Conceal Official Dishonesty.

Dover (N. Hampshire) dispatch to Boston Herald: Dr. Ira Dwight Bickford, who died suddenly in Dover last Friday, left a will which has caused much comment. The will was drawn by Dr. Bickford himself, and was witnessed by his son-in-law, Dr. Frank Bickford, of Somerville, Mass., and by Dr. Bickford's office boy. The will was left in the doctor's office, and was not known to any of his family. It was found after the funeral, and was opened by the son-in-law, who read it to the family. It was in the form of a letter addressed to his son-in-law, and was as follows:

Dover, N. H., Feb. 10, 1904.

Dear Frank: I know you have been a good boy, and have kept your mother and me well and happy, and I want you to have the money I have left you. —Jas. H. Reid, has been appointed Standard Oil Co's agent here in place of Mr. Kirby, who goes to Boyne City as agent for that company.

—Summer people are arriving by every train and boat. The arrivals are very much more numerous than at this time last year.

—Mrs E. A. Burnett has purchased one of the celebrated Ivers & Pond pianos. Any one contemplating the purchase of a piano should not fail to see this instrument.

—Well, the trouble is all over, and it was not a serious affair either, tho it will not be inappropriate to remark that the republicans will not iron for prosperity unless it comes a vessel.

—The authorities have again posted notices calling attention to the Inspector and Marshal law. Strange as it will be strictly enforced in future, no matter, of fact the ordinance is being entirely ignored.

—Services will be held at Christ Church in Charlevoix, Michigan, on Sunday the 23 day of July 1905 at 10:00 o'clock a. m. by the Right Reverend Graves H. Ferris, Bishop of western Michigan. All are invited to attend.

—Supervising Inspector Wescott has ordered Inspector Yorke of Detroit to Marquette to make an investigation of the circumstances of the burning of the steamer Harriet A. Wheeler last Friday. If negligence of the government regulations is shown, Capt. Wescott says the guilty will be punished. The last inspection of the Harriet was on June 5. How thorough this was is not known yet.

—There are a few too many drinks on the streets Sundays. Of course it is not Charlevoix whiskey. Drink the through? It probably comes from Petoskey or Bayne City. Decency loving citizens will begin to take note of it soon, and then something will drop.

—Next week the Charlevoix County Bank will open a savings department. While all classes are benefited by this feature, it is intended especially for small depositors who desire to lay aside the surplus of their earnings. There yet need be no excuse why every person should not have a small deposit bearing interest semi-annually with be paid.

—Official crop reports from Lansing present the more or less interesting fact that the potato average averaging in this section of the state is eighty six. Relatively in the present condition the average in this section is ninety two as against eighty eight in the southern counties and eighty four in the central counties.

—General Burch. The apology or rather explanation, for nothing more was needed, of the editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel in the issue of last week was entirely satisfactory and leaves us standing for the wit to accept it as gracefully as it was made. And now, brother Smith, what was it that passed between the governors of the Carolinas upon a memorable occasion?

—Charlevoix Masons turned out about 75 strong, and the O. E. S. ladies in good force Sunday morning, on the occasion of St. John services at the congregational church. The fine and works of St. John the Baptist was woven into Dr. Hyslop's sermon in such a manner as to leave with the hearers valuable lessons of courage, consistency and rectitude. The address is spoken of by all as a masterly effort.

—Reading Hustler. Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Dorenbos, of Charlevoix, were among those to participate in the Hirshette College festivities last week. Mrs. T. having been one of the first graduates of the institution. They came to Reading Friday for a brief visit with Mother Turnefee and numerous other friends. It was 19 years ago last Friday that Mr. Dorenbos started in business in Reading, continuing for 20 years. At present he is district manager for the New York Life Insurance Co.

—Unofficial reports from northern Michigan and the central states, where the potato is a staple crop, seem to suggest that the excessive rains of the spring are to result in a shortage in the yield next fall. In the heavy lands the potatoes have rotted in the hills and many potato fields have been replanted and planted to corn. All of which means that the potato grower in this corner of the wolverine commonwealth is likely to receive anywhere from a quarter to seventy five cents a bushel next winter. It has rained some, even in these parts, lo! two or three weeks. Michigan lands of sand is what is needed where the potato is planted.—August 29.

—The ladies of the Congregational church will hold their cake and bread sale in the Butterick block on Saturday of this week from 3 to 5 p. m.

—Of the Charlevoix student contingent, Miss Alma Sayles, from Albion, Howard Francis from the Agricultural College, and Attie Cameron from the same school, are home for the summer.

—The Charlevoix County bank, on Tuesday, received from the Hanover National bank, of New York, a draft made on that bank about five days ago, that was returned as a souvenir. It was in the week of the "Twentieth Century Limited," at Smyrna, Delaware county, Ohio, that the draft was finally signalled. The bank will preserve it as a memento of that terrible disaster.

—Rev. W. A. Ellis, the M. E. pastor in charge of the Charlevoix, Pelkaney and Kowagiac circuit, on which was a caller at the Sentinel office Monday. The clergyman is a third cousin of Ottawa Indian, was educated and ordained in Victoria college, Ontario, and is an intelligent and deeply spiritual minister of his church.

—Dr. Schuyler C. Graves of Grand Rapids and his daughter Annie, were here over Sunday, leaving Wednesday for Petoskey where the Doctor will attend the annual meeting of the State Medical Society. The Doctor's young lady was a Charlevoix graduate, and it was here that Miss Annie was born. Charlevoix always welcomes both of them and the Doctor has tender recollections of old Charlevoix.

—The Charlevoix savings Bank opened for business Tuesday morning, and the usual avalanche of the unusual happened. Some of the fixtures failed to arrive, the bulk of the furniture came Sunday night and was set up Monday. The fixtures are of dark polished oak, unsurpassed in artistic, fine grill work, and furnishings of marble. The fixtures is modern and beautiful in all respects in all respects the bank is a credit to the city. It is supplied with all modern accessories and its checks and drafts are marks of art, with a beautiful lower river view ornamenting the upper left-hand corner. Every thing about the place denotes enterprise.

—Lucius Nye, senator Mitchell, who has twice been elected to represent this senatorial district in the upper house of the state legislature, said to be a candidate for a third term. Gov. Chas. Bowers, and James Dort, superintendent of the public works at Traverse City, senator Mitchell's latest, were in Grand Rapids a few days ago and suggested the third term, expanding of fellow in their section Mr. Bowers said that Senator Mitchell probably can have another term to the senate if he wishes. Is from the friend Rapids Evening Press title already into politics. Mr. Mitchell is made a good senator and he popular as a good senator and he popular as a good senator and he popular as

GIRL BESTS THIEVES.

FRIGHTENS ONE AND GRAPPLES WITH ANOTHER.

Bravery and Quickness of Pennsylvania Girl Saves Heavy Loss by Burglars—Hears Noise and Wind Her Dismal Dummy to Central Office.

Hearing a noise upstairs Miss Ida Mayer of Shenandoah, Pa., went to investigate and found two men ransacking a room in her home. Her sister, Miss Catherine, ran out of the house and called a policeman who was passing on a nearby street. Miss Mayer, who is a young woman of nerve, grappled with the burglars and held them until the policeman came. The men broke away from her and escaped.

Miss Mayer's home is one of a number in Shenandoah, Pa., which are the prize winners in a contest between the local telephone company and the Shenandoah Electric Light, Heat and Power company, which ended last Saturday night. The contest was for the purpose of showing how well the telephone could be used in calling the police from the home. The telephone dropped the problem and finding the crook, pounced on it and rolled down the stairs, where it was taken into custody. The telephone company had placed a dummy telephone in each of the homes of the city and connected it with a bell in the central office. When a burglar entered a house he was forced to stumble over the dummy before he could get to the real instrument. At Shenandoah the burglar, after he had tumbled down by the wind, was a member of known and known sure wrecked in the act and was arrested.

HEAVY LOSS IN OIL.

A Cleveland man, who lost $20,000 worth of supplies stolen from his home in the night, was robbed of $5 in half and the fate attends of the burglars. The supplies, consisting of several thousand dollars' worth of oil, had been left in the house by the owner, who was a traveling salesman, and it was supposed to be safe there. The thieves broke into the house and carried off the oil in a wagon.

NEGRO HUNTED BY MOB.

Murderous Attack on Child May Result in Lynching of Negro.

May 9.—A mob of 500 men, armed with guns, clubs and ropes, left this place in a hurry yesterday afternoon when it was learned that a negro had assaulted a little girl. The girl, who is 10 years of age, was picking berries in a field near her home when she was attacked by a negro who had escaped from the county jail here a few days ago while awaiting trial on a charge of assaulting a white woman. The girl was found in a dazed condition and her clothes were torn to shreds. The alleged negro was seen in the vicinity of the place and a mob was formed and started in pursuit. The mob was composed of men from this place and from Ashley, Ind., and Orland, Ind., and was armed with guns, clubs and ropes. It is said that if the negro is found he will be lynched.

FIRE WARDEN FIRST FRUNTS.

Incendiarism Burns Seventeen Stores, Inflicting a $200,000 Loss.

Fire, supposed to have been incendiary, in Fort Fraxton, Ia., in days of excitement, burned seventeen stores in the town. The loss is more than $200,000. A.M. was over from incendiaries. Fire that it was impossible for the firemen from Fort Fraxton to get to the scene of the fire. It is supposed the fire was started by incendiaries, who had set fire to stores in the morning. It was the Canadian Northern train which the incendiaries had set fire to, and it was given to the fire that it was impossible to save the town. The town was almost entirely destroyed. Now a single line of stores remains in the town. The loss is estimated at $200,000, of which almost entirely uninsured. Fort Fraxton is a town of about 1,000 people. The fire was the worst in the history of the town.

FUN AT TAX SALE.

New Yorker Finds Bank on Section of Its Property—Settles for $40.

For the first time in sixteen years a tax sale of delinquent properties has been held at the New York city hall. The proceeds were more than $200,000. Owing to the peculiar conditions surrounding such sales in that State some half dozen bankers attended. As the city does not own any unsold properties, it utilizes the sale as a means of getting back taxes. In the sales in any time lapse in return for the amount lease is the winning bidder. The city also reserves the right to purchase the property can be redeemed by paying an additional 5 per cent.

At the bidding that proved a Tuesday afternoon a small Bowery lot was knocked down to Daniel Holmes. It long one the city had paid taxes on it for 16 years. Its ownership and local part of the Bowery has been known to the city. Holmes, who is a real estate broker, was counsel for one of the bidders. Before attention was given to the lot Holmes was informed that it was a gift paid to Holmes, but he explained to the bidder, who was a stranger to the lot, that he was not the owner. Holmes said he was not the owner of the property, but he was the owner of the property, and he was the owner of the property.

TARIFF AND REVENUE

REDUCING THE ONE TO INCREASE THE OTHER.

To Lower Duties So as to Produce an Additional Twenty Per Cent of Customs Receipts Would More Than Double Our Volume of Competitive Imports.

Among the various reasons put forward by free traders and tariff reformers in support of their contention that imports actually bear a fourfold overbearing government revenue, the argument that they tend to increase the revenue and increase the income tax of rich people, seems to work overtime. It is quite a novel argument in support of a demand for tariff reduction as a remedy for trust extortion and for the benefit of the consumer, instead of American goods and labor at home, it is now proclaimed by its sponsors, values the Dingley schedule of average ad valorem tariff rates. The average ad valorem rate is not the measure of the burden of the tariff on the consumer, which is the amount actually paid to the customs officers. The average ad valorem rate is a mere index of the tariff rate, and depends upon the proportion of dutiable goods to the total value of the imports. The Dingley tariff was framed with the purpose of raising a certain revenue, and the average ad valorem rate was fixed at a rate which would produce the revenue required. For some years it did produce the revenue required, but of late years the imports have increased so much that the average ad valorem rate has fallen to 40 per cent, and the revenue has fallen short of the expenditures. The average ad valorem rate is not the measure of the burden of the tax

CHAPTER XXII.

It is quite impossible to describe the gladness and gratitude with which Yolande read the letter from the Master of Lorn, which not only gave her back her freedom, but sold quickly and cheaply the Castle Dunthorn and got back with him the Highlanders and all the money she had spent, and more besides.

"Dundie, what is the matter? You have had good news this morning!" said Mrs. Dundie, looking into the pretty, and indeed the radiant face of the girl.

THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE FLOOD.

By Rev. A. Goldman.

Text: "And the Lord said unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation." Genesis 7:1.

In the fifth, 6th and 8th chapters of Genesis, we have the most accurate of the greatest flood this world has ever seen. I say the best account, for we have not entirely dependent upon the divine record concerning this awful inundation. For, let it remembered that the peoples of the earth, whether peopling the plateau of Peru, the mountains of India, the prairies of America or the islands of the sea, have had handed down from father to son, and warm friends looking on" said he, "that this flood was to be sent to destroy the dwellers on the earth.

"Then there can be no harm in telling them what we know to be true." Accordingly, about a couple of weeks after, Yolande was seen to come out of the cottage with a large sheet of paper in her hand, and she came down to the village and called to Mrs. Dundie—"Mother, what is your good name?" said Yolande, with her eyes sparkling with a mischievous light.

"Yes, you impudent creature, I'm Mrs. Dundie, and I'm perfectly ashamed of you, Yolande, for asking such a question!"

"Oh, yes, it's perfectly correct," said Yolande, with a curtsey. "Mrs. Dundie, I have a message for you from Mr. Lang," for a Scotch Highlander, then and ever afterwards, to Yolande, was a messenger of the Lord, and that was the only way she could think of it. "Mr. Lang, he says, that you are to come with me to the Castle Dunthorn, and get back with him the Highlanders and all the money you have spent, and more besides."

"Dundie, what is the matter? Is the girl mad?" said the astonished woman.

"Mr. Lang said about half past 12, "I am very sorry you should have had so much trouble about so small an affair," said Yolande.

"But you never dishonored your ancestors," said the Master of Lorn, with a smile, "and I am very glad to have had the opportunity of showing my gratitude for your kindness to me. I shall be obliged if you will let me have the address of your friends, that I may write to them."

Traverse City Record: J. H. Dependhorst, whose home is in Indiana, was in the city Tuesday. The gentleman is interested in the manufacture of excelsior. Mr Dependhorst is putting in an excelsior plant at Milton Bay. He would undoubtedly have located here had it not been for the possibility of the Mr Manitou Weiss mining Co. Cadillac. The contract plant employs from eight to twelve hands and has a capacity of about three tons daily.

East Jordan Herald: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Allen, parents of Mrs. A. D. Nicholas, returned from their winter's visit to Orlando, Florida, Tuesday last. Mr. Allen says that President Roosevelt is immensely popular throughout the south and, in talking of the matter, predicts that in the near future the southern democrats and northern republicans will be united.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Pine Jordan Cooperage Co. has been reorganized with Messrs. W. P. Porter and M. H. Murphy at the managing head, and they propose to make it worth while to this venture it is possible. Mr. Murphy has been at work at Gaylord, with the Gaylord Mfg. Co. making barrels and the owners of those are sure to their cash best now, and they will be able to do the same at the Cooperage. An experienced barrel maker, Mr. S. J. Wilson from Alpena, has been secured to handle the manufacture of the latter.

In the making of a load, in which they were paddling in Walloon lake late Saturday afternoon, three young women were drowned. They are Alma Kercher, Edna Van Antwerp, of Harbor Springs and Gladys Howard, Petoskey. The three girls, who with two male companions were paddling pulaska in a canoe in the shore of the lake, started out for a boat ride about 3 o'clock. The two young men were able to hold to the boat until picked up by surrounding pleasure-seekers, but the three young women did not rise after sinking below the water's surface the first time. When they reached the deep water it took sudden by burst in the bottom of the old boat and quickly swamped it.

Central Lake Torch: One of the original pioneers of Antrim county, Hiram Blakely, familiarly known as "Uncle Sam" of Eastport, was one day last week visited the Torch office on his way home from a visit to Central Lake. This was not, however, his maiden attempt in this line, for in railroad days he clerked the mails between Elk Rapids and Charlevoix for a straight term of nine years and a fraction months. Forty-five years ago he was elected justice of the peace in Wayne county, Michigan. Forty-one years ago he came to Antrim county and the following spring was his postmaster of the present agent, and so well and profoundly did he conduct himself in this capacity that he has ever since been retained in the office. We may also add that Mr. Blakely is now serving his twenty-fourth term as supervisor of Forest Lake township, and he is so hale and rugged that it would not be the strangest thing in the world should he fill the position for another decade.

Traverse City Eagle: "Uncle Jim" Wiggins, who is probably the state's oldest veteran, is among the many old soldiers who are in the city participating in the encampment. The old man, in spite of his 105 years, walked in from the farm where he lives, five miles west of the city, Monday, and will walk home before tomorrow. His step would still be considered springy for a man 50 years of age and he has an used of glasses to aid him in recognizing his many friends. The list of his friends has been greatly swelled in the last few days, every old veteran being anxious to shake hands with and become acquainted with the still older veteran who has had such an extended life. Many groups have been formed with "Uncle Jim" as the central figure, while stories of his past experiences have been drawn from him.

It is noted by the news of Petoskey, that flocks of martins have appeared in that city, and selected places for building their nests. It is remarked that "these birds are rare species for northern climate." Instinct, which has widened from the west and great among human sages, that knowledge which comes from hypothesis only, or proof, she has its realm outside the walls which accept without proof the changing processes of nature, and adapt themselves accordingly. By a set of circumstances it has been interrupted, as in the deepening of the waters of the great lakes southward, and their southern shallowing, that the north polar region is slowly bearing down southerly and coming within a sullen-

CHAPTER XXIII.

Yolande was a strict and faithful guardian, and Mr. Hereford no doubt finding it impossible to get rid of his mother alone, had probably left the place for that and no harm at all. Indeed, they were thinking of other matters. Yolande was anxious to get away to the south and we stood to ask the fatigue I travelling on a season ticket to Paris for her mother's sake. She kept the getting on and on in the hope of seeing some improvement taking place; but her mother, though much more cheerful in spirits, did not seem to gain in strength. Indeed she seemed rather to wear that again and again Yolande postponed her departure. This evening I had drawn books for the weather was becoming more and more unsettled, and the poor invalid was being confined. It was the still Fir season, I know that and back the pine cuttings. Then she dared not expose her mother to the cold and raccoon rains. I suppose it was she not to go out for the evening walk by her side, and so we spent the evening in sitting down the pine long enough to hear the wind and the rain beat against the windows and to see the mists and some thunderbolts. Yolande was in high spirits, and we might take some more advice as to the best way of getting to Paris and so on the journey.

And so they bade good night to each other, and Yolande was not seriously disturbed.

AS TO KITCHEN PERQUISITES

Cooks and Stewards Who Get Commissions on Purchases.

Perquisites for the benefit of the kitchen are matters to be mentioned in a whisper, as it were. They are something that neither the cook, chief nor steward speak aloud. Yet it is a well known fact that in most large households the steward of the establishment, whatever that may be, makes a comfortable income in commissions it was the dealer, undoubtedly, who he gave this, but the custom has developed so it has grown, and thousands for commissions have multiplied and occasionally a little information creeps out through some one who feels aggrieved.

"It was all right" groaned the martyr when the other day, "when I allowed them to go on just send on the bills, but when they begin to demand 15 and 20 it looks serious."

At some of the houses where high priced domestics register they will not take one without the large exact commissions. There are few who are refused on that account, however, for, as stated, it is not a subject that is usually mentioned. Two high-priced cooks, however, but added for several months in a position because she refused to take one of these a hundred per cent employed, and she was consistently kept from others on the ground that she was "too high" for the evidence of the investigation that was conducted and concluded by the Marshall and staff of the Lake Shore and by the detectives employed by the railroads. Commissioner Morris of the Railroad Commission of the State of Ohio and W. H. Jewett, chief superior of railroads and telegraphs of the State of Ohio, was the chief of the investigation, and upon their official report President Newman in a large measure based his action in reorganizing the "company" to its former running time.

Inspector Jackson's report is severe and emphatic upon the most important points in connection with the wreck. He declares that there was no

Yolande was a quick and faithful confidant and Mr. Beaufort, so delighted to impounce a gay speech of her mind at alone, and possible get the glare of her eyes and tone of her voice, they were thinking of more matters. Yet Beaufort was anxious to get home to wife and not afraid to join the fatigue of carrying on a conversation, and so, as he was going on foot and it was a good mile and a half, he had to walk briskly, for the weather was moderate now and most sweet and agreeable, so that Yolande, who had on only a light dress, was not cold at all. Yolande had said back the gay banter of the very night before, the sweetness of perfectly natural and unaffected, and the laughs of girl had been so pleasant to Beaufort, and so her motion with some intelligent sympathy, that he felt as if he might two—some more—always as a confidant in a young man's life, and in the journey.

OREGON STATE GRANGE.

Held Its Thirty-second Annual Session, Last Month.

Mr. Cook, Master, said he thought the Grange had gained in Oregon, and Grange had started. Although Oregon has few members as compared with the eastern states, yet the Master then reports a total membership of 6,000 in 82 granges.

Among the resolutions who can believe in a more fund for O. H. Kelley, founder of the Grange. The resolution carried by a big majority and all members, varying from 2 to 10 cents, and the general Grange was asked to raise a sufficient fund for his declining years.

The millennial element in connection of these whole and in opposition was conspicuous. The executive committee was authorized to set aside a portion of the subscriptions as a building fund, the money to be used for building into Salem a central meeting place for the Grange. Grange was recommend to consider ways for obtaining single degree work and also to allow the voting for committees under both methods of balloting. All present Lists were asked by the state food commission for the protection of foods and dairy products in publishing and discussion work the Grange advocated the adoption of the referendum. Of four amendments to the subordinate Grange, one of the two was in favor of the Grange in the state in the grain exchange of the conditions. The third was in the direction of the proposal to overhaul the very over or to any portion of a Member subject, which had not been taken up a tax of 1 per cent on sweeping our companies, or 1 per cent on other companies. The fourth was the Insurance Grange was being pushed to a steady wine.

GRANGE AND THE PRESS.

Increasing Number of Papers That Devote Space to the Grange.

It is gratifying to note the attitude of the press of the country toward the grange, as compared with only a few short years ago. And not only has good space been given to grange matters, but the tone of the editorial comments from the newspapers writing the subject of Missouri state grange, is the most favorable of our experience to date. Editors seem to be more generally disposed to do justice to the grange, and to give it the same fair treatment they give other organizations. Many of the editors who are not members of the grange, are yet in the line of growing conviction that the grange is a good thing, and that it is a good thing for the farmers to have an organization.

Among the editorial comments which we have read, we find the following from the Lyons (Michigan) Republican, which is a good specimen of the comments we refer to:

"The Patrons of Husbandry, or Grange, is a farmers' organization which is doing good work in the interest of the farmers. Its meetings are open to the public, and its work is such that it should receive the support of every farmer who can spare the time to attend its meetings. The Grange is a good thing for the farmers, and we hope it may prosper."

CALIFORNIA

Do you want to live where the climate is mild the year round—where labor is never oppressed by stress of weather, and where animal vitality is never lost by mere conflict with cold?

Do you want to live in a region where the resources are more varied than in any other equal area in the world, where the division of great ranches affords a fine opportunity to get a small farm that will assure you a competence?

Do you want to live where, with a minimum of labor, you can grow profitable crops of grapes and small fruit, oranges, lemons, olives, prunes and almonds, alfalfa and grain, where crops are sure, business is good and capital easily finds profitable investment?

Then go to California, where both health and opportunity await your coming.

The Chicago, Union Pacific and North-Western Line is the most direct route to the Pacific Coast, and there are two fast through trains daily via this line, over the famous double-track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River.

Special low round-trip rates are in effect via this line throughout the summer to various Pacific Coast points, and colonist low rate one-way tickets will be on sale during September and October, which give an unusual chance for settlers to make the trip at a minimum of expense.

Daily and personally conducted excursions are operated through to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Portland without change, on which a double berth in a Pullman tourist sleeping car from Chicago costs only $7.00, via the

HE HAD THE EVIDENCE.

Hostler Knew Something About New Mexico's Dull Temper.

A certain gentleman recently got aboard at a Indian town where a man who had business on hand in attend to it.

A day or two later he met his friend, who, by the way, is a member of the new assembly.

"Well, my dear friend, you've attended to a good bunch of business, I suppose," said the gentleman.

"I didn't do that, at all," replied the member, "but you see, Bob, I had a good time. I met a fellow who knew a lot about New Mexico, and we had a good time talking about the country."

"Did you get your business done?"

"I didn't do that, either, but

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME XXXVII. CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1905 NUMBER 15

Charlevoix Sentinel.
WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

East Jordan Herald: Edward Palmer, age 76 years, died at the County Farm, Thursday morning of a complication of heart disease and old age. Undertaker Whittington prepared and shipped the remains to Ann Arbor.

The famous old Ramshell farm near Traverse City, the property of the late Hon. J. G. Ramsdell, is for sale and the price asked is $20,000. Traverse City is considering the advisability of buying the place, platting enough of it into residence lots to pay the purchase price, and converting the balance into a public park.

Boyne Citizen: The Orangemen are arranging for a monster celebration there on July 12, and it is expected that their large posters will be removed before The Citizen goes to press. They have arranged for some extensive new and novel features in the way of entertainment for the visitors, and a large gathering is assured. The Orangemen have a number of strong lodges in this northern part of the state, all of which have been invited to join us for one day of pleasure and recreation. The complete program will be published in our next issue.

Central Lake Torch: The special election held last Monday for the purpose of deciding whether or not to bond the village to the amount of $20,000 for assuming municipal control water works and electric lights, resulted in a vote of 67 for and 102 against the proposition. Considerable opposition developed early in the campaign and very little hard work was done for the measure. It is practically agreed that Central Lake needs a more ample system of water works for protection against fire, and should the question, instead of all analogizing, come before the voters of this village at some future day, it would probably meet with a far better reception.

East Jordan Herald: The forgery charge preferred by Kai Rabert against James L. Hackett was heard before Justice Hemmings Thursday. Hackett waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court for trial. He was released on bonds, but was immediately re-arrested by Deputy Sheriff Harrington on a second similar charge preferred by Mr. Hansen. The second case was heard Thursday afternoon and he again waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court, on Friday he was released on bonds, but Joseph Whitford and Samuel Rogers went on the bonds in the first case and Wm. J. Carson and Joseph Fisher in the second.

The celebrated case of the Pere Marquette diverting channel system at John Fisher's Kalkaska farm has been settled out of court after two years of litigation in which time it has appeared on the docket of the twenty-eighth judicial circuit court, Judge C. Chittenden, Cadillac, presiding, three successive times, twice reaching the Supreme court, aside from hearings on various motions in chambers. Two years ago the Pere Marquette straightened its rails a spur from mains long into a lumber district in Kalkaska Mahan branch and ran for eighty rods through the 160-acre farm of John Brown of Kalkaska, who placed a $500 value upon the right of way, and before settlement was made of the Elk Rapids Iron company guaranteed the right of way to the Pere Marquette and the road was built. Immediately trouble began for the Pere Marquette, for Farmer Brown began to tear up the tracks and perform other duties which were not conducive to the peace of mind of the Pere Marquette crews. Dull & Davis of Traverse City, attorneys for the Pere Marquette, applied to the circuit court for an injunction restraining him from interfering with the right of way, this being granted. Train service was again resumed in May, but in July the farmer suddenly built a shanty and placed it directly across the track and enclosed the track with a fence. Suit was again begun in Circuit court by the Pere Marquette for contempt of court and steps taken to acquire an original title to the property of which the farmer held but a tax deed to. In the meantime the house which had been built had been removed by the road officials, but was again placed on the track by the farmer and his wife installed to hold it down. Fright and fear of contempt of traffic proved too much for her as she was left alone owing to the husband being in jail on a ten days' sentence for contempt of court. She was taken out 10 on a cot and carried to a friendly neighbor's house and the shanty again removed by being dragged off with an engine. As soon as John Brown regained his liberty, he felled a tree and perched himself in the topmost branches with a Winchester rifle and for some time held all at bay, though finally dislodged. Chase resigned until fall, when the Pere Marquette purchased the original title for $100 from Mr. Graham of St. Johns, but before the title of land was tied before circuit court the farmer had spoken out an injunction restraining the Pere Marquette from trafficking over his land and an attempt was made by the latter to dissolve it though unwalling the road remaining closed from January until April of this year. Farmer Brown did not consider the injunction staunch enough to prevent the Pere Marquette from running out ten loaded cars back of his land so he dug no less meane ditch in front of them, completely bottling up the road. Settlement was effected recently by the Elk Rapids Iron company obtained jointly with the Pere Marquette a lease of the right of way for a period of six years and in turn executing a deed to the defendant, John Brown, conveying him with the original title of the contention the time and pay his attorney fees, he to pay costs. Taking the cost of the original title good, and the various other costs and $100 which was paid John Brown in July of last year, it is conceded by full minded persons that the farmer was certainly a sharper than what he considered his rights and due reward is given him for winning out single handed against a corporation backed by millions.

Hens Are Healthy.

"I lost 50 chickens last winter, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa. "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was tired, weak and had no feel, my hands and knees ached when I walked. From this terrible condition I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders at F. G. Hixon & Co. drug store; price 50c.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Miss Ethel Cook of Charlevoix is the guest of Mr. Wilkinson for a few weeks.

Mr. H. W. Carpenter who has been ill this spring is quite well again, and made a visit to relatives below Traverse City recently.

Dave Francis of Boyne City is on the Island this week.

Dr. Morris and Mr. Hendy both of Thompsonville were on the Island last week.

Mr. Corpthe L. S. Accident Association agent of Saginaw did a nice business here last week.

Mr John Dempsey of Chicago an old time Beaver Island pioneer is visiting his brother and wife Mr. and Mrs. Jas Dempsey.

Henry Gaspian and wife of Manistique are visiting friends on the Island this week.

Michael McGuire Beaver Island's general heater and contractor is in Chicago this week.

The K. O. T. M. Beaver Island Tent may be said to be fairly started on its way. The supplies for running the lodge are here and meetings held regularly on the 2nd and 4th Thursdays of each month.

Mrs. Con McAuley of this place is visiting her son in Chicago.

The Beaver Island, Capt. Waite commanding, was thumped from the ways in Gaskill's inland harbor and towed to Beaver Island, for where repairs will be made on her. She is to be sold soon by John C. Cadagher executor of the estate.

The Sutz House Simmonds loaded with lumber at the head of the Beaver Saturday last.

W. E. Gaskill returned from a business trip to Manistee Wednesday.

The H. J. L. Co. began shipping their large stock of lumber July 10.

Dr. S. C. Graves and daughter the well known Grand Rapids surgeon, took a side trip to Beaver Island on his way to the state Medical Society meeting yesterday. Returning he was accompanied by Dr. Williams both bound for the state meeting at Petoskey.

Chance then an old one time resident of Beaver Island is back again fishing at Hog Island.

St. James township is doing itself proud in the way of sidewalk building. There is now a walk six feet wide from W. J. Gallagher's residence on the lake front to the business section of town past the Beaver Hotel. B. I. L. Co's part extending nearly round the harbor to the point. Bravo to Dowey, our mayor and our worthy street commissioner Floyd.

Mr. Lyon of Birch park novelty fame, is on the Island for a stock of cats for his business in Chicago. Sunday evening July 2, a reception was tendered to Rev. Fr. Zegelder, at the close of the pastorate on Beaver Island, at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Donlevy. A large number of friends were present and testified their appreciation of his six years of faithful service on the Island by a hundred dollar purse which was put in his hands on this occasion, in addition to the salary which has been paid in full. To say that Beaver Island regrets to say farewell to Fr. Zegelder is but a feeble expression of the real feeling of the people. He has made a host of friends on the Island among both Catholic and Protestants who will all wish him well in his new field.

Chas. Tilly is engaged in finishing up the interior of Capt. John McCauley's house.

The tug Margaret McGuire is rebuilding her Captain John McGuire doing the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fletcher welcomed a new arrival June 21, a ten pound boy.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jas McCann on Beaver Island July 2, a boy.

Fr. Chail left on G. T. M. the superior from the Holy Childhood school at Harbor Springs accompanied by Rudolf Friedman O. F. M. for the new parish on Beaver Island to succeed Fr. Zegelder. The Fathers were accompanied by Robert Bergland of Fort Wayne ind. who will spend a few days on the island.

—Work on the Clinton street paving job is full swing. Contractor Howland has the curb and gutter about two blocks done, and the excavation is progressing. The street committee expect to begin putting on the stone next week. The stone crusher began work last week.

—The farmers of the northside ward played a game of ball with a mixed nine of second and third warders Tuesday afternoon at Atkins' Park, and the latter vanquished the farmers by a score of 16 to 12. They tell us that the game would bring tears to the eyes of a stone, strange that a lot of old hard sinners should want to get out in the cold on a hot day and make spectacles of themselves.

—The prospects for a large crop of potatoes in Northern Michigan never better, for the stems are all strong and good and the plants have a very healthy appearance. Of course, there is plenty of time for the drought or for too much rain to spoil the crop, but at present there appears to be no reason why Grand Traverse region should not have a banner crop, as every year raising potatoes proves this fact than last.

—An Roundabs special of the 5th says: While running light from Evart City to Ludington for one last night, the steamer Talent, owned by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, ran on a reef near St. Martin's island and was not released at a late hour this afternoon. The tug Hiawatha of this port went to the stranded steamer and found two six inches out in the fore and aft, and all attempts to release her were futile. According to reports received this afternoon, it will be necessary to dredge a channel before the Talent can be taken off. A small sea is now running, and a blow would endanger the vessel. The Talent passed here for Boyne City Monday.

Exchange: Traverse Insurance has been long hard hit by a decision of the Missouri state supreme court which denies a case against the Knights of Pythias order that insurance can lapse after three payments. The action was brought to recover $1,000 on a contract of membership on which the monthly payments had been paid up to June, 1903, when three payments delinquent. In 1902 the father of the policy died and when payment was demanded, it was refused by the K. T. lodge on the grounds that the policy had lapsed because of non-payment of the month ly assessments. The court ruled that the policy was good after three payments had been made upon it.

—Thursday, at what time it is not we know, the best intuitions have moved for Traverse City will be held the work to cover one blocks of State street beginning at cass and running to Boardman avenue, the depth to be five feet and the width of the pave ment to vary according to location. Traverse City Herald: That's a new thing! We have there would be some monkey business dreaming in connection with our pavement, and now we find a bill in the hop. Jack Crawford's outfit comes here and puts the wood over our eyes with two inches of pavement, and goes to Traverse City and gives them a pavement five and inch. That old council, of which John Campbell was a member, better explain.

Just Cannot Discriminate.

Talk Charlevoix! Don't let up. It is a good subject to talk about, on the streets, within our gates, for Charlevoix is thriving.

Don't let the vexatious of local politics weaken and impair our public spirit. We are two years whatever, but political limitation and we all have the good of Charlevoix at heart. We may differ as to certain questions of local government, but when we have fought the battle, whether we win or lose let us pull together for the common good, cheerfully acquiesce, and suppressing our political ardor until the next election.

Charlevoix has reason to be proud of its water supply, but it is hardly fortunate in possessing a new artesian mineral well on the side. The city has wisely decided to pipe it up to Bridge street and supply a public drinking fountain. This water was pronounced mineral, sulphur, and epsom upon of the earth from a depth of 500 feet. Charlevoix will, Charlevoix scenery and Charlevoix what soever, a great attractive force, and every year the number increases of those who come here to enjoy them.

On a recent Saturday an old timer called our attention to the large number of farmer's teams on the streets, and inquiring, was informed that much compared to week ago. The farmers very grandfying. It means the development of agricultural resources, great increase of improved acreage and the continuing prosperity of the farmers. When we consider the large and increasing acreage of Fruit land farms, the fact begins to find that Charlevoix is surrounding by a good agricultural territory as there is in Michigan. The agricultural is the good of all. The company embraces a country of good "tried-times," and the program is one of rare merit. Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon.

—The W. C. T. U. will hold a Mothers Meeting at the home of Mrs. S. J. Allen Friday afternoon. Hot cross session at 2:00, program at 3 o'clock, special to song service led by R. P. Wakinson. Devotionals Rev. C. L. Berry, tool call with responses. An excellent literary and musical program has been prepared.

—The attention of all launch owners is called to the law governing the running of such boats. Marine lights must be displayed "from sun set to sunrise." The deputy collector of customs for the port has very emphatic instructions regarding the enforcement of this law. Any launch violating the law by running after sunset without marine lights will be promptly dealt with.

—The Lake and South Arm have received exceptional service this season. On the Boyne City side the steamer Gordon leaves Charlevoix at 7 a. m. and 1:30; the Cummings at 9:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. On the East Jordan side the Upper Dates Charlevoix at 7:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. the Hiawatha at 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. Both these boats stop at Sequoinda resort, Ironton, and other South Arm points.

—John A. Lynn who has become known far and wide as the "Rustic Man" of Charlevoix, has erected a small village of rustic tepees in the vacant space near the N. M. Trans. Co. dock. They are built of birch bark, and while they resemble an extra muscular Indian, yet they are an advertisement. Mr. Lynn is a "rustic genius." His creations are as numerous as they are beautiful. Many of them are useful. There is nothing cheap in a birch bark tepee or a rustic seat.

—Another important real estate change occurred last week, that means much to the north side resort interest. H. A. Emery bought of Mrs. Ella Fox, the Fox homestead, just west of the Fountain City House. The property has full lock frontage on River street and is 132 feet deep. Taken in connection with the recent purchase by the Bakers of the Fountain City House, the purchase of the Fox lot for resort purposes indicates a resort going of large proportions around the Beach Hotel and the adjacents development of that popular hotel into a big summer enterprise. The Emerys propose to erect several cottages on the newly acquired lot.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hanson, Pastor.

The subject of Discourse last Sunday morning was "Executive Ideal" and treated of the necessity of rest; the relation of rest to proper and proportionate expenditure of energy in productive work; and the consequent effect of well earned and fully taken recreation upon the whole manhood. Among important Monuments in the Religious World" was the subject in the evening and brought out notes on "The Painting of Henderson." Teachers of Charlevoix County.

The annual "Summer Institute" for this county, will be held in Boyne City, during the week beginning July 31st 1905.

Commissioner Osborne of Antrim County will conduct the institute, assisted by Miss Hinman of the County, Normal, and Supt. Bell of Boyne.

The object of the institute is to make it one of a practical value to teachers, and in order to do so, we need your hearty support and assistance.

School officers are calling for trained teachers, and we feel that you cannot afford to miss this week of practical instruction.

A synopsis of the work to be done will be mailed to you later.

We hope that every teacher in the county will be present and help to make the work a success.

J. M. MCCONNELL, County Commissioner.

RIGHTS OF INDIANS.

UNITED STATES COURT RENDERS IMPORTANT DECISION

Mixed-Blood Indian Woman Confirmed in Her Possession of Valuable Land—Cleveland Man Sells Agent Who Wants It to Tired of Supporting.

Judge Cochran of the United States Circuit Court, New York, in the case of Mrs. Jane Dick against the Long Island railroad corporation, in sustaining the demurrer of the defendant to the complaint, filed a decision of importance to the Indians. The action was brought by the plaintiff, who is a half-blood Indian of the Unkatawa tribe, to recover the value of a certain parcel of land in the Unkatawa Indian reservation, which the defendant corporation claims to have acquired by condemnation. The plaintiff claims that the land in question was given her by her father, who was a chief of the Unkatawas, and that she has occupied it ever since. The defendant corporation claims that the land was condemned and that the Indian title was extinguished. The plaintiff's counsel argued that the land in question was given to her father by the Unkatawas, and that it was not the property of the tribe. The decision of the court was that the land was given to the father of the plaintiff by the Unkatawas, and that it was not the property of the tribe. The decision is considered of great importance to the Indians, as it confirms the title of many of the Indians who have been in possession of valuable lands for many years, but who have had no deeds to the property.

Cleveland Man Sells Agent Who Wants Him to Be Tired of Supporting.

Frederick Jackson, a farmer who resides about two miles from Cooperdale, Ohio, and left over three fifty yards from the house of his alleged victim, has been arrested and landed in the Cambridge jail charged with having murdered Mrs. R. Jones Hughes. Her head and mutilated body was found tumbled into the little subterranean alcove to a spring. The street of Dickerson was deserted. The Dickson blacksmith was taken to the spot where the crime was committed and allowed to inspect an object lying at the bottom of the well. Nothing was found. Then they emptied the water and went in. A dread silence fell on the crowd of men as they in the hard and then stripped naked and went down into the well. Suddenly a cry from the bottom of the well, and straight up the chimney and into the between where the crowd stood. Then a dead body was in the hot and then stripped naked. The fact that proved that robber. The man who had committed the crime in that it was the result of a family feud of long standing. Jackson's wife was wooed by a business friend of the victim, who was a member of the Knights of the Tented Tent.

THE GRANGE A FIXTURE.

Conducted by the Master of the West Virginia State Grange.
[Special Correspondence.]

No well informed person will deny that the Order of Patrons of Husbandry has done more for advancing agriculture and the men engaged in it than just and proper recognition from our other single industries combined. The grange is now nearly forty years old, and while in it as in every other human endeavor many mistakes have been made, knowledge has been gained from past errors and mistakes are now less frequent. During these years the grange has become stronger and more thoroughly established, while numerous other farmers organizations have sprung into existence, have run their course and gone. Most of them have founded on good principles and doubtless many of them have done good work in a good cause, but most of them have gone down and disappeared, and the grange is still here and frequently we hear them say why.

The grange is founded on principles as broad as human nature and as deep as is possible for human society. Combining the home element of work, amusement and instruction in its order, it endeavors to do good to its members, every possible consideration for a farmers organization, and yet it has never gone into politics as a body, as a rule, and never will, and yet it has influence in our legislature. The Tennessee or Georgia grange, or any other member paid one dollar dues and from moderately generous with further assessments, but instead that amount to the state or to the national grange, it would be a fixture in the grange, and its good organization and well established principles would guard it against loss of the Tennessee or Georgia grange.

The grange is the only farmers organization which is founded in its constitution, which is based on the entrenchments of organizations existing in the homes of the farmers. It has the principles and yet its law accommodates of small and narrow means and the means of a little less than character. It has stood the test for thirty-eight years, is adhered to by men and women living on their farms who have been employed in the school of frugality and good citizenship. It has averted the greatest influences in modern times in the shape of farm life or making farm life attractive to the boys and girls, bringing much-to-and-fro amongst the farm boys to stay on and not leave a cool life grange situation.

A FARMERS' ORGANIZATION.

The Grange Should Embrace Its Membership in Agriculture.

There is a strong sentiment among grangers, since the New York Farmer, that the grange should embrace the membership in farmers. Of course we have, organizing, discussions, conventions, meetings, and all the machinery of a well organized society, but it seems to me that a number of reasons that the prejudice of all farmers that the prejudices of all outside elements in the country are against a farmers organization really from the introduction of non-farmers into the grange, and it would require a number of reformers that the prejudice of all farmers that the prejudice

YOLANDE

CHAPTER XXIV.

The morning the news of war came, as Yolande in her free dress by Pearl, sat on the floor of her bedroom, her hands and footing were in a state of disorder, and the maid was at the stage of a breakfast, was only half of way, for how long, or how far, she was to be her frightened way to consult her mother's precious favorite at Dalkeith. Yolande was quite aware that the Duchess in long talk had been talking to her mother about her, and that the result had evidently alarmed her mother. He made the visit to Dalkeith, and she knew that she gave some pretty hard answers, which the Duchess had evidently seen. The Duchess had evidently seen that she should be spoiled. All this he still was thinking of, as she sat on the floor, and the maid was busy with her hair, when the door opened, and her mother came in, looking as much as she could, and without a word of greeting to her daughter. She said, in a measured manner, that she had just received a letter from Dalkeith, and that the Duchess was very much annoyed at her conduct yesterday. Yolande had not a word to say in reply to this.

"Do you know what you are trying to do?" her mother said, with a little more warmth. "Do you know that the Duchess has the power to make your life miserable? Do you know that she is the most influential person in the country? Do you know that she is the most influential person in the country? Do you know that she is the most influential person in the country

MULCTED BY BANDITS.

LOSS OF AMERICAN BANKER IN SANTIAGO DE CUBA.

Money Secured by Spanish Robbers Who Escaped $2,000 Worth of Jewels in Addition—Millions Lost by Loose Methods in Doing Army Work.

James Cazedessus, a wealthy American banker and merchant of Santiago, Cuba, is dead, and his family, the other night, had been informed that they had seen the last of him. He was arrested in exactly the manner described in the dispatches to his family with business and watched in his home. The indignities he underwent, the demands made upon him by the Cuban leaders in a postage stamp account, should be made a matter of record. Cazedessus turned in the $2,000 and the bandits disappeared. The next morning Mr. Cazedessus went to the town and secured the services of a detective. He went to the barracks to complain and to ask the assistance of the Spanish officials in all Spanish and American locations. The detective was instructed to make a thorough job of it. Cazedessus had secured the services of a Spanish lawyer, who was to be his adviser. Mr. Cazedessus then went to the Cuban leaders to

NEW GERMAN TARIFF

MAY OPERATE AGAINST AMERICAN FARM PRODUCTS.

While Intended to Increase the Profits of German Agriculture It Involves Greater Food Cost That Is Certain to Be Felt by Manufacturers and Artisans.

Whatever is to be done in the matter of rescue legislation during the session of Congress that is expected to begin in October, it is coming to be the opinion of this Treasury officials that some action must be taken in the matter of our trade relations with Germany. It is believed by the best informed of these officials that any conditions which may be created to respect to revenue, or the tariff itself, can be met without entering upon any special system of changes in the customs laws. But when such a case is presented as that of German aggressions directly against the trade of the United States, and with the manifest purpose of injuring the interests of American producers, particularly the agricultural producers and raw materials in this country, is for evident a question of serious import to our statesmen what is to be done to meet the proposition.

The growth of more than a hundred million dollars worth, in a year, seems to have so startled the land owners appears to have had the effect of arousing German statesmen to a defense of their domestic interests. This they propose to accomplish by a sweeping increase in the tariff upon most all articles, and especially those which are imported from the United States, leaving a loophole for the taking of concessions through treaties or nation treatment or agreements for reciprocal trade, whatever course shall be decided upon by the authorities in operation.

This is one of the most striking features in the details of our trade with Germany, facts which cannot fail to impress any people in the event of the subject coming on the consideration by Congress. Some of the facts in these trade relations are these; also, to be of reminiscence interest to the foreign people, which the scheme for retaliatory duties is forthcoming such as the German Government. The fact is that to the greater part of our exports to Germany are so-called raw materials and raw cotton forms an important part of these exports. We are now in Germany annually more than $100,000,000 worth of raw cotton, and are taking back from Germany some 25 manufacturers of cotton to the value of more than $15,000,000 worth. In other words, we send raw materials across the water to empty mills which manufacture commodities which should be manufactured in the mills of the United States. With the more than fifty-million worth of cotton sent to Germany in the raw, and provisions and breadstuffs sent to that country to the amount of more than $40,000,000, these articles constituting more than two-thirds of the exports from this country to Germany each year, it will be seen that the operation of the new German tariff scheme to remove of vital importance to the farmers of the United States. According to the omitted plans of the proposed new German tariff arrangement the rates of duty on most of these articles except raw cotton, which is not subject to duty in the ports of Germany are intended to be increased from twelve to more than double the existing tariff rates in the case of most of the articles, and even before the omitted plan of the German government is to go into effect, the date being set as about the first of March of next year. In the meantime there will be made, facts brought to light in this country and in Germany as to the probable effect of the new plan. As to the rates on our breadstuffs and provisions they will bear heavily upon the working classes in Germany, for in large part, at least, these foodstuffs, duties will be added to the cost of the products in the German market. This seems to be true from the fact that Germany does not produce these articles up to the wants of her people, and there is little chance of reducing down the price of Germany competition. It is natural to expect, therefore, that a slightly protect will go up from the German artisans and factory workmen, who will be accustomed to coarser bread and meat. In the meantime, it is practically certain that some part, at least, of the burden of these increased tariff exactions in the German ports will fall upon the producers of these commodities in the United States. This presents a situation which most appeal to the candidate statesmen of the American statesmen in the hope that something may be devised which will offset this scheme of the German government.

As against our exports of raw materials and a few manufactures to Germany, we are receiving, in addition to the $15,000,000 worth of manufactures cotton annually produced and sent on to the German factories, other manufactured goods to the value of probably $50,000,000. The exports manufactured products of all kinds and of all changes in the American dollar upon these articles by which the producers of Germany are letting the ports of the United States would be subjected to the increased rates of duty would fall heavily on the German producers. This is true because, for the most part, these articles, or articles of like character, are produced in the United States under conditions which make it possible for our people to compel the German exporter to the United States to pay the greater part of the burden of custom exactions for the privilege of selling our goods in the markets of the United States.

It would appear that the German government is proposing to enter upon this policy of high retaliation against the products of the United States regardless of the effect such policy will have upon the artisans of Germany. The proposed increase in rates are burdensome high to most in europe, but especially in this true in the matter of breadstuffs and provisions. The United States could at Guelph, Ontario has been backed into the subject of the proposed German tariff, and in a letter which he sends to the Department of Commerce he reminds us the fact that the proposed changes in the German tariff will fall heavily upon the producers in the United States. Among other things he said:

"The new German tariff which was calculated to punish United States manufactures cannot but hurt Canada and Britain as well. Though Great Britain had advanced no duty against German goods. In some ways this war will affect the United States and therefore the increase in customs. Thus the old rate of wheat and rye, 35 cents per 220 pounds, is now to be changed to $1.28; the rates on flour is to be from $1.74 per barrel to $1.92; meat from $1.04 to $1.28, cheese from $1.92 to $1.92."

After speaking of the great increase during recent years in Germany in works in cotton, metal and machinery, he said:

"It will be much worse a year from now, when all the duties in the United States, and the tariff, the tariff will be imposed on imports from United States and Great Britain, the country that it would appear, is Germany herself. It is doubtful if the German manufacturer, fairly organized can stand under the cost of German manufacturers to compete in outside markets.

"Hitherto one of half the German products which found entry were those of the German manufacturer, and the German manufacturer was interested in conversant with the increased cost of the raw material, and saved to the German manufacturer by the reduction in the duties of 2 per cent will cause to add a figure in the component elements of the cost.

An Item of Strength.

"Germany was thinking about some buildings that had collapsed little thought of the cost.

"Then some put up," said Mr. Ahe, "the business of a place for 200 years in America.

"Some one asked a man of these buildings who was a place of 200 years ago. "Why, how she do you account for our new houses blowing down in last weeks wind, when your houses 'carmen' to were tight as gunnysacks, wonderful, same matter every thing.

"Yes, said the other builder, but you forget that time had been prepared."

AN OLD DEMOCRATIC DOCTRINE.

That Protection Be Abolished to Increase Foreign Trade.

For 50 years the Democratic party has been saying that a protective tariff killed off prospects of exports from this country to other countries. Democratic platforms and Democratic speeches have proclaimed this doctrine. Yet since are the facts? Russia has never had a low tariff. Russia has exported no other commodities falling off from year to year. Russia tariff policy the subject of taxes has been against the Russian Czars.

Japan completely Republican, are now proclaiming this old Democratic doctrine as if it were a new discovery. Japan drops from Governor Allott R. Cummins four many years ago. Japan the Republican tariff protective tariff Nippon on export trade. At a banquet given in Chicago in honor of the commercial representatives of this city on Saturday, Gov. Cummins who was asked to speak said:

"Our manufactures are unrivaled, our resources are inexhaustible, our ships are the most of the world, our enterprise and energy are the envy of the world, and we do not need to be afraid of the world. We challenge the world. We challenge Gov. Cummins to name a time in American history when our tariffs prevailed when we were exporting goods as we are at the present time.

The Governor evidently believes that large class of people who believe that we ought to cook chewing gum, ties to all our goods into their countries by pledging to let their labor come. That doctrine has served some the country not good.

The Governor weeps because the many is mad, and is about to wipe on the line. The Governor could not know that Germany has been trying to depreciate American manufactures to every extent possible. Germany is a protective nation. Their protective doctrine originated from the success of the American doctrine. Germany has been especially anxious to shut out American agricultural products, and it looks as if she has now her opportunity to do it. At the present time we are giving Germany as much trade as she is giving us. It is a fair divide. Leave the Governor think the Germans are going to let us do it? Do you think those circumstances? Germany is now in end of our tariff. Russia we are in need of food. If we set a tariff wave on our preferential rates, such as we ought to be, offered to Great Britain, where will we get the rest of our food? Russia and Germany are the nations of trade of largest in our favor.

But it is amusing to notice those old Democratic sentiments coming around. Our country has a protective tariff. They are more advocated when we have a tariff. The revenue only. In other words, they are more advocated when they are in power.

Secretary Shaw has suggested that we deal with Germany as we deal with Russia. If she threatens, we will do the same. If she threatens she is simply doing to us the very thing our manufacturers want to sell more goods. What would happen if we should give Germany a compliment treaty is problematic to England to whom we sent so much. What would Germany do? She would take care of herself by some sort of tariff compliment. Whenever this country begins to pick her favorites, making reciprocity treaties more favorable to one country than to another, we will have trade wars with every country on the globe. The thing to do is to treat every foreign country alike, then there will be no trouble.

It is nonsense to say that our own protective tariff makes our sales of farm products and manufactured goods absent.

Furthermore, if the Governor wants cheaper goods at home, and that seems to be a part of his purpose, that end can be reached by allowing the American market to become glutted with products. Then prices will go down. We had just as well reach lower prices that way as to lower the tariff for the purpose of inviting competition in the Government and foreign competition at home of the red hot variety, he ought to be willing to allow all foreign products to be closed against us. According to his doctrine, this is would get cheap goods at home. Many times he has said monopolies have been established and prices of American products were too high. If his scheme of capturing foreign markets is entered, he would accomplish the lowering of prices at home. Our manufacturers have complained that the Government weeps because they many is mad, and is about to wipe on the line. The Governor could not know that Germany has been trying to depreciate American manufactures to every extent possible. Germany is a protective nation. Their protective doctrine originated from the success of the American doctrine. Germany has been especially anxious to shut out American agricultural products, and it looks as if she has now her opportunity to do it. At the present time we are giving Germany as much trade as she is giving us. It is a fair divide. Leave the Governor think the Germans are going to let us do it? Do we think those circumstances? AMERICANS INSIST ON AMERICAN POLICY.

What Would Surely Happen if the Panama Canal Commission Should Persist in Spending American Money for Foreign Supplies and Materials.

The letter of Secretary which was to be read at the meeting of the commissioners of the Panama Canal commission that is will positively attempt supplies for the construction of the great waterway whenever it can do so at lower prices than are ruling in this country. The commissioners have learned what happens when the authority of Congress is flouted by the executive department. Congress controlling as it does the purse strings, can make the Panama Canal commission a very uncomfortable body if it chooses to do so. The commissioners know that if they should ignore the wishes of Congress they would be at once called to account by the committee of ways and means and by appropriations for the Panama Canal would be cut down to the limit of the money actually in the treasury

END OF OIL BOYCOTT.

THE STANDARD COMPANY AGAIN TAKES PRODUCT OF KANSAS.

Hostility of Rockefeller Company Against State Field Is Discontinued According to Pipe Line Southward Traffic on New York Central Will Soft.

The primary of the Standard Oil Company that it would begin taking all the oil production of Kansas and the surrounding Kansas is similar. Thursday when the Standard company began taking the Kansas product of Kansas, of which 30,000 came from Kansas. This also the federal of the Insurance Company, against the Kansas law, the Standard announced last night that the Kansas Legislature was not to be the cause of shipping indulgence, understanding that the increase of transportation to Kansas would take place on the high grade oil. This is the Standard's first step in the direction of the Kansas law, and that grades above 32 degrees gravity, the Kansas the high grade of Kansas oil, the Standard practical interest. The company should of a month ago, when it began to take Gulf of Mexico to supplement Kansas oil, which is of a lower grade than that of the Kansas oil. The producers Kansas and the management of the Kansas the Standard operations, and increase the price of Kansas oil from 30 cents a barrel. There is no limit to this oil, and the Standard is willing to take all it can get. The refinery operations are in accordance with the Standard of all its tanks and then started the last month and developed a market for the increased supply. Kansas oil is being used in Kansas. The Standard is now in Kansas, and from the Kansas Standard, the field of the Kansas field. In this and the Standard's operations in Kansas, the Standard Oil Company has not made any concessions to the Kansas law. The Standard Oil Company has not made any concessions to the Kansas law. RAILROADS BACK LAWS.

Court Decisions Missouri from Enforcing New Freight Rate Law.

Judge John F. Philips, in the United States District Court in Kansas City, granted the temporary injunction prayed for by Missouri railroads restraining the State officers and warehouse commissioners of Missouri from enforcing the Missouri freight rate law enacted by the last Legislature. When the law went into effect on June 10 against railways in this State mentioned Judge Phillips to restrain the State officials from enforcing the act, the railroads contending the rates provided in the new law were unjustifiable and would amount to the confiscation of their property. The case also was directed against three Kansas City shippers, namely, the Armour Packing Co., the Swift and Company and Cudahy Packing Co. The case also was directed against the Missouri Pacific, Missouri Kansas and Texas and other railroads. Mrs. Lucretia Jones, Mrs. Lucretia Jones, Mrs. Jones said she was a widow and had a family of six children to support. She said she was a widow and had a family of six children to support. THE AMERICAN RECOURSE.

To Place a Prohibitive Tariff on German Manufactures.

The expected has happened, and the German government has given formal notice that the government under which we receive the benefit of their minimum tariff rates under the reciprocity existing treaty will terminate on the first day of next March, when the new commercial treaties which Germany has negotiated with other countries will go into effect. Meanwhile, she stands ready to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with us in default of which all American products will pay the maximum German tariff rates, which on many important articles of our export are prohibitive. Cotton, which Germany wants, is admitted on the free list. She is aware that our constitution, adopted a century and a quarter ago, prevents us from doing what Germany herself would probably do in a similar case—lay an export duty on cotton, exported to Germany and thereby give our own manufacturers and those of commercial friendly countries an advantage in the markets of the world.

If Germany chooses to adopt the practice of selling out the interests of our cotton growers in order to have cutlery for some other part the United States will not follow her example. The government of the United States will continue to be an impossible and impartial government regarding the interests of all its constituents alike and treating aggressors with all manifest if they will be only if they will not be—and as Germany proposes does an unremunerative against all our people united we emerge all the more minded against one of our people—this, however unfortunate and unfortunate it may be we shall have no recourse except to place a discriminating prohibitive tariff on German manufactures. Meanwhile we: Fitz-Oliver was in negotiation but it is rather than a loss of dating relations on its by external pressure. Thus the American people will money enough.

But while taking and considering this position we should not be unmindful the facilitation of commerce that Germany is also at the money of the Germans. When German businessmen come on this side to begin the number by representative trade bodies man appear in favor of that from time we can only endeavor our trade and to extension of our cotton and other commodities trade there and short terms to run, and give notice to the West that of the demands of their application we shall be free from such entanglements and that we will return to the time-honored American doctrine of equal protection to our own people and impartial trade with the rest of mankind.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Two Tests.

It is said that Mr. Cummins is going to vote some more in favor of the sugar trust, and that he will make a test here in a recent one from the editor of a newspaper in British Columbia.

"We firmly believe in the efficacy of import duties as a means of building up a home market for our own producers and we can see no reason why a policy which has been so eminently useful the forty-ninth parallel should prove otherwise south of it."

And here is another from a newspaper in New Brunswick.

"All the present writing are not in favor of any general reduction. ...and we have no ambition to be the Canada discovered for the benefit of United States manufacturers."

Between the two the lower immediately ought to be able to figure out whether it consists in being a Canadian or an American.

Dandies for the Invalid.

Simeon Ford tells of some amusing experiences of a lady in Boston who is most charitably disposed toward the poor of the slums. One day this worthy woman in the goodness of her heart visited a small boy in whom she was interested and who was convalescing from a long illness. With her she carried some fine fruit for the lad. But to her surprise the mother received the offering rather disdainfully, evincing little appreciation of or gratitude for what the charitable lady thought would be most acceptable to the little sufferer.

When next the good Samaritan called at the place she asked the mother how the boy had enjoyed the fruit.

"Very well," was the laconic answer.

"And did he eat all of it?"

"Oh, yes," considered the mother, reflectively. "He ate away with it right out the door to the 'ole, he don't care much for fruits. Does something substantial, and more for breakfast, yer see."—New York Times.

How It Has Worked.

Here is the way reciprocity works with Cuba. Of Cuban imports the United States took 81 per cent of the total, while Cuba not only took about 40 per cent of the imports from the United States. The company has made a canal in Cuba, but when it comes to carrying goods the gain to the United States is nothing. All the profit goes to Germany. Reciprocity with Cuba has proved a great success for Germany, but it has not been so for us. We have not been able to get the trade with all mankind. If this will be only if they will not be used as Germany proposes does an unremunerative against all our people united we emerge all the more minded against one of our people—this, however unfortunate and unfortunate it may be we shall have no recourse except to place a discriminating prohibitive tariff on German manufactures. Meanwhile we: Fitz-Oliver was in negotiation but it is rather than a loss of dating relations on its by external pressure. Thus the American people will money enough.

Wants American Vessels Only.

The Merchant Marine league of the United States has sent to its news here a statement giving the position of the League upon the advisability of extending the coast laws to Panama, with a view of providing that the machinery, tools, equipment and supplies of every sort required in the construction of the Panama canal shall be carried in American vessels.

The statement refers to the fact that within the most important argument in favor of the construction of the canal was its value to the country from a maritime standpoint, especially relations of American shipping, the American shipbuilder, ship owner of fever and seamen have all been entirely overlooked. It is pointed out that it was and is generally understood that all this material and equipment should be made in this country and the large expenditure evenly distributed among all classes of men engaged in all kinds of occupation.

The Plagiarist and Mr. Howells.

"When W. D. Howells" said a publisher, "was the editor of Harper's, a young man of humble and rough exterior one day submitted to him a poem.

"Mr. Howells looked over the poem. Then he said to the young man:

"'Did you write this poem yourself?'

"'Yes, sir. Do you like it?' the youth asked.

"'I think it is magnificent,' said Mr. Howells. 'Did you compose it unaided?'

"'I certainly did,' said the young man firmly. 'I wrote every line of it out of my own head.'

"Mr. Howells rose and said:

"'Then, Lord Byron, I am very glad to meet you. But I was under the impression that you had died at Missolonghi a good many years ago.'"

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOUTIT CAMERON.

CHAPTER I.

[illegible]

CHAPTER II.

[illegible]

"Yes, I know all about it," he answered carelessly; "more so than you, I fancy, Hammond. I make sure either woman who has Miss Dacosta for her mother." "Yes, I know, I know," said the other, drawing the cigar from his lips and looking at it with a critical eye; "I know all about it, and I know, too, that it is a great source of anxiety to me. Not daring to confide in anyone, I have to keep my own counsel, and I tell you it is a very uncomfortable feeling, I assure you, to be the sole depositary of the secret." "Why, Hammond, are you [illegible]

[illegible]

"Yes, I am sure of it," he said, [illegible] "Why, Hammond, I would not [illegible] for anything in the world." "Of course, I am sure of that," said the other, [illegible] "Well, Hammond, I suppose I may as well be off. I have the whole of Monte Carlo before me, and I am in the mood to make a good haul." "Stop a moment," said the other, as he rose to go; "I want to speak to you about Miss Dacosta." "Well, what about her?" he asked, [illegible] "Why, I was thinking of asking her to be my wife." "Well, I suppose you can do as you please about that," he said, [illegible] "Why, I thought you would be pleased," said the other, [illegible] "Pleased! What the devil do you mean?" he asked, [illegible] "Why, I thought you liked her," said the other, [illegible] "Pshaw! I like her! Why, what [illegible] I like her, indeed! I suppose I may as well be plain with you, Hammond. I have been in love with Miss Dacosta for the last three years, and I hoped to be able to make her my wife in time. I thought I had a good chance, and I was quite sure she was fond of me. I was a fool to think so, I suppose, for I have seen that she has been in love with you all the time, and I have no doubt she will be happy with you." "Thanks for your good wishes," said the other, [illegible] "I hope you will be happy with Miss Dacosta, and I hope you will be able to make her forget the disappointment she must feel at my conduct." "Oh, I shall do that, no doubt," said the other, [illegible] "Well, I suppose there is no more to be said, so I will be off. Good-bye, Hammond, and I wish you luck." "Good-bye, Ashton," said the other, as he shook hands with his friend; "I hope you will be able to make your fortune at Monte Carlo." "Thanks, I hope so too," said the other, as he left the room and closed the door after him. "Well, I suppose I may as well be off to the Continent," he said, as he lit a cigar and strolled out of the hotel. "I don't care much about being there when Ashton comes home with his wife, and I don't suppose he will care much about my company either. I wonder what he will say when he hears that I have gone to Monte Carlo? I shall have to be careful not to let him know that I have been playing the fool with my fortune." He was a handsome fellow, as he stood there in the hall, with his hat on his head and his cigar between his lips, and he was well aware of the fact. He was a tall, fair-haired fellow, with a fair, silky beard and a pair of dreamy, dark blue eyes, which had a way of looking through and through people when they wished to be very agreeable. He was a man who had spent his life in the pursuit of pleasure, and had succeeded in obtaining a good deal of it. He was a gambler, and had lived by his wits for many years, and had made a good deal of money by his profession. He was a man who had no ties in the world, and who had never had a single friend in his life. He was a man who had never had a single friend in his life, and who never had cared for any woman except his mother, who was dead and buried in her grave in Paris

CORN BREAD FAR THE BEST.

The Little Used as Food in Country Where it is Indigenous.

"It is a great pity," said Judge Hotchkiss of Muskegon, J. T., "that the great mass of American people fail to appreciate the marvelous nutritive value of corn bread, which is the sure enough staff of life and which is far and away superior to the bread that is made of wheat or any other kind of grain. I am saying this not from an academic viewpoint, but from personal knowledge, based on years of robust vacation experience.

"Any and hunter will tell you that corn bread fed to his foodmonth will enable them to pursue the game long or hard farther than any other food, and it is the universal rule of owners of packs to give their dogs all the corn bread they can eat before starting on the chase instead of meat or white bread. The reason of this is that Americans over North American Indians have long known to agree that corn bread alone has been accomplished on any other kind of rations.

"The Man who eats corn bread regularly may not know it but he is following a dietary system that is ideal. Corn bread gives strength to the sinews, promotes good digestion and is an invaluable aid to antiqua. It is better far than bran that the little Julia dipped on her mamma's cake, for yet in the land that is the home of corn the little lights its virtues."—Washington Post.

Practical Joke on a Minister.

Not a few preachers would be glad to hit the author of such a practical joke as was recently played upon the Rev. M. Hagerman of Oxford, Mich. At the annual meeting of the church of which he is pastor the coveted honor of being a preacher comes up for consideration.

At the last meeting of this society, when the subject was brought up, a good humorous man said: "I move the name of reminiscent Brother Hagerman be put in nomination for the next salary—will, please, vote."

Of a serious mind the minister who was present, not an unconscious hit as probable, was heartily allowed to adjourn to where, from the good reason what he had put the question never came and will, with a twinkle of the eye, "I see no one favors that motion, and I will put it again on his side. All those in favor of keeping Brother Hagerman at his present salary will please rise."

Everyone of good humor fled. Then it dawned upon the Hagerman that he had been the victim of a joke, and a smile lighted his eyes and the color returned to his cheeks. Some of his best friends had planned the surprise and the little scheme had worked to perfection.—The Home Hearth.

What Will End Wars?

At a recent dinner given by a Democratic club in New York several of the politicians were discussing the subject of international arbitration.

"It seems to me," said Mayor McClellan, "that The Hague Tribunal is going to make a more effective method of settling a dispute than war, and I think our government is wise in doing all it can to persuade the powers to adjust their difficulties by means of that court, instead of slaughtering the subjects by the tens of thousands.

"What, said Senator Platt, "The Court at The Hague is all right in its way, but it never will be the means of preventing war. Wars of course will become more and more rare as time goes on by the fact that the guns are increasing so much bigger all the while that eventually a few national debts will be created, even if they cost to fire."—The Sunday Magazine.

"The man who insists upon making his own drinks," said a bartender, "is a nuisance. That old gentleman who just left here happens to reveal taste a little out of the beaten path for compounding his own liquor drinks. In May he invariably calls for a toddy, but he has no standard about it. Now he uses Scotch whisky, then Irish, and again sherry. He never says anything about the quality of the ingredients, but he does insist on having them or that brand but he do no longer, because he wishes a different one every time."

SKULL WEIGHS 440 POUNDS.

Skeleton of Huge Prehistoric Animal Loaned to Library.

The fossil remains of a prehistoric animal, the name of classification of which scientists, naturalists or archaeologists who have examined it have been unable to determine, has been loaned for display in the public library museum by the Hutchinson-Hawks Realty company, says the Kansas City Journal. Only part of what constitutes the complete skeleton of the animal is on display, other parts of the bones been found where there were discovered.

The most interesting portion of the animal's skeleton are the skull and one of its ribs. The skull is seven and a half feet in diameter and the same bone from lip to top of skull is twelve feet in length. The eye sockets are four feet in diameter and the brain cavity will hold about half a bushel. A portion of one rib is two feet four inches, seven feet having been broken off. Its weight is 240 pounds.

Naturalists who have examined the bones believe the animal in its native habitat must have measured from 30 to 40 feet in length and from ninety eighty feet in height. It is presumed that the animal during life patrolled two large feet or paddles of the kind in that it was either a water animal or an amphibian.

It was discovered in the Cherokee strip, in a section of the Little Bone creek in September 1893, by H. H. Hoops of Wichita, Kan. Its exact location was in a ravine above the northern bank of the sand stone. The sand in which it was embedded was of very fine grain and it is said that the animal in life must have been well preserved as well. The entire skeleton was perfect in all its parts, save the teeth, when found that year.

"Frank."

A little boy in a department store in a Western city was in waiting on a gold dress lady age. The girl was considerably worried for fear the great store would lose a very profitable customer if the little boy should make a mistake. Finally the lady inquired: "Are you sure you know how to wait on ladies?" "Yes, ma'am," said the little fellow, with a reassuring smile. "I will put it again on her back. All those in favor of keeping Brother Hagerman at his present salary will please rise."

Everyone of good humor fled. Then it dawned upon the Hagerman that he had been the victim of a joke, and a smile lighted his eyes and the color returned to his cheeks. Some of his best friends had planned the surprise and the little scheme had worked to perfection.—The Home Hearth.

Rev. J. W. Vickers was fortunate enough to secure for the Sunday evening service, at the Methodist church, his friend, Rev. Harry Abraham, leader of the Presbyterian church, Chicago Heights. Mr. Abraham is spending part of his vacation in Northern Michigan. Rev. Mr. Hyslop and his people unite in the service. The large congregation listened in rapt attention as he chaste and beautiful language the speaker, who speaks in vivid description as to his calling the scenes he describes before his hearers, discoursed on "The catacombs and their testimony to Christianity." As one listened to the thrilling story of the martyrs and their fidelity to truth it reminded us of the later Christians. The hymns sung were entirely appropriate, "Faith of our Fathers, living still, we will be true to Thee till death" and "And I heard a voice of the Great The familiar solo of "Calvary" by Rodney sung by Mr. S. Teachers of Charlevoix County.

The annual teachers' institute for this county, will be held in Boyne City, during the week beginning July 31st, 1905.

Commissioner Osborne of Antrim County will conduct the institute assisted by Miss Blanche of the Canal, National, and Supt. Dell of Boyne.

We want to make this institute one of a practical value to teachers, and in order to do so, we need your presence and assistance.

School officers are calling for trained teachers, and we feel that you cannot attend to this work as this week of practical instruction.

A synopsis of the work to be done will be mailed to you soon.

We hope that every teacher in the county will be present and help to make the work a success.

Mrs. Wallace of Manistee Mich., is now visiting her son Frank Brown.

Dr. Becker and family have been two weeks a limited to nothing. We feel county farmers will be greatly pleased to know that a price so reasonably guaranteed for the coming selling season. The Herald News has reason to believe, however that a better price than twenty-eight cents will be reached during the approaching season and would advise the farmers of this vicinity not to be in a hurry to contract their potato crop at that figure.

Travers City Record. The food homicide ever committed in the Northern Michigan asylum occurred last night between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock and the first information that anything had taken place was discovered by night supervisor, Hiram Finton, who was making his usual rounds at 1 o'clock, when heating groans from the room occupied jointly by Mary Darkins of Chicago and Josephine Hoge of Bergen City. Proper left county, political patron of one week's attendance, discovered upon entering the room that the former had been rightfully assassinated by the latter and lay with her head shattered with blood, and apparently dying. Assistance was called but the gifted died two and a half hours later without regaining consciousness.

Petoskey Journal. On Friday of last week Mrs. Kneisgeover, an Indian lady 45 years old and living near Burt lake, came to Petoskey to see Old Bogeshia and get her part of the money due from the state. It seems it had taken her two days to walk here, stopping midway with some Indian friends. Old. It called one of his Indian employes to interpret, and when he learned the circumstances it was too much for his big heart and she returned home with her money in a comfortable rig with a careful driver. It developed from the conversation that this very old lady is the daughter of Tecumseh, after whom the town of Tecumseh is named. In his day he was a wealthy and influential Indian. The husband of her young womanhood was the son of Kishaguwee, a famous and powerful chief. He a gay a woman of such noble ancestry could not now enjoy a little bit of the income of the vast lands once owned by her father less than half a century ago.

Some time ago Robert H. Agnew, an Indian citizen of Northport, found a copy of the treaty of 1855, between the United States and the Ottawa and Chippewa Indians of Michigan. It informed him that a large sum of money was due the Indians for unfulfilled parts of the treaty. So far he has succeeded in collecting nearly $200 per capita for the sum big Indians from the government and there are claims aggregating over a hundred thousand dollars now before the court of claims at Washington. Mr. Agnew is a half-breed Ottawa Indian.

TAKING THE BLAME

LET THE DEMOCRATS BE RESPONSIBLE FOR CALAMITY.

The Republican Party is the Party of Prosperity, and if Hard Times Come of Tariff Tinkering, Democrats Should Be Allowed to Do All the Tinkering.

Such is the text and the pursuit is a remarkable speech delivered on the subject of tariff revision to the Iowa Models Capital of June 14. The speaker, Lafayette Young, is not only a clear thinker on tariff questions, but he is a pretty shrewd practician, man who knows cause and effect in politics as well as in economics. If in the political phase of the matter—which is clearly admitted in Mr. Young's consideration of the subject, if we are a Kerry calamity again as the result of tariff tinkering, let the Democratic party bear the burden of it. The Republican party has taken the power in hand as the party of protection and prosperity. It should have that place in fact if we are to indulge in distorting the time-tried working form of its tariff system. Let the threat of tariff tinkering Republicans be carried out. Let Democratic votes vote with the Democratic party for tariff destruction. Then the country will know precisely where to place the blame.

Less than nine years ago the country decided that it was time for a change in place for the party to carry into effect its tariff system. As a consequence the Republican party was restored to power. If the Democratic party should be given the power to upset business prosperity it will be because of some uncertainty in tariff matters. Republicans for as Mr. Young remarks, not since the election of Grover Cleveland in 1884 have there been more Democratic votes to cast a presumption. There should be enough of votes to give a Republican majority in the Congressional elections. The Republicans have the tariff tinkering only when

The Chicago's activity is broad and sympathetic. The Democratic party continues to be the party of adaptability. Just as the Democratic party once contributed to the parts of slavery, the Republicans have the tariff question. It cannot shake out on the tariff. It cannot shed its connection with the Civil War. Republicans were in office during the Civil War and a Democratic congress, as he said, We shall see—

The idea of a change. We shall know it for four years, as we did in 1892 and 1894. If the tariff tinkering Republican party will be asked to earn more by cause to the country's revenue. That is the hope and the sense of the Chicago's conviction. The article is not to be read entire to be appreciated. Some people after having read it will know more to be the Democratic party. But the Democrats say there is no hope in the country for tariff tinkering. Business cries out against the tinkering. The Republicans are in the position of guaranteeing the American labor and American industry. Let the Democrats take the responsibility. Let them do as they please. Let them do as they please. Let them do as they please.

Sound Party Faith.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean's editorial is a concise statement of the economic principles of Republicanism. It states them fairly and squarely. If people rely on the tariff through there are those who expected it. While there have been some changes in the tariff through there are those who expected it. While there have been some changes, the tariff will always remain. The world, long the struggle of free trade, is now developing its resources and stands with the other nations of the country for its maintenance.—Grand Rapids Herald.

"Evil Eye" Useful.

If Hepburn Smith, who usually sheds his light on the wide open Venice has discovered an improved method of stilling a flood of the protuberance of the Italian beauty who lifted all the highways and made the streets like a garden to him.

"There is nothing the Hanna's fear so much as the evil eye—that is, an eye the based shade of the normal in any respect," said Mr. Smith, "and in one by placing upon this argument, the chief I finally discovered a way of stilling speech of these parts. I have a small pocket compact, about the size of a quarter, and when their fellows become too importunate I simply do it into my pocket and take and save upon them. The effect is instantaneous. With this minister only with the quivering needle. It fixed upon them, they turn and run away as fast as their legs can carry them."—New York Times.

HOW WE TRADE WITH CANADA

Increase in Volume Enormous in Past Eight Years.

The commerce exceeding commerce with Canada that always has been interest for Canadian Americans, and particularly that they engage attention at the present time when certain interests in New England are strongly exerted in behalf of the reciprocity treaty of reciprocity.

As then is extract that the tariffs accepted the two countries operate in the Dominion of Canada trade with Canada and that England in settled most of the business that we should have in the Dominion. Dr. John Franklin Crowell, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in the current number of the Yale Review. Mr. Crowell discusses the reciprocity Mr. Crowell discusses that we have come to lose from the reciprocity of Canada. Mr. Crowell's article is in the form of a comparison of the trade of the Dominion of Canada with the United States and England. Mr. Crowell's conclusions are that the United States has lost in the Dominion of Canada, and that England has gained

LET THE DEMOCRATS BE RESPONSIBLE FOR CALAMITY.

The Republican Party is the Party of Prosperity, and If Hard Times Come of Tariff Tinkering, Democrats Should Be Allowed to Do All the Tinkering.

Such is the text and the purport of a remarkably sound address by the subject of tariff revision in the Des Moines Capital of June 14. The writer, Lafayette Young, is not quite a close thinker on tariff questions, but he is a broad, shrewd practical man who knows cause and effect in politics as well as in economics—it is the political phase of the matter a him is chiefly exhibited in St. Young's comment of the subject. If we are to have calamity arise as the result of tariff tinkering, let the Democratic party bear the burden of it. The Republican party has taken the place in history for the party of production and prosperity. It should not be the party to be long be forbidden to destroy the thing performing the fund of its own creation. Let the blame of tariff tinkering Republicans be carried out. Let them go down to the polls in the November election to elect a Democratic House of Representatives. Then the country will know precisely where to place the blame.

Long time ago years ago the country showed that it knew how to place the blame for the calamity that came from tariff tinkering. As a consequence the Republican party was restored to power. If the Democratic party should be given the power to make destroy prosperity it will be because of the wide spread effect of tariff tinkering. Let it be so. Let Young speaker and other the Democrats and raise the tariff tinkering issue in the Republican strongholds. Let the Democrats go to the country with the issue of tariff revision. Let them have been Democrats enough to make a majority in the House of Representatives in 1894 or in 1896. Mugwumps Republicans tariff reformers elected over Cleveland both times.

The Capital's advice is sound and seasonable. The Republican party should continue to be the party of prosperity. But if the Democratic party prefers to continue to be the party of adversity. The Republicans are willing to let the Democrats have a fair chance to show what they can do with the tariff. If there should be enough of Tariff tinkering Republicans to elect a Democratic congress so be it. We shall have valuable space where the election of a Senate. We don't have to for four years, as we had in the 1892 Congress, but we hope from the Republican party will be passed to allow some to be blamed of the country's rescue. That is the fair and the sense of the Capital's contention. The sale we must be read entire to be appreciated. Some people after having read it will skip the platform in the usual way, and then in a subsequent paragraph or two in the subject to say of emphasis and to make a good impression. In that one it is affirmed that no "nation had ever known such widespread prosperity as the American nation enjoyed since the inauguration of the Republican party to power by McKinley's election. Wage earners have had steady work at fair pay, farmers have had the high home markets and the farmer of Nebraska furnish maps and toll corn and wheat enough to feed making the shipowners prosperous the factories busy and all commerce and transportation thriving." Have we had revisions into doubtful channels, importations from foreign parts. The proclamation was brought down to date by a central information of the Republican demand for a "square deal" so that this may be considered as published in the purpose of the administration to abolish all rebate-rates and discriminations between shippers. Altogether the Ohio platform will be regarded by the Republicans of this country as a satisfactory declaration of party faith.—Detroit (Neb.) Tribune.

Will Always Remain.

The policy of protection is too firmly established in this country ever to be overturned. Its beneficent results are too well known to be ignored. Tariff schedules may be changed as time shows the need, but the system itself will always remain. The world, free but stronger of free trade, is now developing its resources and wants will be the greatest market of the country for its maintenance.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Sound Party Faith.

The Ohio Republican platform is a sound statement of the elementary principles of Republicanism. It is as there fairly and squarely it stands out on the tariff, though there are those who think it might than to have a clear tariff revision for Secretary Taft's benefit. However, Secretary Taft and his predecessor in office were not to be overcautious. We stand by the principles of protection. As Ambrose Lafer and American tariff laws," said the platform in one paragraph, and then in a subsequent paragraph it comes to the subject in way of emphasis and to make a good impression. In that one it is affirmed that no "nation had ever known such widespread prosperity as the American nation enjoyed since the inauguration of the Republican party to power by McKinley's election. Wage earners have had steady work at fair pay, farmers have had the high home markets and the farmer of Nebraska furnish maps and toll corn and wheat enough to feed making the shipowners prosperous the factories busy and all commerce and transportation thriving." Have we had revisions into doubtful channels, importations from foreignparts. The proclamation was brought down to date by a central information of the Republican demand for a "square deal" so that this may be considered as published in the purpose of the administration to abolish all rebate-rates and discriminations between shippers. Altogether the Ohio platform will be regarded by the Republicans of this country as a satisfactory declaration of party faith.—Fremont

BANDITS BREAK JAIL.

FIFTH ATTEMPT AT DELIVERY IS SUCCESSFUL.

Prisoners Who Escape at Columbus, Ohio, Are Desperate Characters.

Gunshot Exchanged as Bandits Make Run Two Lives Worth a Latent Note.

Five desperate prisoners escaped from jail in Columbus, Ohio. The men escaped by the simple expedient of sawing the bars of the window of Mrs. Maude Hughes on a second floor. The escape was an unusually daring one, but unexpected, for on three occasions attempts to escape had been made, twice by means of the bars from which several were sawed away, and once by a mob of men who had secured guns and had forced the lock of the door. The men escaped and their flight was made in a hack which was waiting for them. The men escaped were Lee Bell, Hopkins, Zumwalt, Jackson and Ward. Bell is the man who was in charge of the jail when it was broken into by the mob, and he is an ex-police captain from the Scioto penitentiary. Hopkins is a noted burglar, Zumwalt is a pickpocket, Jackson is a bad man and Ward is a young man who was sent to the penitentiary from Cincinnati for robbery. Ward was the man who was the first to get out of the window and he was followed by the others in the order given above. The men had been confined in the jail for a long time awaiting the action of the grand jury. Bell was the last man

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The candidacy of Representative A. E. Roberts of Lelanau for speaker of the next legislature is mentioned. Hunting has been in vogue on our sleepy work and told his friends of his ambition, resulting in return some assurances of support. It is conceded that he has already organized a strong movement.

Mr. Hill, Twin Bay, with a staring capacity of 1000 people, went up to Frankfort last week for the sessions of the Congregational association of northern Michigan. Tuesday and continues three days. The program for the first week contains the names of such men as H. G. Herring, D. D., Omaha, President; L. H. Granger, D. D., Chicago, Mary E. McDowell, Chicago, and Washington Gladden, D. D., Columbus. Papers and the topics outlined are unusually interesting and instructive.

Herman Hay Grange, No. 535, organized at the North Bay school house, district No. 1, one Thursday, with twenty-eight members. The following officers were installed by State Deputy Briggs: master, Geo. Long; overseer, D. McLellan; lecturer, Mrs. Geo. Long; steward, Wm. Hatcher; assistant steward, Otto Shelhorn; chaplain, Mrs. Wm. Smith; treasurer, Henry Knakke; C. K., John Hemphens; Gatekeeper, Francis Gunn; Ceres, Mrs. Van Ambrey; Flora, Pearl Fox; lady assistant steward, Mrs. D. McLellan.

Northport village, Leelanau county, may be distinguished and again be come an unlivided portion of the township in which it is located. When the place became a village saloons were admitted and Sunday amusements crept in. Now a petition has been signed by fifty prominent taxpayers and influencers this asking that a special election be called and the question of vacating the village charter be voted upon. The president of the village, Otto Stifel, manager of the Northport base ball club, who attended last year's game at Petoskey.

On Saturday morning fire was discovered in the back part of the ground floor of the wooden store building owned by Cutler Hipp of Traverse City, and owned by him the upper part was completely gutted. Owing to the fact that the building was located well from the street, and considerable difficulty in getting at the blaze. The second story was occupied by Chas. Hipp and family as the household goods were considered, although the family was not present at the time of the fire. The stock of insurance fully covered the entire loss to Mr. Hipp. But the bowling alley and billiard shop occupying the adjoining buildings, suffered considerable loss by water and smoke with no insurance.

Traverse City Record: The choice and prize of a conservative estimate of the amount of cherries shipped from this city during the past week, part going by express and part in special cars. The buyers at the city market have sent most all their to Chicago and other big markets but some have been shipped direct to the farmers themselves. The largest load of cherries bought in this year was purchased yesterday by Geo. W. Lardie from Guy Tompkins of the peninsula. The load contained 200 crates, or cases, in this are called on the market, and for the load Mr. Tompkins received the sum of $200 or at a trifle of a cent over $1.00 per case. The cherries were Westcoxes which has been the prevailing variety this week. The best and the choice of the fruit of the week and more damage to the cherries than was at first thought, fully one-third of the crop being destroyed.

Petoskey Record: Admiral A. L. Hamill has just been made an honorary member of the military division of the Kentucky state guard, and as there is no pay attached to the honor, a complimentary check for $6,000,000 was enclosed as a little token of esteem." On the strength of this "token" Admiral Hamill telegraphed an order to the engineer Petoskey to the effect that he (the admiral) wanted the course of the Mississippi river changed so that the water ran into Crooked river. He has already purchased the Mansion for a tender for the Topinabee, has been arranging for twenty-five white elephants he is going to have a barbecue and serve roasted white elephant, we understand, and has telegraphed the Northern Michigan Transportation Company that if they want to sell he will take their line as tender to use for giving his friends pleasure trips about the lakes. We hope Admiral Hamill will not forget to give liberal orders for job work to the newspaper office, for of course it would be out of the question for us to accept any "gifts."

Fifty years ago the shores of Grand Traverse bay were lined with bands of Ottawa Indians who were nomadic in their habits, spending their time as suited the occasion, sometimes on the shores and again moving to the northern reservation including grounds surrounded by Traverse bay. The treaty of 1836 found the Ottawas occupying the western shores of Grand Traverse bay, who subsequently have been from each camp throughout adjacent to the city and dwelling in wigwams. Not all that time school carrying point, and so in order to avoid the confusion resulting had located the little bark school house on the north of Grand where today stands the large and beautiful hotel, Cedar Lodge, stands. This good school was located by a man and packed by the merging of hundreds of immigrant feet, for perhaps this county where the white man came and took possession of the soil of the red man and for the well known reason. But the lesson the spirit of Christian people was adapted to every life, and instance known to Indian pupils that such good spirit and rules that lasted to first and last no expelled forty years ago while acting there and attending the season services of Rev. Peter Dougherty. The met was there but Mr. Miller moved it by just two, college Grace, who was in the church, leaving it perfectly. The services were turned around by common consent after the unexpected entrance of Mr. Miller, and after a short Sabbath school Mr. Miller gave an interesting talk to the Indians. He said that so different had those who were there feel that they would pass into the church, sign the and leave their seats to great sup with a lovely handshake, not waiting for the close of the service to give him their welcome. The church itself has not undergone a great change in the old school seats are still in use. It is not desirable known when the church was built though it was probably in 1840 or near that date.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hughes, Ph. D., Pastor.

Rev. Dr. Vincent, of Galesburg, Ill., preached a spiritual sermon last Sunday morning which was greatly enjoyed by a congregation that taxed its seating capacity of the church. Those annual visits of Dr. Vincent to our church are truly appreciated by both the local and visiting friends and the pastor extends them as an expression of helpful brotherly kindness.

Miss Pratt, of Chicago, kindly acted as organist on Sunday morning and her music was well rhythmical.

The two Rotts, I. Marsh D. D., of Burlington, Iowa, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning. Dr. Marsh is not a stranger to our church, having preached for us before and those who remember his strong and eloquent sermon of two years ago will eagerly wait to hear him again and those who have not had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Marsh might not be with this opportunity. Dr. and Mrs. Marsh will sing a duet.

At the evening service the pastor will gladly follow the suggestion of the "Evangelical Press" that August 5th be made a "Prayer Sunday" in view of the fact that the "Prayer Conference" comes on Saturday. The sermon on Sunday evening will then therefore deal with the "Attitude of the Historic Church and of America toward Peace and War." The subject will include other character sketches of the great Peace Commissioners at Russia and Japan." Opportunity will be given at the close of the address for consecration to God and discussion of the subject.

—On Monday evening the M. W. A. band gave an excursion to East Jordan, on the steamer Beaver, which was well patronized and much enjoyed by all.

—G. Corbett, of Cleveland, superintendent of the 5th District, Western Union Telegraph Co., accompanied by Manager J. H. Fair, of Grand Rapids, was in the city Thursday last, inspecting the local offices.

—A four year old child of Arthur Beattie's was scalded very badly about the neck and arms Thursday morning by falling into a bottle of boiling water. Dr. Hinkley was called and the child is improving.

—Henry Newberry and Hop Marshall, who for the past year have been members of the local corps of the Salvation Army, leave this week for New York to enter the Army's training school for young officers and will devote the remainder of their lives to the cause.

—Sheriff Gardner took the Haynes girl back to the Traverse City asylum yesterday. She was adjudged insane a few years ago and sent to Traverse City. On request of her parents, who live in Manistee, she was released about three weeks ago. Her mental troubles returned, and for the past few days she has been wandering aimlessly in the woods.

—Mr. H. B. Barrett, of Hunterville, who recently bought 240 acres of the Felts tract, north of this place, has purchased 80 acres adjoining from other parties. He has a force of men clearing up the land. He expects to have the entire tract under the plow this fall, and it will be seeded. Mr. Barrett proposes to establish a ranch for the breeding of fine horses, etc., stable.

—On Friday afternoon at her pleasant Main street home, Mrs. J. L. Crane gave a reception in honor of her mother and sister. One of the sister is Mrs. Holman, of Chicago, who is president of the famous "Congress of Mothers." Mrs. Holman gave a very interesting talk on "Stages of the Child's Development," which was much enjoyed by all present. There were several impromptu musical numbers and light refreshments were served.

—If the Salvation Army should close their rooms in this place and suspend its work in future in Charlevoix were anyone disappointed when on Wednesday two young men, clad in blue and red of the service left for New York to enter the Army's training school. Indeed the saving of one of these young men is proof of the effectiveness of Salvation Army work. These young men have renounced the world, and dedicated the remainder of their lives to God and humanity. May their success be unprecedented, and may the Charlevoix Corps, which continues the work so well begun, yet gather more sheaves in the Master's vine.

—After a conference between Prof. Cox, Mr. Schneider and Mr. Hutchinson last Friday at St. James, it was decided to recommend to the chief of the weather bureau the following plan for the cable service. The commercial telephone office to be in the postoffice, with Jos. McGuan as operator. Hydrographer Cox will be appointed observation and observer for the State climate and crop branch of the service, and Mr. Schneider represents as Grand Rapids. A storm warning tower to be set up at Charlevoix and a tower to be 35 feet high with wind 35 feet above that. On Saturday Mr. Schneider installed an anemometer, thermometer and rain gauge at Charlevoix. The cable will be landed inside the harbor along the south channel back.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. James Hughes, Ph. D., Pastor.

The church was full Sunday morning and the Rev. Robt. I. Marsh D. D. occupied the pulpit preaching a strong sermon and full of inspiration. Dr. Marsh can so easily gain a large congregation wherever he may be able to visit as again. The Doctor, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh was greatly enjoyed.

The Pastor's subject in the evening was "The Attitude of America and the Church toward Peace and War."

Next Sunday's subjects will be as follows. In the morning "The Church and the Age" and in the evening "The Building of Character," which is the Christian Endeavor topic. The Endeavor meeting will not be held at 6:30 but in the regular hour of evening service, when the pastor will speak on the young people's subject. Christian Endeavor features will be introduced into the service which will make unusually interesting and helpful and the pastor hopes to see all the endeavorers present.

Baptist Church.

Services Sunday morning and evening as usual. In the evening the pastor will give the third in the series of talks to young men, from the text of Josiah—"A young man's Temptations." Sunday School 12:00 a. m. Everybody cordially invited.

Methodist Church.

Rev. J. Vickers will preach at both services. At 10:30, subject: "The First City and the Last." A special welcome to those who attend services. At 7:30 o'clock—Lesson from the Life of Isaiah. Parents and young people are specially invited. At 6:30 p. m. Epworth League Topic: "The Building of Character. Leader the pastor.

The new bathing to be named Michigan is the most elegant bathing marine street. It will surpass any other ship in the American navy and no other nation will be able to equal it. The plans will provide for a complete battery of 12 inch and 12-inch guns. No battleship heretofore has been armed with more than four guns of the big calibre. The Michigan will carry at least eight of the big guns. While not equaling in tonnage the new British battleships of the King Edward and Africa class, the battery power of the Michigan will be enough greater to make her stronger than the recent addition to the British navy.

The secretary of the democratic state central committee is quite perturbed that W. N. Ferris, democratic candidate of last year, would be the most desirable democratic candidate for governor next year. That may be true, but the persistent campaign made in behalf of W. N. Ferris last year causes to repeated in Michigan next year. It cannot be stated again that Fred S. Warner is contented to a few gubernatorial any longer as politicians, and he would have the will of his men and would be subject to national direction. Many republicans were persuaded to vote against Mr. Warner last November because of the weak and incompetent individuals the republican committee was forced to put up against him. Mr. Warner is a man of business, with a will of his own, and individual convictions with which to back it. There are probably one hundred people in the entire state who believe exactly the statements made throughout the campaign of last year in opposition to Mr. Warner. Mr. Ferris will have to get votes in Michigan next year against Governor Warner because of his personality and the merits of the party he will represent, and not as he got many of them last November.

SUICIDE.

A Manistee Passenger Throws Herself Overboard.

The steamer Manistee in mid lake, Tuesday morning last was the scene of a most determined death by suicide.

Miss Elizabeth Burgess, of Manistee, 19, accompanied by her father, was a passenger on the Manistee, bound for Charlevoix. It is generally conceded that the last leaves of summer were remarkable and very being brought home by business in this town that the closing would finally fall.

The steamer arrived in their stateroom in the early evening. Herbarth taking the upper berth and her sister the lower. The latter had been locked and the key removed.

In the morning the sister awoke to find the upper berth vacant, and on her door found a note addressed to her sister, in a manner in Elizabeth announced her intention to drown herself. Miss Burgess had leaved through the vessel yesterday into the water nearly prostrated with grief. Was taken to the home of Capt. Wolters. She endeavored to her home by the next boat.

The vessel was the daughter of a family prominent in Manistee. She had recently lost in a sanatorium and had required constant watching.

Bert Bruce Sues.

Bert Bruce has sued Jos. Bruce for $1,000 for alleged slander. The suit is taken to the home of Capt. Wolters. She endeavored to her home by the next boat.

THE GERMAN TARIFF.

A Commercial War with United States Not Impossible.

Actions from Washington indicate that the president is prepared to give renewed evidence of his robust Americanism by advocating retaliatory legislation against any country which discriminates against our products. Germany has given official notice of intention to do so, that form like a commercial war. The legislation which it is assumed the president will recommend, is precisely that which the Chronicle has suggested as inevitable should Germany proceed to discriminate against us. The tingling tariff will remain as it is, with an addition of 50 per cent, made of best, upon goods from countries which discriminate against American products. Germany will not be named in the act, nor any other country. The law will simply provide that the taking effect in any country, of a tariff act discriminating against us will put in force, as of the same date against that country, the extra duties of our tariff.

There is no doubt that impartial trade is best for all countries. So called "protective" tariffs are in few directions necessary of any one country, or small. We have advocated them a little, to our shame and sorrow, but the persistent rejection by the senate of all recent treaties of that kind, and the acceptance of the principle that that body receive the sent of the house of representatives before honoring treaties, virtually reduces us to one treaty-making power of importance. We have in force, a low reciprocity treaty, negotiated by the president alone, under Section 3 of the Dingley act. They are all, we think, for five year periods, which will then expire, and will presumably not be renewed. There will then remain only the Cuban treaty, which comes in force for five years, after which it may be denounced to be put out of with one year's notice. It is that one treaty, directly discriminating against German sugar, which gives Germany its moral advantage in the approaching controversy. We can advise retaliation, when passing our retaliatory act only by a proclamation, sent to Germany and the world with a promise to get the solicitors of our stock-log amount on our tariffs into the siding. And then, let us hope we shall be permanently restored to the "Land of Honest Trade—Sans Protection—Germany."

What Tariff Reform Would Do.

Already the Democratic free Trade and the Republican tariff reformers, so called, are about to advance "action of the tariff toward." Both seems to be the front of line. The expenses of the government are being illegally increasing, and the revenue derived from the tariff is barely sufficient to pay these expenses. If the tariff is reduced, as per the proposition of the so called reformers, it will have to be raised on other articles. It may be necessary to tax tea, coffee and such things as you use on the free list not are shed by the plain people of the country. If the tariff is lowered on steel rails, steel ships and such other articles as the farmers of the country do not buy, only indirectly through the consumer, it will have to be raised on things the farmers and artisans do use so far as these classes are concerned the reformers (?) will be revising the tariff upward.—Saginaw (Mich.) Gazette.

Inconceivable.

The matter is one of such vital importance that it will certainly receive the careful attention of the next Congress, and it is not to be doubted that the equal commercial war in footing on to purchase its supplies of American manufacturers and dealers so far as this can be done under a Dingley system of competition. It is inconceivable that a different policy will be approved by a congress favorable to the protection of American industries and labor.—Omaha Bee.

There is a Basis.

"There is no doubt that there is a basis for reciprocity in harmony with protection."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

"There is such a basis and it was clearly defined and firmly laid in the Republican national platform of 1904, favoring reciprocity wherever the United States can get equivalents for concessions. Again, in the President's Kansas speech he said: 'We do not need reciprocity that would not benefit domestic production;' and in the same year he declared that he was opposed to any form of reciprocity that "would take from a single American workman his job." Again, in the national platform of 1904, adopted by the Chicago convention, the Republicans established a basis for reciprocity in harmony with protection in declaring that it must be reciprocity that "will not injure any American industry." The well-established basis of Republican and protectionist reciprocity requires that: It shall embrace none but non-competitive products; it must give Americans the benefit of lower prices; it must be reciprocal in principle and in operation free trade as far as it goes. Once that kind of reciprocity shall have been adopted as a national policy it will inevitably lead to all around free trade."

Now Let Us All Be Happy.

It is finally announced that there will be no extra session of congress and probably no tariff tinkering at the regular session.

It is found that Germany's new tariff affects only a small portion of our exports to her, and the rates that affect even this portion may yet be modified.

There will be no cause for retaliation, and the Tribune is willing to preserve the status quo.

The war between Japan and Russia seems likely to soon terminate.

The debtor is growing less daily.

Surplus for the Panama canal will be bought at home. The money laborers employed are to have an eight-hour day and millions more pay.

The crops are in good average condition.

Both the textile and railroad stock earnings are increasing.

WHAT THEY DON'T TELL.

That the American Farmers' Best Market Is Among His Nearby Neighbors.

The Treasury Bureau of the National Reciprocity League shows signs of its charming activity in a comfortable mission of enlightenment throughout the country we find an unusual number assuming both the warning that Germany is about to impose grounds in crossed tariff duties upon the agricultural products of the United States. Invariably these leaflets show extremely practical with this remark:

"It is hoped that Germany would make concessions to the United States in return for similar concessions to Germany. Impossible!

But it is not clear that the similar concessions which the United States would be called upon to make would take the shape of reducing tariff duties upon an immense list of German manufactures and that as a result of that proposed proposition a vastly increased quantity of competitive goods from Germany would force their way into the American market, thus depriving an appreciable quantity of American goods produced by American wage incomparably better condition than those of the same. They are forced to conclude that Germany forced that we would obtain by a tariff cutter with Germany.

What does it cost for all the American farmers in that line both market is not in Germany but in the United States and that the result to pay more to nothing to a vital issue which does not concern American of wool and wages. Can the hands of farmers. They do not tell the farmer that the best thing that can happen to him is that "reciprocity" with Germany be rendered impossible and that Germany be forced to pay the highest price for the best wheat and wool and wages that the American farmer can produce and sell at home.

Cannibalism Coals?

The Democratic and Republican leaders are now in a "reciprocity" war. It is a question as to which Democrats propose to be cannibals.

It is wished to consult the state of a Democrat, Republican, Democrat, which, I do not answer to which is to be eaten by the other.

"Brown—Say, Smith, what are you like now?"

"Smith—Why, I am a rich person."

"No, sir," said the individual. "Give me your opinion." said Mr. Brown-ton.

Public is Amused.

The public is amused by the knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of Idaho, Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked, I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, that nothing doctor's drugs, that I could get relief. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at F. E. Hayes & Co. drug store; price 50c.

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

CHAPTER V.

A few days after the dinner at Lindhurst, Mrs. Fleming-Jones's guests had left, and she was alone for a quiet talk with her husband, when a letter was delivered to him, which he read with a frowning face, and then handed it to his wife, who read it with a smile on her lips and a light in her eyes.

"Well, Mr. Fleming-Jones, what do you think of it?" she said, as he took it back and put it in his pocket.

"I think it is very foolish of Mr. Kent to write such a letter to you, and very foolish of you to show it to me," he said, with a frown on his face.

"Why, I thought you would like to know that Mr. Kent was coming to Lindhurst," she said, with a little pout of her lips.

"I do not care a straw for Mr. Kent's movements, and I wish you would not show me his letters

Local News.

—"Uncle Josh Spruneby" is in town to-day.

—In this issue appears the new ad. of J. L. Crane, Head'n.

—Capt. H. D. Campbell is entertaining his sister, Mrs. W. S. Eby, of Syracuse, N. Y.

—Lawrence Ackett, who is employed in a Grand Rapids drug store, is home on a visit.

—Capt. H. D. Hose is Chicago, was here Tuesday, as the guest of M. D. Woodford, at the Inglesmoor.

—Dr. Geo Wallace Monroe, of Chicago, accompanied by his wife, is the guest of his uncle, L. S. Stacks.

—H. H. Chamberlain, of Detroit, and F. J. Meech, left Monday for Two Heart river upper peninsula, after trout.

—Inside of 30 days the Beaver island people will be connected with the rest of the world, wide world by electricity.

—Last week J. J. Fagan sold his patent cigar Vending Machine rights to New York parties for a good cash consideration and royalty.

—W. J. Turner and wife, of Milwaukee, were here last week in Mr. Turners fine yacht Nakoma, and visited Major and Mrs. L. H. Green.

—The fine steam yacht Idaloha, owned by Wicks Bros., of Saginaw, was in port Sunday and Monday night. The Capitola is one of the finest yachts on the lakes.

—B. C. Lane the tubular well contractor, is boring the Central Co. well, struck water at 420 feet. Water comes to within twenty feet of the surface and can be turned about 75 per cent efficient.

—The Charlevoix life saving station has a valuable crew, and a wise one. He sits on a place which lies even with the water under the revetment, and when submisses come near enough to the surface, he gets "em.

—Eleven dates and a party of ladies and gentlemen from the Belvedere went into Lake Michigan in a row-boat Sunday and the wind increasing somewhat, the boat was beached in the outer bay to the park. Eaglston went down with a rig and took the party home and all had to the Belvedere by land.

—Capt. Quinan, inspector of the U. S. life saving service was here last week and made his last inspection before proceeding East for sea duty. While here Capt. Quinan stated that the Charlevoix station was the finest kept and that the crew was the best drilled and up-to-date of any on the lakes. The compliment was deserved.

—Paul Grand Master and present Grand Lecturer Frank Cudger, of the Grand Lodge of Michigan, F. & A. M., of Detroit, was the guest of Paul Grand Master Turrell over Sunday. Monday Mr. Lodge and Mr. Turrell went to Beaver island. Attys. McGregor, of Detroit, Grand Tiler of the Michigan Grand Lodge, also visited Mr. Turrell two days last week.

—A big company in an enjoyable comedy-drama, an operatic selection of two pieces, a brass band in a green and yellow parade all at 25, 35, 50 and 75 cent prices makes a magnet that will no doubt pack the Opera house to the floors on Thursday Aug 17th, night. "Uncle Josh Spruneby" makes his bow on that occasion and the jolly old New Englander will afford an evening of fun and amusement. The play is on the order of "Shore Acres" and "Old Homestead" with comy specialties and the sensational saw mill scene is an exciting climax. "Uncle Josh" was always a welcome favorite at Bijou prices and will be glad to see us at the remarkably low ones at which he appears this season.

—Patent claim notices, of changes entitled last week, helped a week or two under the parcelpost road, and incidentally to one some of his off claims.

—A very pretty wedding took place on Monday at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Speaggle, of Bay shore, when their eldest daughter Matilda was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Mosteer, of Birmingham, Alabama. The bride was dressed in cream silk and carried white carnations. She was attended by her sister Eugenia, who wore gray silk and carried pink carnations. Mr. George Pager of Petoskey acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Mosteer left Petoskey on the 6:30 train for Chicago and St. Louis, where they will spend a few days after which they will go to Birmingham, Ala., where they will make their home. Their many friends unite in best wishes for their future.

—Detroit News: The U. S. revenue cutter Mackinaw has started a crusade against gasoline launches which are so abundant in Detroit waters. Without lights, in violation of United States government rules, a cutter full of "yachtsmen" passed among Belle Isle Wednesday night and scared four rowboats and two canoes. Four of the craft belonged to the Belle Isle Boathouse, having been rented. Occupants of all the boats pleaded ignorance of the law. Lieut. Francis H. Wilby of the U. S. Inspectors corps was in charge of the cutter. He said that he did not know the provisions of the law. The "yachtsmen" were under command of Lieut. Addison, who says that his cutter will make nightly trips in quest of small boats which carry no lights on the river.

PROFESSOR L. H. BAILEY.

Director of College of Agriculture, Cornell University.

The accompanying portrait of Professor L. H. Bailey, director of the College of Agriculture, Cornell university, will be unlikely to be recognized by all who are acquainted with him. It is reproduced from the Cornell University bulletin. Professor Bailey was born in 1858 on a farm near South Haven, Mich. He was educated at the common schools and at the Michigan Agricultural college, such being the profession of teaching. He was admitted in 1882 and has two children. While he has held no office save in the profession, he was of the Tompkins county Patrons, he is most decidedly interested in the order. He is a thorough believer in the grange as our means toward the organization and unifying of the great agricultural interests. In his position as director of the college of Agriculture he will find ample scope for all his versatile powers. He is an interesting speaker and always listened to with pleasure at the meetings of the state grange and other agricultural gatherings.

The Farm Help Question.

At the last meeting of the New York state grange a resolution in reference to the employment of immigrant labor on the farms of this state was sifted upon favorably. The state agricultural society also is now moving in the matter and Commissioner Webster recently issued a circular to the granges of the state from which the following extract is taken:

"If you need farm help within the range of your grange the commissioner of agriculture would be pleased to have from you to that effect and to receive information from you as to the number desired. We would also be pleased to know what, if any, action your grange may take relative to assisting any immigrants that may be turned in your direction in getting work and caring for them or to seeing that they are suitably cared for until such time as they can procure work. With the cooperation of the granges of the state of New York the commissioner of agriculture feels that he may be enabled under this status to do much toward helping to solve the farm labor problem, which is now such a handicap to the agriculture.

The Summer Boarder.

Taking thirty New Hampshire towns as the basis of his figuring, ex-Governor Hitchcock, lecturer of the national grange, gives an idea of what the summer boarder has done for that state. He has increased in those thirty towns from $5,000 in 1890 to 105,000 in 1901. Last year the summer boarder spent $177,000, against $1,478,000 in 1890. For his accommodation there have been established in the fourteen years 104 summer hotels and seventy-two boarding houses. This has the summer visitor has brought during this period 1,242 summer homes at a cost of $3,005,000 and laid out $3,000,000 for improvements. These figures are all of the 1900 work and they are surprising. Only four more go to the country, and that is sure to treat them well the exhibit demonstrates.

To Promote Agriculture.

Pennsylvania state grange is represented in the allied organizations of the state, whose purpose it is to cooperate in promoting agricultural education and research in the state, by five members appointed by the state master, to wit: H. J. Tuttle, Tioga county; Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Clark, Westmoreland county, and Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Boyle, Erie county.

Grange Fire Insurance.

The Salisbury and Amesbury (Mass.) Mutual company report $2,152,000 in insurance, with a balance of about $1000 in the treasury and no assessment bills. The losses the past year amounted to $2,000.

Grange Topics, September-December, 1903.

September—What improvements can be made to the present method of marketing the products of the farm?

October—What action can be taken to individuals of their homes for promoting their knowledge of civic matters and for their general mental development?

November—What can be done by farmers of this locality to become an element of their farms in the social life of the community?

December—What can be done to increase the attractive of the farm home to make it the brightest and happiest spot on earth?

SUPPLEMENTARY TOPICS.

September—What practical work should be undertaken by the state grange for the general development of Pomona?

October—What are the relations of Patrons of Husbandry to the subordinate grange and their duty in attending to assemblies with the grange?

November—What is the best method of dealing in matters in which a member feels it his duty to take a course adverse to the interests of the Patrons of Husbandry?

December—To what extent should the national grange give the interests of agriculture before the national congress?

Hawkins grange, Maine, took in a class of fifty recently at one meeting.

INCREASING MEMBERSHIP.

How the State Grange May Help subordinate Granges.

Discussion, the topic, what Policy should be adopted by the state grange for increasing membership in the State? The president recommended that it should adopt a vigorous policy of increasing membership, and said the subordinate granges do the number one of the means of doing that by imparting a feel of personal claimed to the grange which is particularly of subordinate granges and also in new fields and such by such persons interested in agriculture, "organs of the state grange.—In and other literature bearing upon the work of the grange. The officers of the subordinate grange having permission should be interested in the grange on the part of the state grange and at other times to the attention of them, people in attendance where we advise extra papers at the state grange should be low to this work with a personal claim to the grange. Papers in the state grange. Papers in the direction should be continued, and other matter should be increased, and a large increase in speakers will follow. It is the work of subordinate granges to do the introduction of more people. However, participation in conferences, and, yes, it will not increase in membership without national, state and subordinate.

Another means for increasing membership on the part of the state grange is the award of prizes for a specified net increase in any subordinate grange during the year. It may be argued that such struggle to effect will cause the advancement of unworthy persons into the order. Experience has been practical. Should any such person be admitted through this practice, the spiritual influence of the grange would soon have a check upon that person, or the person so admitted would find the work and the atmosphere of the grange uncongenial enough him to leave it voluntarily. There has been no case of the admission of unworthy persons under this practice. It has been quite universally approved, for they do not need to admit only worthy people.

We have seen a great increasing membership on the part of the state grange, and one most generally approved plan of some of those we have mentioned, in the papers discussed in the papers were adopted. If it be at public meetings in members individually in the state grange, it is not specially advisable for the state grange to call a meeting for this purpose or for the bulk of local interest under such arrangements, but a local grange or a number of subordinate where no local organization exists should call the attention and issue the call for the meeting. Such meetings in order to secure the best results should be with an active person be appointed under refer to existing granges or for the purpose of form a grange. The increase of membership is the result of effort along business lines and a very different matter from procuring the attendance of a local work among those already members.

AGRICULTURE IN SCHOOLS.

Practical Educational Methods Find Favor Generally.

Among the powers conferred by recent instructions to the instructors of agriculture in the public schools it was considered that it would be well to have the work introduced in the high school of the locality. Mr. Superintendent Maxwell of that school reported in favor of the introduction of agriculture in the high school. "It affords me much pleasure to state that the class organized in scientific agriculture at the beginning of the second year of the high school is doing excellent work. Nearly all the pupils concerned, or at all interested, know and the work is very well being carried on are full equal to our expectations. The work is in progress to an extent that we have not in a doubtful—also in every respect."

National Lecturer Ketchum has this to say on the same subject: "Practically no outcome on the part of the grange in recent years in the interest of public education has so good a foundation as the work now showing in of such grand importance to the government, now made permanent, by the organization for the introduction of agricultural studies in the public schools. This is really looking ahead, progress, and the grange is in the front in promoting it. Much has been said and written upon it by grange workers, and they have reason to feel great joy encouraged at the progress already made. It is a question in the future of practical educational methods, as well as in the interest of strengthening the ties to land life."

"Forward" the Watchword.

A western city has chosen the word "forward" for its motto. Every organization needs to have the same watchword, remarks the Grange Bulletin. The organization that is content to be the same thing year after year is not very ambitious. Of course the "good old ways" were good or's are good, but the truth of the matter is that they differ exactly fit the new occasions. We need to adapt them to new conditions, and to make them fit our present times and needs. It is a question in the future if we are to be independent and responsible in our time to our fathers and grandfathers were in the good old times which sometimes seem to us to have been a golden age. But the real golden age is somewhere for those who are yonder to live in such an age.

Doubt to Be a Grange.

The declaration of purposes of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry contains the following, expressing our purpose of the grange organization. "To develop a better and higher manhood and womanhood among ourselves; Freedom from ever and to strive to the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, assembled at Buffalo, N. Y., "We make better citizens and lift up the standard of American manhood and womanhood. Is to do the greatest service to the country." The two thousand are one. The question is not right. He ought to be a grange.

WASHINGTON STATE GRANGE

C. H. Kreiter of Spokane Elected Master.

The state grange of Washington and Oregon held its annual session at Spokane last week. Several paper on the Washington state grange, covering the Washington state grange, covered a satisfactory growth in both branch.

In the second address of the Master of Wong emphasized the importance of organization for farmers and their interests which are of less consequence to the topics of the session. Organization is the foundation of such, such is the general feeling in Europe and South America from the time of Rome. He recommended that a committee be made to present the fair of the state, and many of its suggestions were crystallized into resolutions later in the session. Another was a resolution concerning that school text books contained in public school libraries, which was referred to farm life and advocating a state text book commission in the selection of text books, calling the attention of the state legislature to the same. Another was a resolution concerning the forestry department work, which the forestry department work, which the United States Forestry Bureau is devoted to the conservation of the forests, and the conservation of the forests, and the conservation of the forests, and

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

CHAPTER VI.

And Joan, where were you during the prayer for the poor souls? Why quite out of sight behind the pillar, with your head resting against the wall, and your face that the whole London world was to see, crying as hard as ever you could for all the whole London world was worth. Poor Joan! Poor Joan! Crying and praying a second time for Jack Ashton!

Well, I suppose it was the prayer that made us all so sad. Anyhow, we were very quiet that night, and we, the women folk, were crying more than we had done since we first heard of our loss. Young men are fickle creatures, and we all, the women folk, had been talking of Jack Ashton's coming home with his young wife, and we had been wondering how we should like her, and we had been wondering how we should like Joan's coming home to live with us, and we had been wondering how we should like Jack himself, and we had been wondering and wondering about everything that was connected with him, and we had been crying about him, and we had been crying for him, and we had been crying for him in the aisle.

Joan was quite right, we had been crying on the platform ever since we had heard the news, and we had been crying from the moment we had seen the vicar's face as he came down the aisle with the lessons, and we had been crying when we had heard the news, and we had been crying when we had seen the vicar's face

IN A NAVAL BATTLE

HOW RUSSIAN WARSHIP FARED AT PORT ARTHUR.

Deadly Accuracy of Japanese Gunners Left Vessel a Wreck in Few Minutes—Many See Their Comrades Slaughtered on All Sides.

Here is a fragment of a description of the sea battle fought before Port Arthur, when the Russian squadron attempted to break out from the beleaguered port and escape into the open. In a thousand the bridge resounded with the student voice of the admiral. The helmsmen swinging, before the signal flag had left the pagoda staff the squadron had passed the boom and was in the open sea. Imperative. It had scarcely beaten the rattle of the Nisshin's guns, when across the tranquil bay, she was engaging the more enterprising of Togo's scouts. Back the little boats dashed to shelter under the guns of the battleship squadron. The Russian would fight—the battle flags were hoist. The great ship quivered and then quivered again. It was only the bulkheads giving but their creaking cannot be heard in the roar of the battle. The Japanese had concentrated and were now astern. Big in on the starboard beam the Russian admiral—Togo and his course. Great protectives were terminating overhead and spouting geysers of salt water all around them. But fire the commander the mind could answer shot for shot. The admiral clinched the handrail. His face was stern now, but the fighting light was in his eyes. Mark the first signal. "Close up—follow me!"

As the same moment there was a deafening crash and the vessel swung as that every ship in the sinking squadron was thrown against the walls. "What was that—mine?" The dread of mine had terrified the Russian fleet. Yet it, every Russian sailor, and as the Russian squadron down the battle nightmare of the Pennsylvania leaped before this mortal vision. A dark officer came hurrying forward. He reported that a large shell had hit the after thirty-inch gun turret, planted and in burning wreckage the top above. "Awful! their fellows!" Flash came down with the splinters on the deck like confetti at a carnival.

"Then the vessel staggered from two terrific blows forward. The flag lieutenant stumbled ahead, drawing his hands mechanically to his ears while the hot fragments of iron and splinters whistled past. Hitting stanchion outside blinded him, while the force of the concussion fractured both spaces in ventilator. The first sight that he saw was the mangled frame of his comrade. The roof of the pier wrecked head was gone, a half-formed cigarette was still between the clenched teeth, the three six glance upward—the forward smokestack was rent from top to bottom and the flame and smoke were belching out of the base. The quartermaster gave to the forward battery solemnly fired and the range finder took off the discharge towards the south to his answer. He made for the bridge. Great Heavens! The conning tower and forward bridge were but torn, smoking and twisted wreck.

A man jumped to the bridge. His face was black as all powder, his uniform and beard torn and disordered to a tipsy rakish. His left arm, burned at the sleeve, was dangling by a sinew. All his senses, stunned, with the figure-quarter, as it reeled and sank fainting to the deck.

THEY HAD THEIR DAY.

Enemies of Protection Not So Jubilant as They Were.

The extent to which things are by character has been illustrated by the turn in the tariff discussion at the national capital during the past week. A week ago the opponents of protection there and elsewhere were jubilant over the action for the purchase of supplies for the Panama canal to either the foreign or domestic markets, as might be most advantageous for the government, and now those same opponents are distressed at the prospect of the tariff troubles with Germany resulting in an overwhelming furnace of duty upon articles imported into the United States from Germany. The opponents of protection had their day, and it is short one. The admission in the Russian statement that it was not expecting to buy two foreign ships outright, but that it would only charter them for present necessity, and so far, steel rails and other commodities needed on the instance it was argued that the domestic producers might have to pay lower to hold the market against foreign competition, but that they would undoubtedly hold to their the theory that the Roosevelt administration was about to play into the hands of foreign manufacturers with respect to the canal trade.

But the reputation by the administration of the anti-protection theory has not merely been negative in the instances case: it has been affirmative to the case of the Russian negotiation over tariff and reciprocity. The spokesman on the latter subject has been Secretary Root, and his caption was in a speech at Cleveland, wherein he defined the contrast upon to the United States in its dealings with Germany and other powers, referring the matter in terms to the determination of Congress, but stating the attitude of the administration that the only practicable course for this country to Germany were to discriminate against American goods, is to discriminate in turn against German goods. The attitude of the Secretary of the Treasury is merely the public manifestation of a judgment which is shown through all the available channels of information to be the judgment of the whole administration, to the point indicated there is effective support for American interests in foreign markets, but there is no suggestion of the abandonment of American interests in the domestic market.—The Boston Capital.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

From all this part of Northern Michigan come reports of good crops of all kinds. Never in the history of this country were better, and small grains especially, as last year had one proper and Dakota was still here and the prospect against such.

Elk Rapids Progress: The annual sail in honor of Captain Clark, appeared a little more than the barrels is being turned out daily. All the machines with one exception are working a capacity of more than ten daily, and that one will be overhauled by Saturday when it will be in harmony with the rest of the mill.

That central Lake mode no mistake in working their canning factory by lessening more and best every year. Approved the action in the midst of the busy canning season, and are receiving about one thousand cases daily. This calls for some hundreds of hands, girls and women, to help fill the boxes for the cans and all help is hard to get. The best one of our sister village.

Knights and Ladies of the Maccabees of northern Michigan will gather at Petoskey September 7 and 8, to the number of 1,000. Great camp and great officers will be present and derive addresses. Major G. L. Lapeer will preside at the banquet to be given to the visiting hosts. Ex-mayor H. M. Winston is president of the association and Professor M. C. Foster secretary.

Bellaire Independent: The contract has been signed for the dredging of the river from the River street bridge extending to the main street the channel dredged by the village from Grass lake to town. The contract calls for a channel 50 feet wide at the bottom and six feet deep at low water, and the only time available is that it be completed this year. The dredging will be done by the I. G. Smith Dredging Co. who excavated the channel up to River street for the village. Henry Richardt is having the work done for the lowering of the sewer that will result at the foot of the wheel pit to be built just east of the bridge street bridge. At the point mentioned Mr. Richardt will build the power house for the transmitting to Charlevoix and other towns of electricity for power and lighting, as fold at length some time since when the contract with Charlevoix was signed. The contract will come up over the bridge on bridge street so the bridge abutments will allow with out being undermined. It might be mentioned incidentally that the chain bet will allow vessels from the inland below coming clear up to Bellaire's boom stand.

Among the red brethren taking the fight for Christianity and imparting their knowledge to their more humble brethren is the big camp meeting at Northport on the five regular ordain of Methodist ministers of Michigan, plenty among them being the Rev. Wm. Fleming grandson of Chief Ignatius Pelon-o-gay of the Grand Traverse band of Ottawa. Chief Pelon-o-gay was one of the original signers of the treaty of Washington and realized where the beautiful present town now stands. The grandson William received a diploma from Carlisle school and was ordained by Bishop Henry Warren five years ago. He is township treasurer of Emmet county and resides in a colonial mansion two miles from the city. He stands the embodiment of true culture. The Rev. John S. Jewaquaga stik of Kewadin is also a pupil of the Carlisle school and has a mission charge. Better known among the Chippewas is the Rev. Wm. Ellis Absonewas, formerly of Sarnia, ont., a Canadian by birth and education and a graduate of Victoria college and an ordained minister during from 1880. For many years he devoted himself to evangelical work and is a fluent speaker, both in his native tongue and English. In his delivery he exhorts in both languages, speaking to the humble red man in his own language, then breaking into the English tongue with such power and force of both that no pause or break is perceptible. The Rev. John Jacobs, teacher, later pastor and so on his own way ordained by Bishop Slade at Bay View at one of the great Methodist gatherings.

Bellaire Independent: The contract has been signed for the dredging of the river from the River street bridge extending to the main street the channel dredged by the village from Grass lake to town. The contract calls for a channel 50 feet wide at the bottom and six feet deep at low water, and the only time available is that it be completed this year. The dredging will be done by the I. G. Smith Dredging Co. who excavated the channel up to River street for the village. Henry Richardt is having the work done for the lowering of the sewer that will result at the foot of the wheel pit to be built just east of the bridge street bridge. At the point mentioned Mr. Richardt will build the power house for the transmitting to Charlevoix and other towns of electricity for power and lighting, as fold at length some time since when the contract with Charlevoix was signed. The contract will come up over the bridge on bridge street so the bridge abutments will allow without being undermined. It might be mentioned incidentally that the chain bet will allow vessels from the inland below coming clear up to Bellaire's boom stand.

Among the red brethren taking the fight for Christianity and imparting their knowledge to their more humble brethren is the big camp meeting at Northport on the five regular ordain of Methodist ministers of Michigan, plenty among them being the Rev. Wm. Fleming grandson of Chief Ignatius Pelon-o-gay of the Grand Traverse band of Ottawa. Chief Pelon-o-gay was one of the original signers of the treaty of Washington and realized where the beautiful present town now stands. The grandson William received a diploma from Carlisle school and was ordained by Bishop Henry Warren five years ago. He is township treasurer of Emmet county and resides in a colonial mansion two miles from the city. He stands the embodiment of true culture. The Rev. John S. Jewaquaga stik of Kewadin is also a pupil of the Carlisle school and has a mission charge. Better known among the Chippewas is the Rev. Wm. Ellis Absonewas, formerly of Sarnia, ont., a Canadian by birth and education and a graduate of Victoria college and an ordained minister during from 1880. For many years he devoted himself to evangelical work and is a fluent speaker, both in his native tongue and English. In his delivery he exhorts in both languages, speaking to the humble red man in his own language, then breaking into the English tongue with such power and force of both that no pause or break is perceptible. The Rev. John Jacobs, teacher, later pastor and so on his own way ordained by Bishop Slade at Bay View at one of the great Methodist gatherings.

—Charlevoix among Northern Michigan resorts has its share of distinguished summer population, and among them there is none more distinguished or more approachable than "Spring Joe" Filer, ex governor of Illinois. Yesterday the governor sat on a bench in front of a city store, arguing with his two grandchildren about buying a bag of peanuts, and, as the part of the governor, the argument was as dignified and sedate as if he were president of the Interstate Commerce Commission, of which he is a member. —A fact that was not known by the congregation at the Congregational church last Sunday morning, on the occasion of the sermon of Rev. Dr. Rhodes of St. Louis, was the presence in the congregation of Dr. Hadley, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church of Washington—one of the most prominent churches in the capital city, which has prominent among its members, Andrew Jackson, James Buchanan, Jas. G. Blaine, and other distinguished statesmen.

—"The Royal Slave" is the greatest and best high class presentation play that has been seen in this country in the last three decades. It is the most original play on the board today, original in location, in plot and story, in character, in costumes, in scenic effects, in mechanical surprises, in dramatic situations, in pictures and climaxes. It is the only strongly sensational play that does not descend to "blood and thunder" methods, but has all the literary merit and charm of the best romantic plays, coupled with the thrilling dramatic power of a great melodrama, and the brilliancy and sparkle of the brightest comedies, therefore it pleases the most cultured and intelligent as the same time that it thrills a gallery to the highest point of enthusiasm. It is never tiresome and never allows the interest to once flag, but holds an audience entranced to the last. At Lewis opera house Friday evening of this week.

—Dr. Cameron's new ad in this issue, shows considerable consideration to Charlevoix this summer, President Zimmerman, General Manager Harding, and others have been here the past month off and on.

—A very high class musicale followed by a fancy dress ball occurred at the Beach Hotel, Saturday night that, that was a notable social event. The soloists were Chas. S. Burdick of Peoria, Mrs. Strauss, of Chicago, Mrs. Dudley, of Chicago and Miss Wahl, of Cincinnati. Mrs Wahl took the first honors for the night, and Mr. Burdick, the gentlemen's prize. These musical circles are fascinating a fortnight at the Beach.

—There is a movement on foot to change the name of Main street in front of "Park Avenue." Main street is a misnomer. When the village was platted about forty years ago, it was of some importance, on paper, it looked as if that might be the principal business street. Instead of that it has become a strictly residence street, and the dwellers therein want the name changed and will have it changed.

Detroit Journal: Not alone will war be waged on small boats which do not carry lights at night, but the government has now issued instructions to the collector of customs to prosecute all persons shooting canoe boats or launches on the river without whistles. Motor boats and other small boats propelled by steam or other mechanical power are governed by the same laws that apply to large steamers. Unless owners of such boats equip them with whistles the government will seize the craft.

—The Charlevoix Royal Arch Masons had a banquet at the Park House last Monday night that was both a gastronomic and social success. We can the risk of being disciplined for divulging Masonic secrets when we mention the fact that the principal interest hovered around the circumstance of Hon. F. W. Mayne, Circuit Judge, taking the Royal Arch degree that night. For the benefit of both Judge Mayne and the public we will state that he was in Lodge at the usual hour promptly at nine o'clock last morning.

—"A Royal Slave" is not a stranger to local patrons of the opera house, and is one of that class of attractions which one can see several times and not tire of. This play is pleasing to the large towns year after year and sometimes several times during a single season. It is so active the natural rule of plays that it is always interesting and refreshing. The scenery, costumes, characters, and the story are all so different from the ordinary that one feels, when the final curtain falls, that they have been in another world and have learned new ideas as well as having had a beautiful and unusual entertainment. At the opera house Friday evening.

—The U. S. engineers examined Hancock well known here was sold in Lake St. Clair lately. We clip the following from the Detroit Journal: Lieut. Col. E. G. R. B. Davis, United states engineer, has closed a contract with Thomas Maher Hancock, of Detroit, for the sale of the government launch Hancock, which was sold in Lake St. Clair Wednesday to collector of the steamer Bughenroad. Col. Davis, in H. Wheeler and Capt. Baker went to the scene of the wreck on Capt. Baker's wrecker smack yesterday and made an inspection, during which superfluous government papers and records were recovered from the wreck. The Hancock has a bad hole in her bow and the pilot house is gone from top part being held only by chains. The wreck will be auctioned off Capt. Baker will start on the job tomorrow. He expects to raise the boat in four or five days. The government may start suit against the Englishman for damages.

IMPORTANT CHANGE.

E. W. Coulter Appointed to His Former Position as U. S. Forest Supervisor Here.

Yesterday Edward E. W. Coulter accepted a transfer of the important office of supervisor of the U. S. Forest Reserve, which is located at Charlevoix in place of E. A. Cross, resigned.

Mr. Coulter formerly held this position, and is probably, by reason of his only of his on special business ability but for fatefulness with national forestry, one of the most capable men we have ever represented the Forest Reserve.

It is stipulated that Mr. Coulter will retain the office of Sheriff the balance of his term, but it is understood that he will not accept a renomination.

While we congratulate Mr. Coulter on his appointment, we cannot forbear expressing a feeling of disappointment that his official career in this county is to be cut short by the loss of the office of Sheriff. We have worked by a degree of affinity that made his re-election in 1906 a certainty.

August 17th, 1905.

The contract with Crowley and Knight for making the streets and referred to the committee on streets and sidewalks.

The committee on streets and sidewalks reported that the south end of Waukazoo Avenue be repaired at an expense of $5.

The committee on public buildings and public grounds reported that 300 water works buildings in the Treasury Company for $1.00, to be paid for at the end of 5 years. The other applicants were disqualified, and he made whereby the City and public may continue to have the use of the water fountain in front of the City Hall.

Permission was granted to the publishers now in the use of the streets for one week the first part of Sept. under the supervision of the street commissioner for the purpose of a carnival.

The President of the Mackinaw College of Physical Culture School for the purpose of the streets on the south side of Mackinaw College gathering next summer, which was granted.

Council adjourned.

—The jackal, jolly to beat out last of Lodge, Vandewater of Chicago, greeted his old time friends here last week. Behind Charlevoix's lodge, called Capt. Van Derbeer, with the swagger Thick Friend, and our regular acquaintance with the performer at Crane's.

—Yes, remember the summer time charge for a newspaper reporter. Lately always a reporter, and the business would see these every month, and come on the night, but if send a bill for a larger in August or September, it is a sure sign of stress. When I am tired of my job, I may, if I feel like, write out a full report of the Sunday sermons, and let the editor have it. If I sometimes notice the sermon is not up to the mark

Weather Bureau Reports Corn and Wheat in Fine Condition.

The weekly bulletin of the weather bureau summarizes crop conditions as follows:

Texas and Oklahoma experienced very warm weather, while it was cool over the northern portions of the west and on the Pacific coast otherwise the temperature conditions were generally favorable. Too much rain proved detrimental in parts of Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri, and also in Florida and portions of Alabama and Georgia and the Carolinas and over a considerable area in the middle Atlantic States, ohio valley and Tennessee rain in excess caused the effects of drought becoming serious over the greater part of Texas and in parts of

THE GRANGE

Conducted by

Prior Correspondent New York State Grange.

HON. W. F. HILL.

Grange Representative at International Conference.

[Special Correspondence.]

The international agricultural conference called by the King of Italy was recognized by forty-two governments in the sending of 120 delegates. This government was represented by its ambassador to Italy, Hon. Henry S. White, Professor A. F. Woods, chief of division of agriculture, Washington, and W. F. Hill, master of Pennsylvania state grange.

In addition to his appointment by President Roosevelt, Mr. Hill was commissioned by the executive committee to speak for the lower grange of Europe.

enthusiasm. He was chosen to take charge of organizing, on the moment, a permanent association of lower grange representatives. Dr. Dana delegate to addressing the congress around him in most enthusiastic manner to assure, for the more than 1,000,000 members of organized farmers in the countries represented in Italy, a hearty welcome to some committee of the old world.

This class of delegates selected from the congress that represents organized agriculture in the various large organizations, is the future. It is gratifying to know that the conference made provision for a permanent international agricultural institute, and unanimously so that incoming congresses thereof will be at Rome. Thus, the expense to shift governmental addresses of it to its proper place, the minister of the government, to connect the lower farmer with the government, for our sake. It is proposed that in the future international agricultural conferences shall be held at stated intervals. That may be an excuse to disorganized crumbs the worldly-wise of the inactive, which remains at work all the year round.

It is not intended that this institute shall in any way compete or meet with the internal relations of any country nor with their agricultural societies, those which might be constituted as companies for mutual benefit from profit. It will, however, gather, collate and disseminate information upon production, conditions, prices, features of the markets of the world, agricultural labor, etc.

Findings that affect agriculture in its international relations will be presented to a "board of arbitration" believed that the establishment of the institute and its consequent bringing forth of a better understanding between governments is a great achievement in the half of universal peace.

This worldwide organization of agriculture is pointing the humanitarian industry upon a higher plane than it has ever before occupied. Farmers have long realized that the prosperity of their interests were no longer confined to state lines, or even to national boundaries, but that their interests extended. There seemed therefore to be no way to be accomplished only through international action.

The foundation for this agricultural betterment has been laid at home. The United States Senate committee on labor, in favor of opening the proposed on behalf of the farmers.

FRATERNAL DELEGATES.

State Grangers Should Participate and Compare Methods.

Who would it not be a good idea for every grange in our annual meetings to send one or two matured delegates to some other grange? Thus would the minds of other state granges? This would somewhat increase the feeling of fraternity amongst farmers and would and enhance the interest which each grange would take in the work of the order.

Experience to represent a state grange in such an occasion would be invaluable to many state subordinates and to many grangers, especially in such large of other state granges. This would somewhat increase the feeling of fraternity amongst farmers and would and enhance the interest which each grange would take in the work of the order.

THE GRANGE IN CANADA.

Good Progress Reported by the Dominion Grange.

The American exodus into Canada has made its influence felt in the grange work in the Dominion. Many of the farmers who are going across the border are members of the grange and are desirous of putting forward the work of organization in their new homes. The master of the Dominion grange reports that he received a request from one of these farmers to organize a grange in the territories, and he granted permission. Seven granges were organized at once, and the master appointed experts to report at their first meeting. He will visit Nova Scotia in order personally to the work of organization, and then to a general meeting for the extension of the order in that section. In proper order to understand the real source of the organization that it is not yet dead, but remains the vital of the church in good efficiency. Very who give it their support. We notice no death, but a gain of three grangers organized of the status should go into the Canadian border and total a third time would give us 6 or more to the good even there as it has not 700 to gain.

GRANGE COMMENDED.

Its Beneficial Influence on the Home Life.

If for long my good friends, says a writer in the Grange Journal, the visit, I have been in Michigan and other states among the old and active sometimes to its actual security, and I have found the good work of the order in the home life. Many granges have a strong religious influence, some actually at work, the order and the church, and the Sabbath to the grange.

Michigan is a great grange and is fortunate in a commodious hall which is used for school purposes, consequently the most prominent men in the state have made the highest official positions and they bring to bear on the grange. Which were the early pioneers, John J. Woodman, Jonathan Bishop, H. Hunter, and numerous others, who have made a grange their home. These men have contributed to the grange in the state, and consequently the state has made a great help to the grange in return.

Illinois is a fine state, I visited in a few days, but I noticed the influence of the order in the home life. The farmers, mechanics, merchants, and professional men, have made a home for the benefit of the vicinity. Many of the farmers have made a home for the benefit of the vicinity. Many of the farmers have made a home for the benefit of the vicinity. Many of the farmers

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

(CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued.)

The next week passed away drearily enough. Mrs. Hamilton was so feeble as scarcely to leave her room, and Lucy was in a state of dull despondency, which she was unable, though Dessmond could find none, backward and forward, from which to rouse herself. The funeral was to be in London, and Dessmond had written to Mr. Lovett, who was abroad, to come down to Ashleigh. This gentleman had been the friend of his father, and was spoken of by his son as a man of the world, who would be able to advise and assist them in the difficulties which surrounded them. Dessmond had made no mention of his suspicions to his mother or sister, but he felt that he must have some one to whom he could confide his fears, and he had written to Mr. Lovett with this object in view. He had also written to Mr. Bertram, the lawyer, who was his father's executor, and who had charge of the will, which was to be read after the funeral. He had not been able to see Lucy alone since the night of his father's death, but he had written to her, and had received a few lines in reply, which had given him a little hope that she was not indifferent to his love, though they had been written in a tone of the most earnest entreaty that he would not allude to the subject between them for a year, and that he would not see her or write to her during that period. He had obeyed her in this, though it had been a cruel sacrifice to his feelings, and he had contented himself with watching for her in the grounds, and with the hope that she might, in her solitary walks, meet with some one who would give her a message from him. He had seen her once or twice, and had been grieved at the change in her appearance, but she had always hurried by him with a few hurried words, which had left him no opportunity for detaining her.

"I promise to be your wife," she had said, "if you still wish it, when the year is over, but I cannot see you or write to you now. Do not ask me to do so, for I cannot."

Dessmond had written to her once since his father's death, but he had not dared to allude to his suspicions in his letter, for he was afraid that if she knew of them she would refuse to see him at all. He had hoped that she would write to him, and had been disappointed at her silence, but he had attributed it to her fear of betraying her feelings if she wrote to him while her mother was so ill, and had been contented to wait for her promised letter after the funeral was over.

The day of the funeral was a dreary one for all the household. The weather was cold and gloomy, and the house was in a state of confusion and disorder which was very depressing to the nervous invalid who had been left alone in her room during the absence of her son and daughter. Dessmond had hoped that Lucy would be able to bear him company on his return from the funeral, but she had been so ill with a nervous headache that her mother had been unwilling to spare her, and she had lain on her bed in her darkened room when her brother had left for the cemetery, and was there when he returned.

The will was read the day after the funeral to the assembled household by the lawyer, and was found to be in favor of the eldest son, who was left sole heir to his father's property, with the exception of a few legacies to the servants and a small sum to his sister. The property was not entailed, and was in no way encumbered, but it was not of a very large value, and the income arising from it was not more than was sufficient to keep up the place and maintain the family in the position they had hitherto held in the county. There was a small sum of money in the funds, which was left to the widow, but it was only a small one, and was not more than was necessary to her own comfort and that of her daughter, who was her only companion.

Dessmond had hoped that his father might have left him some small legacy, which would have been a great help to him at this time, but he had never mentioned his intentions to his son, and he had died without making a will at all, so that the property had gone to the eldest son without any deduction.

Dessmond had written to his uncle, Mr. Lovett, on his return from the funeral, and had told him of his suspicions and his fears, and had asked his advice as to the best means of proceeding in the matter. He had also written to Mr. Bertram, the lawyer, and had told him that he was anxious to see the will of his father, which had been left in his hands, and had asked him if he could not do something to prevent the property from being seized upon by the creditors of the late Mr. Hamilton. He had received a very kind letter in reply from his uncle, who had promised to come down to Ashleigh as soon as his business would allow him to do so, and had promised to do all in his power to assist his nephew in his difficulties. Mr. Bertram had written a very cold, formal letter, in which he had stated that the will was in his hands, and that he would be glad to see Mr. Dessmond Hamilton at his office when he returned to town.

Dessmond had been very much cheered by his uncle's letter, and had been looking forward to his arrival with great hope and confidence. He had not been able to do much in the way of business since his father's death, for his mother had been so ill that he had been afraid to leave her, and he had been very much cut up himself by the sudden loss of his father, and had been very glad of the opportunity of being with his mother and sister during the first few days after their bereavement. He had written to Lucy on the day of his return from the funeral, and had told her that he was anxious to see her, and had asked her if she could not find some means of meeting him in the grounds, as he was afraid to leave his mother for a few minutes, lest she should be seized with a fit of her old complaint, and he had been very much disappointed at her refusal to see him, and had been very much hurt at her letter. He had been very fond of his father, and had been very much cut up by his death, and he had been very much in need of the sympathy and consolation of his sister at this time, and he had been very much disappointed at her refusal to see him.

Lucy had been very much cut up by her brother's letter. She had been very fond of her father, and was very much shocked at his sudden death, and had been very much cut up at her inability to see her brother at this time, when she was so anxious to see him and to talk to him about their mutual sorrow. She had been very much hurt at his letter, and had been very much disappointed at the prospect of being so long without seeing him. She had been very much in need of his sympathy and consolation at this time, and she had been very much disappointed at her inability to see him. She had been very much cut up at her father's death, and was very much in need of her brother's sympathy and consolation at this time, and was

1859 RECORD HOLDS

VOYAGE OF CLIPPER DREAD-NAUGHT NEVER EQUALED.

Capt. Samuels' Exploit Far Greater Than the Recent Triumph of Capt. Barr—Veteran Is in Favor of Time Allowance.

Now that the Apache has passed the Lizard (say Samuel Sadwick) we agree that the race for the German cup proves a sing nas "no great chance in point of speed, says the New York Commercial. Everybody in the New York shipping world knows Capt. Sam Sadwick. Not to know him argues oneself unknown. Some the days when Capt. Antonio Sanso used to adorn the waterfront of the marine society with his presence and his presidency, Capt. Sam was held the peer of mariners among some of us who go down to the sea in ships. He is a seaman of the first rank.

If he has done the feat of Capt. Carlile Sadwick, who will quarrel with him? He is a gentleman, and a gentleman may select any medium of transportation he chooses to travel around. He is not bribed by his employers to accept a trip in a sailing vessel instead of a clipper ship travel, exactly more than had a country gentleman of Sandy Hook be hired a sloop or any upon shipping conveniences at his disposal than he.

Capt. Samuels and the Dreadnaught in 1859 made better time than Capt. Barr and the Apache in 1905. This is a matter of history. The explanation of this "slow" time is the fact that the ship was flabby to the superstructure of her hull, and was written in the Dictionary of the time. The time taken and questions asked between New York and Queenstown was a most spectacular performance, than there, seventy days, four hours and twenty minutes between New York and the Lizard.

A contested feature was the dreadnaught Langstone, whom we met off of Nantucket, was a Liverpool packet, a white eagle painted the vessel. Master Bond was engaged for a sale from her sailing ship John Dodge, Address Mary H. Walters, 56 54 St. C-ir Ave., Columbus, O., writes, For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak from misuse doctor's drugs, that I could not eat food. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured. Guaranteed at F. G. Hines & Co. drug store, price 50c.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The managers of the Petoskey vaudeville "stand broke" last week. The average attendance was too small to make the enterprise pay.

Mrs. Naomi Aldrich of Frederic is in jail at Grayling charged with murdering her two sons, 10 and 12 years of age. The life of each was insured for $500.

F. H. Pope, who has held the position of agent in Traverse City for the Northern Michigan Transportation company, has resigned his position, his resignation to take effect Sept. 1. Mr. Pope has accepted a position in the Chicago office of the Frank Considine-Lord Freight company as assistant to the manager.

On the front page of the Central Lake Torch last week is a picture of Bill Cook cross grown by J. L. Mueller at Central Lake in 1899. The picture shows Mr. Coulter standing on the shoulders of a man, their combined height spanning the height of the cross, which was almost twelve feet. Mr. Coulter had the picture taken and sent to the Herald New Yorker to show this country can raise other things than tobacco, plug stamps and snow drifts."

Traverse City Record: An incidence which filled the large auditorium last at the big Indian camp meeting last Thursday evening followed intermission. Mr. Rhodes broke up the threshing machine or by handling, attach themselves to the animal kingdom. After offered what is sown, the kernels and those specks of small germinate at the same time. The smut plant grows inside the wheat stem throughout the season, and when the crop is threshing it rains the kernel in the head of the wheat into the well known smut kernels. The spread of the disease may best be prevented by dusting, if possible, seed wheat free from smut. If you can not obtain clean seed of your chosen variety, try the following treatment: The first step is to clean off a space on the barn floor same ten feet square or larger if convenient, sweep the area very thoroughly to remove all spores of smut possible.

Next buy of your druggist a pound bottle of formalin. He may not have this agent in stock, therefore, order it at once that he may have it in time for your use in September.

Mix the formalin with water in a large barrel in the proportion of one pound of formalin to four hundred pounds of water. This means that the formalin should be mixed with fifty gallons of water, enough for thirty five bushels of wheat. Knowing the proportions you can mix any quantity desired. Be sure to keep the bottle of formalin tightly and securely corked, it is not a dangerous poison but is unhealthy to take either by the nose or mouth. Do not mix the formalin and water until you are ready to use them.

Thoroughly wet the floor on which you are to treat the wheat, with this formalin mixture, making it good and wet. Then spread on a layer of the seed wheat, which you have previously selected with a fanning mill. With a sprinkling pot go over the layer of wheat, wetting it thoroughly, shoveling it over and sprinkling until every kernel is wet on all sides. Add more wheat and sprinkle to take up the wheat already treated and put down a new lot. Before putting the treated wheat into bags to carry to the mill it may lay in a pile for a day, not longer, because of the danger of heating and the further danger that an excess for the formalin may hinder germination. Put the treated wheat into clean bags or into bags that have been wet with this formalin mixture. Be careful not to stir up a dust in the barn while the treated wheat is still exposed. The dust will be likely to be made up largely of the smut spores which we are fighting.

If you want to drill the wheat, it is well to allow it to dry either on a barn floor treated long enough beforehand with the formalin mixture to allow it to become thoroughly dry, or on canvas, free from smut spores, and spread on the ground in the sun. The drill and everything else with which the wheat comes in contact after treatment should be free from smut spores or washed with the formalin mixture.

If you cannot buy formalin at your druggists you may try corrosive sublimate if you dare when you remember that it is a soluble poison, and the greatest care must be taken to allow no animal access either to the drug itself or to the wheat that has been treated. Use a pound of corrosive sublimate to four hundred pounds of water (fifty gallons). Dissolve the drug in three or four gallons of hot water in a wooden vessel. Do not allow the mixture to come in contact with metal. Use enough cold water to bring the amount up to the fifty gallons. Proceed as with the formalin mixture, except that great care must be exercised to prevent poisoning live stock or children.

Our experiments have shown that either treatment will reduce the amount of smut in the wheat to a very small quantity or, if the season be right, will prevent smut altogether.

Death of a Pioneer.

Josiah M. May, better known among old settlers as Frank May, died at Boyne City the 16th, aged 79.

Deceased lived in Charlevoix 46 years ago. He was a plasterer and stone mason by trade, and several of the old Charlevoix houses yet have the plaster on their walls that Mr. May laid. He came to Charlevoix county in 1853, and was hotel in Mackinaw times—or, at least, during a part of those strenuous times. He was born in Vermont and as a boy ran away and made two whaling voyages. He was a veteran of the First New York Light Artillery and the One Hundred and Forty-second Illinois infantry in the civil war, a member of the Presbyterian church and a highly respected citizen. His daughter, Mrs. John Sadman, with whom he lived in his last years, was the first white child born in Charlevoix county. The G. A. R. post had charge of his funeral.

—Rev. J. W. Vickers expects to leave for Charlevoix, on Tuesday, to attend the annual Conference, which will be in session from Wednesday Sept. 6 to Monday Sept. 11. He will preach the pastor of the former charge in Jackson, on Sunday the 10th.

—It has been decided to postpone the proposed street fair for one year. The financial side of the matter was not taken up soon enough to cover the details necessary to make it a success. Omar gathering in the Northern Michigan during the month would also detract. But look out for a big one in 1906.

—In the special term of the circuit court the case of one H. U. U. and A. R. H. vs. vs. Frank Anderson of Boyne City took up the entire eight days. The railroad company built the Anderson property, and Anderson secured an injunction, and the railroad company countered by beginning condemnation proceedings. Tuesday night the jury brought in a verdict giving Anderson $1,000 damages.

—It was only a quiet family affair, with but a few personal friends of the contracting parties, but it serves as well the purpose of "lagging" away another nice Charlevoix girl, born and bred. The event was the marriage at the home of the bride's parents, in the village Thursday evening, of Miss Clara Eaton to Mr. Hugh Law, of Menominee. Mr. Law is teacher in the Manual Training department of the Menominee schools. Mr. and Mrs. Law will make their home in Menominee.

—Another good tug has been added to the Charlevoix fishing fleet Sunday. Levi Gelken arrived here with the tug H. M. Van Ellis, which he purchased in Milwaukee. She will ply in connection with the F. P. Gelken. The Van Ellis is of 20 gross tons, 55.3 feet long, 14 feet beam. She was built in 1885 at Sheboygan.

—John Cudahy Jr. of Chicago, Milwaukee, Wedala, and several other cities where his millionaire father packed meat was a guest at the inn several days this week and was aland town. The young man is the hero of a kidnap case, kidnapping case of several years ago, when Jas. Crowe gathered in the boy for a ransom and got it. The world knew a lively time getting the young man, who was then in town Monday.

—Frank N. Clarke superintendent of U. S. cod hatcheries, was here Saturday. With him was Mr. H. U. Fikins foreman of the Alpena hatchery, who remains to superintend the painting of the auxiliary hatchery here, and otherwise overhaul the plant. Mr. Clark says the establishment of a permanent hatchery here is "up to Charlevoix." He has put himself on record as favoring Charlevoix for such a plant, and now he is go after the hatchery.

—On Tuesday evening, Sept. 5th, Charlevoix people will have the privilege of enjoying one of the most refined and high class musical entertainments that has ever appeared in Northern Michigan—the Dolmatier Sisters, a quintette of talented young ladies, who have recently been received with the most marked appreciation from press and pulpit in the combination, in both vocal and instrumental of high grade. They will appear on the above date at Bank Hall, under the auspices of the Sam K. P. Lodge. Admission, 35 and 50 cents.

—J. A. Lynn leaves soon for Chicago and other points looking up trade for the new "music" company, known as the "Chippewa Music and Decorative Materialists of Charlevoix." The new company is composed of the founder and original "music man," John A. Lynn, Ben and Truss Yerkes, formerly of Inns, and H. Meyer, of Chicago. Mr. Meyer will represent the company in Chicago, and the Eastern representative will be the Heritage Garden Nursery Co., of Queens, N. Y. With Mr. Lynn's wide experience in the design and production of rustic goods the company is certain of a good trade from the start. He has lately designed, and is manufacturing a new and novel line of plant baskets, and made of native products, which eclipse everything yet produced. E. H. Hurd, a dealer of Chicago, has asked Mr. Lynn to send on him, with designs of holiday specialties, and Mr. Lynn will take from Mr. Hurd a large order for decorative evergreens of several varieties.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY JAIL.

Commissioner Frimpter visited and examined the jail on August 29th. If the county seat is permanently located in Boyne City a new jail should be built without delay. The present structure is not worthy the name. There is no suitable room for women. The sun need to shine enough in the jail's yard to allow of exercise, and there is no place for prisoners employed in outdoor work. The installation of prisoners the law required is and practicable when the county seat is in Charlevoix.

The present jail needs new mattresses, better provisions for bathing and the cells not in use should be kept locked. The offensive night conditions reading water when there are inmates giving them some attention in Sundays.

CELERY AND PUBLIC CO.

Are Organization Effected That Means Much to Charlevoix.

Although the corporate name and style of the organization has not yet been decided upon, the Celery Co. has been temporarily organized in Charlevoix that will have far-reaching results in improving market conditions here.

A contract has been closed where by the above mentioned syndicate becomes the owners for simple of land under water and adjacent to the plant, with the business front and dock privileges. The property has a frontage on Newman street and the harbor front, and is an ideal location for the purpose for which it was bought.

The company is organized as follows: B. W. Philbrick, D. W. Crossley, H. D. Cooper, E. W. Cuddler, all of Chicago, and A. J. Sheridan, of Whitewater Wis., but who will soon make his residence in Charlevoix. Frank Shaw, a practical farmer, maker, will also be a stockholder, and will be the manager.

The purpose of the company is to manufacture and market celery, butter, and dairy products of large proportions, which has already begun at the plant. The services extends to goodness to fruit, Wendling, and wishes him a successful year.

—It was, strangely, believe it not! a tradition that Northern Michigan is not a dark country. This season proves the fallacy of that tradition. Indeed one season, with another season record of Northern Michigan stands as high as that of any other section of the state. The cool nights which Charlevoix are magnificent—that is the word. Days are fine, and cool and inspiring, and the yield promises to be great, as a matter of fact the farms of Northern Michigan show up big this year.

—The recent regatta at Harbor Springs resulted in giving Hi. the Total 5 points and Charlevoix 4 points. There was only one race, that being for an inflatable raft. The Charlevoix team crossed the line as follows: Ed. Tiger, owned by Hanson Meter, of Harbor Point; 2d, Alert, owned by Mr. Kipp, of Charlevoix; Jump Off, owned by Dr. Rensford Lewis, Charlevoix; 4th, Pussy, owned by Mr. Wells, Harbor Point. PEACE

The Portsmouth Conference Comes to an Agreement.

The Russo-Japanese peace conference at Portsmouth practically closed its deliberations Tuesday, when an agreement was reached through which peace is assured.

The terms of peace are a surprise to the world. Japan withdrawing its demand for indemnity and surrender of the half of Sakhalin Island to Russia. It seems to be certain, however, that there is a secret understanding behind the treaty, by which Japan shall be reimbursed for care of prisoners.

This thing is certain, Japan emerges from the affair, as contended before the war, and establishes herself as a world power.

An important phase of the Portsmouth agreement is the achievement of Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, in bringing the two belligerent nations together for conference. The president has by this act, made himself a power in the world's affairs, and accomplished more in the cause of peace than was ever before accomplished by one man.

Find Elmer.

The fishing tug H. M. Van Ells, bound from Milwaukee home, on Sunday morning, picked up the body of a man off Sleeping Bear, and brought it to this port.

The body was badly decomposed, and was buried as soon as a coroner's jury had surveyed it and passed the usual verdict.

There is little doubt that the body is that of Ole Nelson, who, with a companion, was drowned by the capsizing of a boat off Point Betsy two weeks ago Sunday. On the body was found a memorandum book with "Ole Nelson" written on the fly leaf.

LATER.

Empire friends of the dead man arrived here Monday evening, and the body was identified and taken to Empire.

The Empire correspondent of the Traverse City Eagle writes, under date of the 24th:

The bodies of Antone Drooping, one of the two Swedes who were drowned in Platte bay, while sailing in an inflatable raft, on the 12th, have been found, the last one being found near Sleeping Bear point a couple of weeks ago, was found Saturday evening about six miles south of this village, near Edgewater, floating in Lake Michigan. The place where the body was sighted is about 12 miles from where the drowning occurred and it was sighted by the crew of the sailing vessel Queen of Wing of Frankfort. When the vessel crew reached Empire they reported having seen a body and a party in A. F. Bearing's launch went out and picked up the body. A coroner's inquest was held Sunday morning by Coroner G. W. Fralick of Maple Grove, and a verdict of accidental drowning was returned by the jury.

Norwood Resolutions.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom to remove from our fellowship our beloved Sister Mrs. Elizabeth Robechuck, of Norwood Hive, No. 800, it is therefore

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to God's will we deeply lament the loss and greatly sympathize with the bereaved family whose loss is much greater than ours and commend them to the Heavenly Father for strength and comfort in this their darkest hours. It is further

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for sixty days, and that these resolutions be in the minutes of this Hive, published in the Charlevoix papers and a copy sent to the sorrowing family.

SAILORS ARE SLAIN.

SHIPWRECKED JAPANESE CREW KILLED BY RUSSIANS.

Sealing Vessel Goes Down off Copper Island and Crew Lands on Inhospitable Coast. Survivors Also Reach New York After Horrible Experience.

News was brought to Vancouver, B. C., by the sealing Shenandoah of the return to Hakodate of the Japanese sealing schooner Fox Maru with her crew, and this wonderful story of hardship and suffering of the schooner Mayesuma Maru were killed by Russians on the Kurile (Chiko) island. The Fox Maru was sent out by the Mayesuma Maru to pick up parties on behalf of the Mayesuma Maru, which was between Yezo and Kamtschatka when heading off Copper Island discovered a schooner in distress. The crew of seven was unknown and the vessel which the crew had left was in a sinking condition. The Mayesuma Maru took the Japanese aboard and proceeded to Kiska, where the Russian flag was found flying. They proceeded to Copper Island and there

ARE ROB THE PEOPLE

CONSUMERS CONTRIBUTE MILLIONS AMASSED BY COMBINES.

Special Privileges Granted by Republicans at the Root of the Evil—Remedy is Fair Balance of Power Between Political Parties.

In the end, of course, the consumer, the poor, the millions, assessed by the trust barons. The Standard Oil monopoly, the beef trusts, the coal barons, the railroad grabbers, the trust-made aristocracy and the numerous other plants and machine owners, all are the ultimate consumers from the class Andrew's name. Dividends and high profits should not build up such fortunes in a lifetime, but instead of rules of profitable business producing a fair fortune, millions are made each year and are still accumulating.

It is no secret how the prosperity of the country have contained trust wealth, but it is a strange mystery that those who furnish it are content to allow the accumulation to continue. Every conflict has some one to profiteer, that gives to a monopoly and the representatives of the people have granted those special favors. The tariff and monopoly has been granted millions of acres of land, the cream of national domain and the unequal opportunity of charging all the traffic will bear, that is, as much as can be extracted by the public. The bankers control the finances of the country and must pay tribute to them through capital taxes to those concerns. The industrial trusts are protected by high tariffs, and yet, by protection from foreign competition and having a monopoly of the home trade, they grand tax allowance the price of their products to consumers, and the people pay. The trusts have blockaded with the Republicans and has adjusted them to frame tariff rates so that practically a tax, control the price of lumber, of coal, of iron and the luxuries that are imported enough to warrant their admission.

It has taken thirty years to build up this gigantic monopoly of public plans and business rules and laws has been no chance of their majority, except for two years, 1893 and '94, the only partially in the Republicans were again returned to power in 1894 by the election of a Republican House of Representatives, and to 1896 were given control of all branches of the government. If their leaders have been so manipulated that the trusts and combines have controlled legislation and the execution of the laws it is wonderful that they have not tribute on the people and collected it?

The question is with the voters at the ballot box to continue. They have the power in their hands to change the program, not at once, for the Upper House Senate with its two-thirds Broad Road majority stands in the way of immediate relief, but an honest majority in the House of Representatives, and then the Senate election and grant the key to Democracy. The legislature that will elect one third of the Senate will be elected next year and, if controlled by the people, instead of the corporations, would down unless the combination between the politicians and the trusts and the road would be open to immediate relief.

The erratic prosecution of the trusts now being attempted is worthless without legislation and the Republican party has shown by a long record of years that it thinks more of trust combination than of relieving the people.

The whole political situation is rotten and nothing but turning the rascals out will restore the power to the people and provide honest laws. Any party continued in power for nearly fifty years would probably be no better.

The only solution for the republic is an equalization of power between the parties so that a trade throws the balance to the opposition.

Tariff the Mother of Trusts.

What a commentary on the combination will have when it pushes the organ trust. It will be well for the Democrat and Mr. Harbrecht to remember that Mr. Hanna-elect testifies before the Industrial Commission that the protective tariff is the mother of trusts, while of course, he is the nurse of the power trust. What a connection there will be in Congress and how the Democrat will hold when the president comes to that body that he finds from the few trusts investigated that it is no time, that protection has failed and benefited the trusts and to recommends Congress to abolish protection and return to the Democratic policy of a tariff for revenue and not a tariff to foster and protect trusts. The people are willing to pay a tariff and to support the government honestly and economically administered, but they are not willing to be taxed by the trusts.

President Eliot growing younger.

Here is a story about President Eliot of Harvard which illustrates his good humor, for he is 71 years old at a social gathering. It was introduced by the observation that he looks as growing younger. The theory had its foundation in the circumstance that from recent local history, the other from the time when he was a teacher in Boston.

The members of his chemistry class at the Institute of Technology, he said, used to call him "Old Mike," but now the student youth must have another view of life, for, on joining two of them a few evenings before, he heard one of them say: "Wonder where Charley's been tonight?"

TRICKS OF SHARPERS

USUALLY BASED ON APPEAL TO CUPIDITY.

Promise of Immense Profits for Small Investment Almost Invariably Successful in Deluding "Suckers"—Some Recent Schemes.

The Hicks house has been the home of many unfortunate victims for the past week, called from all the Machine, says the Washington Star. In evenings this company's notes and talk of their experiences with that element of society which tries to get something for nothing through the agency of the mails.

It is every day that the public stands at the bar, these sharpers (those could hold a veteran magistrate) whose business is the lay mile. The explanation of course, that's the experienced man said. An appeal to greed, if plausibly somebody never fails and hard times. No matter how old the scheme is, so long effort it has been exploited in the newspapers it will succeed. It is a perpetual fund and does not fail. Because the latest victim of the crooks have to get on something from in order to get money back.

One of the congregations visited Tuesday and one of the hackmen to frame in the second of selling the gullible millions of acres of land, the cities of enormous domain and the unequal opportunity of charging all the traffic will bear, that is, as much as can be extracted by the public. GERMANY'S NEW TARIFF.

Merchants and Manufacturers Want Favored Nation Clause.

According to a recent state in the State Department of Richard Olney, United States Consul General at Frankfort, Germany, now prevailing opinion among the merchants of Germany is less than the "most favored nation" clause with reciprocity treaties signed on account of the Dingley tariff and complications with Germany, which are expected to result in a new treaty. It was intended that the Dingley tariff should be only temporary, and it was hoped that the Dingley tariff would be replaced by a tariff based on reciprocity treaties with other countries. The Dingley tariff has been in force for more than two years, and the prospects are that the present complications will not be adjusted for some time, but that the Dingley tariff will be extended for another year

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

CHAPTER X. (Continued.)

She could have had twenty some thing, but, awake to her mistake, she regarded something which from the very first had pressed a hard and bitter fetch in her.

Answers not, Gertrude. "Do you other, me?" he cried, eagerly, for now that he had spoken, his impression lower could be more impossible. "Do you love me, child? Do you love me?"

"What is love?" she murmured, bowing her head.

"It is the old designer, in a manuscript, Kitchen, is what you were hoping for children."

"It is happiness," she cried, breaking away from him. Wonderfully the answer to the good answer which the when been so long and long, pacific to Fatimon. "Are our arts, quite sure, that it is happiness? and regardless?"

"Yes, it is not after you wanted your arts? That is the question." Yes, it Wark, this that would not give you one, and, always, and, and, and, Yes, and, and, part of this life, case of my very arts? Do you answer? Do you love me, dear, love me, and you must be my wife."

BETTER THAN MULES

CHINESE COOLIES TRAVEL FAR WITH HEAVY LOADS.

Their Cheerfulness and Endurance Under Hard Labor Call's Forth Admiration of Britisn Traveler—Need Little Food and Less Sleep.

Wheelbarrows are used to a great extent in China for the conveyance for long distances of passengers and freight. Lieut. Col. C. E. Mast, field of the British army, tells us full loads of the wheelbarrow men in the upper Yangtze provinces. "The plank of which is as slender as possible to pay part of China not a good thing to travel a mandarinate could is carried on from its neighborhood and spot all over the country. The only transport used, until the railway is a sayingdom of China. In this river is reached in the wheelbarrow. There is no doubt that a good road would cost in really made but whether it is due to the fact that draft animals are not bred in sufficient numbers or that the experiment wheelbarrows have been used, these latter seem best the field and no wonder has been made in construct roads suitable for any other form of wheeled vehicle. These wheelbarrows has two arms in no spokes to be mentioned as a means of transport. Hundreds of these were finished by us, each pair with a load of two hundred pounds of rice, or eight of the kind of narrow cotton cloth made in the Manchester districts, each of these bales weighing about seventeen pounds. One man would wheel a barrow carrying the pounds and make his twelve to twenty miles a day, more than double the amount which the horse-drawn pack mule is allowed to carry in the day, and the mule's bales load of lighter cloth we go on making the journey with, and in addition can without any bales for themselves to give mules.

"Although for the Chinese coolies the wheelbarrow there is no rule in the world who uses the same method. Mountain ways in Shensi. Further on, when we reach the mountainous waterway of Szechuen, where only bamboo rafts are possible, I imagine will more conformed to this opinion. Often after a long and weary day with the ever vanishing in the course of which we would have climbed up fifty, forty, or 1000 feet, and some several steep descents and descents, having perhaps been on the move from 7 in the morning the only data, we would come to a narrow pathway, and on arrival on the back as the thought of what a hard day's work we had undoubtedly be complained only to find that the Chinese coolies had made as good time, each man having covered nearly as much ground with a load of two pounds on his back. This done on a few bowls of rice and bean curd, for a wage of less than eleven-pence sterling.

"Then, on their arrival, one might have thought that the coolies would have been glad to rest; but, if, as was the case where we were stationed, we was lenient enough in the same house, I found to my astonishment that to retire to bed was far from their thoughts and that my sleep was often disturbed by the noisy fun they go to play on no machines from past midnight and until they were quite ready to go out journeying in the morning having been to make up their loads and get their food cooked before 7 o'clock.

Petoskey News: The story about Detective Logan's bloodhound and his work at St. Ignace on Monday night has assumed more than a little interest in the national. One of the remarkable exploits of hunting down criminals was at Allen where a young man had robbed the father of his last girl. The dog furnished evidence pointing to the guilt of the young man, but people refused to believe it. However, when the trail taken up the second time had direct to the young man himself the officers over ruled the opinions of the people and arrested the fellow, who later confessed to the robbery. The dog is a full blooded animal and the detective department of the G. R. & I. has his pedigree.

Traverse City Record: The time is drawing near when the valuable services rendered in this district by Fire siding Elder M. D. Carrel of the Methodist church will be demonstrated in a new field. Rev. Carrel has served his church in the Grand Traverse district for six years, well and faithfully and the benefits of the administrations for the spiritual welfare of the people of his church in this locality have been profound. In honor of the splendid work of Rev. Carrel the members of the conference held at the Asbury M. E. church last night, joined with their wives in presenting a dining testimonial of the esteem in which Mr. Carrel and his wife are held in this city. His fellow workers presented him a handsome office chair and a tribute to his worth and work for his people here. The presentation was made by Rev. Hugh Kennedy, with remarks appropriate to the occasion, and Rev. Carrel responded feelingly, expressing his great appreciation of this evidence of sincere regard. A bountiful spread was laid at which Rev. and Mrs. Carrel were the guests of honor.

Mrs. Mary Jackson wife of F. B. Jackson died at Central Lake Wednesday evening and was buried in the Antrim cemetery Friday. Mary Hilton was born in Ellenburg N. Y. December 1836 and was married to Fred Jackson at Atwood 1858. They lived at Atwood for a while then at Advance then at Ellsworth and came to Norwood about 1892, keeping the hotel for a number of years, and moved to Central Lake a year ago last spring. Her death was caused by apoplexy.

Points is Aroused.

The public is advised to the knowledge of the creative merits of that great medicinal tonic Electric Bitters, for such strength, liver and kidneys. Sold by Hayes, of Jolliet, Clair Ark., Columbus, O., writes: For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked, I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak from the last doctor's drugs, that I could not eat. Now after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured. Endorsement of E. G. Hines & Co drug store, price 50c.

Entertainer in Converted.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Mrs. James Hyslop, Pb. D., Pastor.

The attendance at both services last Sunday was good.

At next Sunday morning service Miss Grace Haldane, of Toronto, will sing a solo, and it is hoped many will be here. At the close of the service the Communion of The Lord's Supper will be observed. A union meeting will be held in the evening in the church of Lake. The Mayor will preside and give a short address. Rev. J. W. Vickers and James Hyslop will deliver addresses. It is hoped also that the Rev. Dr. Hoskin, of St. Louis will be able to take a part in the service. Special music has been arranged and the less capable times have been invited to attend and many of them intimated have expressed appreciation of services and have promised to be present.

A Telling Story

is the saving from death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Ayler, Cumberland, Ind., his mother writes that he was sick nearly one little girl was to declining health with consumption. Many friends and two physicians gave her up. We were all ways in despair, when we resolved to try Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief, after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health." Never fails to prove its cure in coughs or colds. At E. G. Hines & Co drug store. See and $1.00 guarantee. Trial bottle free.

Origin of Confetti Throwing.

Confetti throwing, which is now so general, seem its origin, strangely enough, in an epitaph. A firm was employed in printing and forming the thousands of epitaphs in which cases for boxes were packed. The tiny cuttings of each were thrown upon by the work girls and as the proprietor saw the commercial possibilities of the idea he tried his hand. It caught on to such an extent that he soon gave up printing and devoted himself to confetti making.

Oil Stock Swindle.

Bellaire Times: Parties in this city have received circulars from the Fidelity Oil Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, offering to sell stock in the company at 10 cents per share. The circulars are very plausibly worded and the company is said to be a very strong one. The Times has been informed that the company is not in good standing and that the stock is worthless. Parties who have received circulars from the company should be careful how they invest their money.

Bicycle Stolen.

A Bicycle belonging to Mr. Ed. Hoyt was stolen from the rear of the Antrim Grocery Friday night. The wheel was a second hand one, and had been in use but a few days. It was a dark green in color, and had a small bell on the handle bars. Mr. Hoyt has been unable to find any trace of the wheel, and has reported the matter to the police.

—John Burters and wife, of Fort Austin, are the guests of Hon. A. Hutters and wife for a few days.

—Prof. Kimball, of the commercial department of Albion College, was here several days the past week as the guest of Bert Wilber.

—Episcopal Church services will be held Sunday, September 10th, at 10:30 a. m. by Rev. Charles E. Stout. You are invited to attend.

—Hay Faulkner and wife of Chicago, arrived here last Thursday, and will remain a week longer, with their many Charlevoix friends.

—Mrs. D. C. Nettleton went to Chicago last week on the Missouri to spend a month at the Academy of Fine Arts studying painting and illustrating.

—Lou A. Comfort, of the lighthouse engineers' department, spent the last week with his family here. Mr. Comfort went from here to Frankfort, where he is making repairs on the lighthouse.

—M. H. Hale several years ago the railroad agent here, surprised his many old friends here last week by dropping into town. Mr. Hale has abandoned railroading, and is now cashier of a bank in Idaho.

—Chief Holmes, of the U. S. lighthouse and cable service is at Beaver Island this week, establishing shore connections and installing the commercial office of St. James. The Fire Lake is expected to leave Buffalo with the cable tomorrow or Saturday.

—Work at the Charlevoix cement plant is rushed. Superintendent Shaw has at work putting in cement floors in all the rooms, and the building is otherwise being improved to meet requirements. Mr. Shaw expects to have the machinery manufactured in twenty days, and hopes to have the plant in active operation in thirty days.

—Judge Durfee of Iowa is holding a special term of Circuit Court for Judge Mayne, in Charlevoix, hearing the famous Mauthe county order case, which has been dragging its weary way through the courts for years, nearly among. W. L. Durfee, of Petoskey, holds the orders, and he wants Charlevoix county to either pay or prosecute them. Prosecutor W. D. Gallagher, of St. James, is here as a witness in the case.

—Petoskey Independent: Steamer Shepstone, which was recently transferred from the passenger agency of the Pere Marquette here to the freight agency of the same railroad company at Muskegon, had been given credit for uncovering a systematic steal that has been going on in the latter office for many months. It will be remembered that press dispatches have announced the arrest of the former agent and that several thousand dollars missing money is accredited to his speculations. When Mr. Shepstone took charge of the office he found matters not just as they should be and an investigation by the auditing department revealed the fact. Mr. S's many friends in this city are grateful to him on his ability to "ferret out" for his company, and at the right time.

—Geo. G. Dixon and wife, of Detroit are visiting at W. I. Pearson's.

—James Gaffney of Detroit, was here the latter part of the season, fishing off for the Booth Co.

—A. B. Gates and family, of Detroit, were guests of John Burns and wife several days the past week.

—H. N. Turrell, a banker of Hillsdale county, accompanied by his wife, is visiting his brother F. E. Turrell.

—Frank P. Gerken was here the past week, visiting his parents, and incidentally greeting his old friends.

—Will H. Ambs office of the Petoskey Echo, is here visiting his relatives in W. Overtier and H. J. Ambs.

—Miss Tate Pearson will leave Monday for Kalamazoo where she will enter the young ladies' seminary for the fall and winter.

—A company has been organized at Bellaire to buy and sell produce, to be known as the Bellaire Produce Co. It will have a capital of $5,000 and be incorporated. The company has purchased a warehouse of John C. Morgan & Son.

—The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. L. E. Benton, Friday, Sept. 8th at 2:30 p. m. Leader Mrs. A. T. Bennett. Topic non alcoholic Medication. It is expected that Mrs. P. J. Howard District president and Mrs. F. H. Dalhuiter secretary of the District W. C. T. U. will be present. It is hoped there will be a good attendance.

—The Detroit Evening News records the fact that snow fell in Jackson Monday. Has anybody in that frigid portion of Michigan known as the Grand Traverse region seen any snow yet? The Jackson report says the flakes were of the size, and continued to fall for fifteen minutes. Holy Moses! Now let some croaker arise and say something about the severe Northern Michigan climate.

—The Detroit Tribune is dead. It is said to have never paid expenses since James E. Scripps became its owner and made it the personal organ, in 1901, and it finally petered out and quit last week Wednesday. Its subscription list has been joined to the Detroit Evening News. Also owned mainly by Mr. Scripps, the name of the latter has been changed to the Detroit News, which will issue both morning and evening editions.

—Saturday, during the severe northeast gale, the steamship Manitou in mooring is landing at her new swung her stern around and squashed the stanchions Crozier and Gordon, damaging their upper works considerably. The Manitou proceeded to Mackinaw, but the sea was so big that it was found that she could not land. Both anchors were dropped, but the boat dragged so rapidly that Capt. McIntyre headed her for a lee on the Lake Huron side of the straits. In the passage a "rifled wave" struck the ship, coming in the gangways, and filling the flues. The passenger was thrown against the side with such violence as to break his arm. Another passenger was injured. The ship, which was due at the Island in the evening, did not reach there until five o'clock Sunday morning.

—In spite of the standing joke about the weather bureau still are saved. At the time of the Mississippi flood of 1897 $18,000,000 worth of free stock and other valuable property were saved as a result of warning issued a week ahead. Signals displayed for a single hurricane have detained in port vessels valued, with their cargoes, at $30,000,000. The West Indian disaster, constituted in 1898, informed and warned as soon as they began, the course of the hurricane that caused the terrible flood was disarmed for a week before it struck our shores. Yet Congress looks slowly. Eighty five per cent of the forecasts now come true, and by the end of next year free delivery to 35,000,000 farmers' cards were distributed last year to farmers, many of whom could not have had them five years ago.

—Mike McGuire, of St. James is here today.

—Geo. Watt and wife of Carson City, are here for a week visiting relatives and friends.

—The run of the stone is being placed at the east end of Clifton street, and the great patent regulator and tether will soon be placed in consideration for the final transfer.

—Pens are coming in freely at the Cerry warehouse, and Supt. Conlin is paying out $1,000 per day. The steamer Beaver is bringing big loads now from St. James and Cross village.

—Supt. Mentlendick has the contract to construct his hotel line for the Beaver Island cable, and by subscription night the official at the weather bureau office will be able to talk to the Island on the 15th, time the water works. A telephone will also be added to the circuit for use at the residence of the chief operator on Main street. Without doubt we shall be able to talk to Beaver Island by next Thursday morning.

—The fact that last summer Manitou is compelled to make an extra trip in order to accommodate the many passengers they have brought into the resort region from Chicago to another indication of the magnificent season that is now drawing to a close. The last trip was made Friday for Sept 10, but an extra will be made in this section on the 12th. Accommodations are already booked for the full capacity of this water palace but those who have not secured them may do so for the extra trip.

—We are in receipt of information from the State Agricultural Society that the new grounds and buildings in Detroit will be ready for the State Fair, Sept. 11 to 16. It may be recalled that the Michigan building from the St. Louis World's Fair was moved to Detroit. This is already refuted. The race track is a new mile course. There will be in addition to exceptionally and enhanced exhibits of every state product, entertainment in the way of races the fall of Port Arthur, by Italian fireworks, each evening; ascension by Knabenshue's airship, etc. The Woodward Avenue electric cars run to the grounds. Attend the state fair in beautiful Detroit and you will not regret the time spent.

—Instructions have been sent out from the postmaster general to resort to a late order of the postoffice department concerning lost mail, in which the following language is used: "No loss can be assigned to the use of any individual, family, firm, corporation or public official until rent has been paid in advance for one quarter or the unexpired portion of a quarter. It has rentors do not renew their rights to return by mail, and by the payment of rent before the 15th of January, April, July or Oct., you may close their boxes against them, place their mail in the general delivery and rent boxes formerly used by them. An exception to this rule will be permitted: Any rentors who shall comply with this order and save their service immediate and the postmaster improvement. If you desire to retain your box have the courage to inform the postmaster and pay up.

—By reference to the game law published in this issue, it will be seen that you must not fill shotgun during September or October. Just So Mr. It is no joke. It is law, subsection 1, sec. Write you sit on your porch in the shades of evening and a beautiful bird, a gem, not white animal, crosses the lawn in the direction of the farm or wood shed, leaving behind it an atmosphere rent in surpassing fragrance, you see the perfumed of the bird. The scented beautiful animal may focus its unknowing presence under your back kitchen door and devote the instance of the night to soul harrowing carnal exercise, the result that you be called to the attention of the law? Kill it and there will be doings in Bill Gulian' court. Take your medicine like a good law abiding citizen. The skunk must be protected. We heard none of 'em.

Circuit Court.

A regular term of the Circuit court begins next Monday morning, Sept. 11th, with five criminal cases in the calendar as follows.

The People vs. Ed. Williams, robbery; The People vs. James Harbrill, forgery; The People vs. Frank E. Crane, et al adultery; The People vs. B. J. Duffy, burglary.

There are seven civil cases and two divorce cases in the calendar.

STATE GAME LAWS.

In Correction of an Erroneous Synopsis Heretofore Presented.

In correction of an erroneous synopsis of the game laws, as amended by legislature at its recent session, presented in many of the state newspapers, the game and fish warden has furnished the following official extract.

Birds—Open season from November 10 to November 30, inclusive.

Unlawful to kill without having prepared license. Resident hunter's license, $1.50, non-resident hunter's license, $25.

Unlawful for any person to kill more than two.

Unlawful to kill in red coat or fawn in school coat.

Unlawful to pursue, run or capture any deer while it is in the water.

Unlawful to use dogs in hunting deer.

Penalty for negligent or careless shooting and killing or wounding while in the pursuit of game, of any human being, one thousand dollars or six months in jail for ten years.

From the game department has also come the suggestion that it is the intention of the warden and deputies throughout the state to rigidly enforce the laws to their entirety and to inflict open prosecution against all violators.

Resignation of Dr. Hyslop.

Rev. Dr. Hyslop, the popular pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church, tender his resignation last Sunday. Although the officials of the church had received certain preliminary warnings, the congregation and public at large were taken by surprise when the reverend gentleman read his resignation from the pulpit.

Dr. Hyslop was tendered several very flattering inducements the past year, one of which was from the church in St. Johns, which the Doctor has about decided to accept. He will go there about October 1st.

The writer of this has often said that Charlevoix could not always possess Dr. Hyslop. The well rounded Christian character and consciousness attainments of men like Dr. Hyslop must, sooner or later, be recognized by humanity. A clergyman of his quality, in a town like Charlevoix, preaches, at times, to others than the benighted heathen of Charlevoix. This is the rub. It is as hard for Charlevoix to keep a good preacher as it is to get rid of a poor one.

Dr. Hyslop has good reasons for making the change—reasons that in no way reflect on Charlevoix or the church. First of all, the climate does not agree with Mrs. Hyslop. Secondly—as Dr. Hyslop would say, Charlevoix is too far from the centre of the field of work into which his widely recognized usefulness has drawn him—church extension. Dr. Hyslop is recognized throughout the State as a power in this work, and he feels it his duty to put himself in closer touch with it.

Charlevoix will sincerely regret the loss of Dr. Hyslop.

The Bellaire Power Matter.

Mr. Richard, of Bellaire, was with the council last night.

The Bellaire Electric Power Co. project has reached that stage of development where financiers become. The Union Trust Co., of Detroit, has long financed the company, and the work of construction at Bellaire will now rapidly proceed.

It means much to Charlevoix. By June 1st, 1906 we shall have almost unlimited electric current—always of sufficient volume to meet demands for light, and in addition to this day service is involved, which will give native power to many industries to their profit and convenience.

The Schools.

The Charlevoix public schools opened Tuesday morning with a satisfactory attendance and everything is moving smoothly.

The new superintendent Mr. Woodley, has already demonstrated the fact that he has both executive ability and brains and the school year looks bright.

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

Enter on the false party of amusement into herself a whole week for their pay, she thought, merely think of a giant black tree, upon which grew a giant black tree, upon which grew a giant black tree, upon which grew

DIDN'T TOUCH THEM

"FASHION NOTES FOR MEN" WAS A FAILURE.

The Women, After Momentary Digression, Calmly Went on With the Discussion of Various Appropriate Wearing Apparel.

After Mrs. Ponsonby had talked about dressmakers and dressmaking until Mr. Ponsonby was weary and when Mrs. Dallington had for more than two solid hours discussed gowns, hats, wraps, corsets and flounces she finished the week from her chair and turning to Dallington, asked.

"By the way, Fred, where did you buy your shirts?"

"I always get them at Crombie's."

"Do you like his style?" I don't. Maggie makes the awkward shirts I wear. Were you the last button over the hole, and he seems to have a way of putting in sleeves like in the sanitarium."

"Oh, I shall have to go to him when I need shirts again. Where do you get your collars?"

"Maggie always makes them. I wouldn't think of going to any one else. How could she use my fits that way? It's just as sweet as it can be."

"Yes, but I'm pretty." The man knew. I bought it ready made. I very seldom do such a thing, but it happened to pass my way and I couldn't resist it. Maggie makes that coat your wearing?"

"Yes. How do you like it? The vest I think it fits me but right across the shoulders."

"It's perfect. I never saw anything sweeter. You ought to wear it all the time. It's really very becoming to you. What a changing the tie have. Where do you get your ties?"

"Oh, I usually think of getting a tie whenever I'm in Morgenthaler's. I too like those socks I'm wearing."

"Yes, so do I. They are pretty. I bought some new ones last week but I like yours better than any of mine. I'm going to have a new pair of trousers cut and fear I'm about as I can get around to it. Where do you think would be a good style for me to put? Would you have them inlaid at the knees?"

"No, I rather think that way. I think I would have them turned at the ends and cut full at the ribbon with rounded edged seams. Why, if you like them gathered at the top."

"Arthur," exclaimed Mrs. Ponsonby, "have you suddenly gone crazy?"

"Fred Dallington," the gentleman's wife demanded, "what in hell is the matter with you?"

The men shook their heads and decided that they had gone mad. When facing composure Mrs. Dallington now she intended to have her Indian hand-made moccasins.

"I think," said Mrs. Dallington, "I will have it stained both in front and in back. Do you remember that design of mine?"

The men were the foolish one that Mrs. Dallington made for you."

Detached and disgusted the two men in fresh collars and sat back and were silent.—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

Where Reciprocity is Away.

Little trouble need be anticipated in discussing an reciprocity has never given a single concession and who are responsible for its tariff proposes. Reciprocity and tariff reduction go hand hand; when they affect some one else. When applied to the United States reciprocity is a dead letter.—Detroit Free Press.

For Americans Only.

The Wathlerian Trust repeals the absurd statement that "the Dingley tariff was avowedly an act of commercial war which was to be composed by reciprocal treaties." The act referred to was a well considered revenue measure designed to provide funds for the support of the government and to protect American industry in auditing had these two purposes only in view and did not dream of any "bonfiction" which would undo their work. When they provided for and came to reciprocity be other and than that which McKinley referred to in his first inaugural address. It was the Dingley act that gave us the Dingley act. If the Dingley act had been such a measure as the Post describes the free traders would have given it little additional support; that they did not do so, but opposed it tooth and nail, proves that it is a positively protective tariff act designed to help American labor and framed for the purpose of entitling Republican to boast about the industries of the United States.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Supposition.

Supposing that France granted the United States a tariff concession of 50 per cent on machinery, and that in turn the United States granted France a tariff concession of 50 per cent on silk, and supposing that the volume of trade under this reciprocal arrangement is equal, what would be the effect? Well, probably, it would reveal the export of our machinery to France and would increase the import of silk from France. Result: We are trading off American silk and American wages in that industry for the benefit of American machinery and American wages in that industry and also for the benefit of a foreign industry. Hence, how is it possible to escape the conclusion that reciprocity becomes the sacrifice of one American industry for another?

GROWING IN WEALTH

FIGURES SHOW PROSPERITY OF THE SOUTH.

Comparison of Conditions Prevailing Now and Those of 1860 Shows a Really Marvelous Advance in All Lines of Business Endeavor.

The Southern Farm Magazine has collected some statistics about the South that ought to prove interesting to make a comparison between conditions in the eastern United States in 1860 just before the war, and conditions in the south in 1904.

The entire population of the United States in 1860 was 31,443,321, while the population of the South in 1904 was 15,000,000, and this does not count colored people or Indians.

In 1860 the bank capacity of the United States were $1,000,000,000 while in 1904 the capacity of the South alone was $1,000,000,000 or three times as much.

In 1860 the annual exchange of the United States were $4,000,000,000 while in 1904 the exchange of the South was $2,000,000,000.

In 1860 the pig iron in less of the world's record Pittsburg was 931,000 while in 1904 the iron of the South was 2,947,000.

In 1860 the United States owned 31,000,000 miles of road, in 1904 the South owned 31,000,000 miles.

In 1860 1,000,000 bales of cotton were produced in this country, while in 1904 the South produced 10,000,000 bales, more than ten times as much.

In 1860 the value of cotton was produced in the United States $191,000,000 while in 1904 the South produced $1,000,000,000 worth of cotton, more than five times as much.

In 1860 the United States owned 31,000,000 of cattle, in 1904 the South alone owned 31,000,000 head of cattle.

In 1860 the United States had 4,000,000 enrolled scholars in look the South had 4,000,000 in 1904.

In 1860 the value of all the farms from the United States and Canada were $1,000,000,000 while in 1904 the farms from the South were $1,000,000,000.

In 1860 the property value of the United States was estimated at $16,000,000,000 and in 1904 the value of the South was estimated at $16,000,000,000.

These figures show that to-day the South has attained to large a population as the entire country had before the war begins that it has almost as large a valuation, and that it has more railroads, more exports, more million spindles and in a general way is in richer in natural resources than the country as it was and that than was the entire country in 1860.

No one who looks at these figures can fail to see that the future of the South. At no distant day it is bound to be the predominant force in the country's commerce.

An Effective Sample.

A clergyman who was fond of a "smart" sermon used to preface the sermon about sobriety in preaching the sermon to show what happens when a person elevated a bottle with him. He had what looking at a corpulent, red faced publican in front of his congregation, he said down at the same table and with the bottle in front of him, he addressed the publican to pass the bottle. The publican, who enjoyed the joke, replied, "Not so much as that, sir, I think, since that the satisfaction of seeing the clergyman take the bottle is enough for me." "Well, then, said the latter, "take you a glass."

"Thank you, said the publican, "but you are a person."

"Why, my friend, I am," replied the minister.

"I suppose you preach?" asked the Yankee.

"Yes, sir I preach twice a week," said the minister.

"Do you ever preach about hell fire?" inquired the Yankee.

"Yes, I sometimes consider it my duty to remind my congregation of the terrors of the lake that burns and brimstone."

"I thought so," replied the Yankee. "But you and the first of your class I ever met who warned sinners."—Tatler.

An Epigram.

During a discussion of Oscar Wilde's witticisms and epigrams, in the Profession, an orator said:

"I like the habit of quoting Wilde's epigrams on the occasion when of his amusing memory. The importance of these lies in the fact that they always do not suggest a Wilde epigram. Wilde's epigrams are the sugar at the Carlisle and darkness suggest the subject of conversation."

To Wilde, as the foremost living epigrammatist, the fate of defining an epigram was assigned.

"The epigram is a minnow, smiled slightly, and turn to the law and pleasant and wise," he said.

"All epigrams is a commonplace marked by sense of the only clever people can tell what it means."

Just Wanted to Touch Them.

On lower Walnut street yesterday morning a woman dressed with the hideous waterproofs was about to move away when a small, inky hued gickaninny came running up.

"Say, mistah," he called to the driver, "lemme ride wif you?"

"Where do you want to go?" asked the driver.

"Dese neck co difficuse," said the little negro, making a wry face at the mention of the name of the place to which them mokes."—Kansas City Star.

Demand for Hay's Novel.

Since the death of Secretary Hay the renewal of the old controversy as to the authorship of "The Bread-winners" now generally conceded to have been his work, has caused a great demand for the famous novel in the public libraries of the country. The demand is probably equal to that which greeted the first appearance of the book 19 or more years ago.

Monotoned to His Enjoyment.

"Tommy, for the man's sake, what have you been for the last two hours?"

"Been hearin a novel thru with an automobile."

"But you can't mean to say you've been asleep all this time?"

"Yaas, I mean dat, an' I believe I'm a horse!" at a bellow that was truly in imitation of a hundred machines go.—Chicago Tribune.

Kidney Diseases Worst of All.

How to Cure These Dangerous and Fatal Maladies.

No one can afford to let a kidney disease continue one moment longer than absolutely necessary. Bright's disease is invariably true of kidney disease and almost of all of them all. The troublesome manner in which these maladies manifest, it is because kidneys established before the disease is discovered.

Dr. Kinsella's Kidney Pills have proved a great boon to such sufferers. Mr. Jas. Hopkins, Kidney and Bladder Specialist, Toronto, says: "Will a remedy be worthy of a very high recommendation, I find one lemon, so far as I know, I ordered two bottles of you by express, and am glad to say that I am well satisfied with the results."

Sold by druggists, or E. Rock, Cleveland, O., Sole Agent for Kidney and Bladder Diseases. Remember, to prevent mistakes, that Dr. Kinsella's Kidney and Bladder Pills are sold in yellow boxes, price 50 cents, and are not to be confounded with other remedies.

LEAVE TWO CHILDREN

BOY AND BABE ABANDONED IN ALBANY HOTEL.

Parents Disappear and Are Suspected of Having Carried Out Suicide Agreement; Mother Leaves Account of Having Attempted to Destroy Herself.

Circumstances apparently inexplicable are linked to three unknowns who disappeared at 7 o'clock last night at a moonlighting party in the Ninth Ward in Albany N. Y. The people who caused the alarm are a Jane Doe and two of her Doe relatives. When, and how, they came to Albany is a mystery. The girl is about 30 years old, and is well dressed. The boy, a lad of about 12, is a cripple, and is dressed in a manner that would lead him to be taken for a well-to-do boy.

The party, who gave her name as Mrs. Mary Ann Doe, and her children, Jane and Jack, arrived at the Ten Eyck hotel late in the afternoon. They had with them a suitcase, which they left in the hotel. They also left a boy's hat and cap in the hotel. The children were crying when their mother left them. She said she was going to see a friend who was sick, and would be back in a few minutes. She left the hotel, and the children waited for her return. When she did not return they became frightened and began to cry. The hotel people then took them to the police station, where they were cared for by Matron Mary Wilkins. The children said their mother had told them she was going to the Ten Eyck hotel, and they had come there in a carriage. They could not give the name of the place where their mother said she was going to live, but said it was in the Ninth Ward.

The woman left a letter addressed to her husband, which was found in her room at the hotel. In it she said she had attempted to destroy herself by taking poison, but had changed her mind and had decided to carry out the agreement they had made to commit suicide together. She said she had left her husband a note telling him where to find her body. She said she had left her children in a place where they would be well cared for. She said she had left her husband because he had been cruel to her for years. She said she had left her husband because he had been cruel to her for years. She said she had left her husband because he had been cruel to her for years

The Pine Lake and the Cable.

Harry Nicholls received a letter from the Captain of the steamer Pine Lake yesterday stating that the boat would leave Buffalo Friday morning with the Beaver Island cable, and, weather permitting, will arrive here next Monday.

Allowing two days to prepare the tackle for laying it looks as if the cable would be in working order the last of next week.

Girl Was Embarrassed.

Out in Wenger Iowa a girl who recently took up the fad of consuming cigarettes. From each of her young men friends who worked them she would beg a "coffin nail" and put it in a small box she kept on her dresser. One night the proprietor called. The girls father was smoking his pipe.

"You smoke, don't you?" he asked of the minister. The latter replied in the affirmative.

"I thought so, replied the girls father. "The worst I haven't any cigars to offer you. I have another pipe here—"

It was at this point that the girl's little brother chirped in with his falsetto coo.

"Dat's he interrupted. "Sis has got a box of cigarettes somewhere in her room. Shall I get 'em for you?"

Although badly confused the girl managed to explain. She has stopped collecting cigarettes.—Kansas City Times.

Shocking Confession.

Bennett in a New Haven man who has been chief Hawk (the father of a large family) in the organization of the Improved Order of Red Men, issuing the bills named Prosper, and last year four of the children were sent there for the summer.

One day Benedict and his wife entertained at dinner a new acquaintance, Prof. B. The professor is a bachelor, and like many scholarly men, rather fit as ease in society.

When a fine looking family of children you have," he began when an admiring glance at the four youngsters.

"Yes, indeed," replied Benedict proudly, "and we have lost more in Prosper."

The professor finished his asparagus—I apologize.

The Stage American.

Max Beerbohm thinks it is time to do away with the ridiculous stock figure that has for many years done duty on the English stage for American man—always blatant, always cocksure, always resourceful, always ready with dreadful exclamations in the manner of Max Adeler. Thirty years ago, before the development of stagecraft, the caricature was natural enough. The English playwrights should be excused, with this figure the consciousness which London, throughout every minute is overpowered with that American, it certainly does seem strange that our playwrights can give us nothing better than this one old tattered simulacrum.

Record Mississippi Flood.

There exists a pretty well authenticated tradition that in the year 1844 the Mississippi reached even a higher point than in 1881. The tradition is based upon a story of American Fur Trading company employees who were in historic times in the section, have printed etc. where diff would indeed in the 1844 flood at points considerably higher than the 1881 flood. There is also an old high water mark at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., indicating the height of the 1844 flood, which is much higher than the mark indicating the 1881 flood.

Clerk Friend of Millionaires.

A conspicuous association of Tom Scott, the railroad king, and Andrew Carnegie, the ironmaster, is at present a clerk in the pension office at Washington. His name is J. Howard Lawrence. He was a Union soldier and a clerk in the office of President Monroe's administration, and the whole portion of his life has been spent in the service of the government.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The Northwestern Michigan Odd Fellows Association will hold its next session at Holland on September 26 and 27. This time is fixed as it was impossible to secure the attendance of the Grand Master at an earlier date. A session of the Grand Lodge and a period of instruction in both subordinate and Rebekah degrees will be held.

The William Lake sawmill cut its last log Saturday and is shut down until another season's supply of logs is in. The output this season is enormous. The lumber is loaded on a train to be put up where it is shipped to Chicago markets. The mill has been a source of considerable interest to those who are not familiar with the lumbering industry and has often been visited by the tourists.

Rehearse Independence Rev. J. L. Hoffman, the Ellsworth pastor, left yesterday for a two months visit in England on a vacation. The gentleman, who is an athlete and trainer, has introduced to his Maddock of East Jordan one of his pupils by the name of Wheatside, and the famous football player and coach expects to take the young man back to salt Lake City to represent the University of Utah, we are told.

East Jordan Herald. The ownership of the City Hotel, Harmon Sieve has changed this week. George Uttle selling his interest to his brother, Harry S., who is on his side owner. W. J. Smith, who has been connected with the store for some time, will have complete management of it. George has accepted a position with the Benjamin Young Harness Co. of Milwaukee, as traveling salesman at a good salary and leaves to take up the work this coming week.

Petoskey News. Chas E. Kirkland, who died at his home on Lake street Thursday morning of apoplexy, was born at Williamston, Mich., Jan. 17, 1852. He grew to manhood in that place and at the age of 22 married Miss Mary Patterson. His work on the Pere Marquette railroad took him from town to town, living in Greenville, Grand Ledge, Elmira and Charlevoix. About seven years ago he came to Petoskey where he has been foreman of this section every since. For the past thirty years he has been a faithful and competent employee of the Pere Marquette railroad and it can be said to find a man to fill his position more satisfactorily. In 1880 he married Mary Fuller who survives him. A son and daughter and a step daughter, besides his wife, are left to mourn his departure.

The village of Lewering had an experience with fire last week Wednesday afternoon which looked for a time as if the entire town would be swept by the flames. The fire was first discovered in the archway over the boiler, but before it could be over come the entire mill of the Long-Jellow-Stillman Lumber Company was burned together with the G. F. Tuttle company employes who were in the office. The loss is about $1,000 with no insurance.

Petoskey Independent. A fire alarm was turned in yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock calling the fire department to the Michigan Lime Co's extensive wood-plant near Bonsdale. A spark from an engine must no doubt started the blaze, which was extinguished, without the aid of the firemen, by the employes of the company. About 5 o'clock that night another alarm was turned in and this time there was certainly a need for the services of both companies of our department as well as help from Harbor Springs. A spark from the P. M. train, which leaves Bay View at 6:45, no doubt started this blaze as it originated some distance away from the first one. Soon the whole area north of the old mill, which now covers their coopersage stock, was aflame and the strong wind made it almost impossible for the firemen to do anything but fight from the rear of the fire. There are about 1,000 cords of wood piled in this vicinity, of which about 1,000 cords were burned, entailing a loss of $1,000 which is fully covered by insurance placed with Wachtel & Galster only about two weeks ago. It is estimated that nearly 5,000 people viewed the conflagration which lighted up the bay and country for a long distance. Many people from around the bay came over while many more watched it from their homes. They say the reflection of the fire on the bay and sky was most beautiful. For awhile it looked as if Recreation Park and all the rest of the buildings in the vicinity would go, but through the efforts of the firemen it was confined to a comparatively small area and finally put out about 4:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

The General Gillespie.

The big government sand sucking dredge, the Gen. Gillespie, arrived here Monday evening, and Tuesday morning began sucking sand.

The Gillespie is, first of all, a big twin-screw steamer. To describe her dredging features would be difficult. From either side, lying parallel with her keel, are 20 inch pipes, the "after end" of which is lowered to the bottom. Then centrifugal pumps suck the sand into large pockets—one forward and one aft. These pockets are "dumped" in deep water.

The dredging is done as the boat proceeds slowly down stream. The Gillespie can dredge 6000 yards, in a working day, which is more than three times the capacity of any old style dredge. The orders are to dig 21 feet deep from the bridge to Lake Michigan.

Col. Adams, of the Grand Rapids engineers' office, accompanied the dredge here, but left here Tuesday morning by rail. He stated to the Sentinel that he should at once provide for temporary protection of the channel at the big sand bank on the north side of the channel. It is understood that contractor Beatrow who is at Petoskey will be employed to construct a tip rap of stone along that line of the channel. A contract has been let to build a revetment there next year.

Home For Methodist Ministers.

McVin T. Clark, head of the Clark-Jewell-Wyle company, the Clark Kitka Weaver company, and many other local enterprises of magnitude, has decided the old Clark homestead in Grand Rapids to the Western Michigan Methodist conference, to be used as a Clark Memorial Home for worn out ministers. The place is valued at $3,000.

Mr Clark is not a Methodist, but met many ministers of this denomination at his boyhood home in Canada, and has great respect for their persistency and faithfulness in carrying on their work especially in the pioneer days. He would especially like to see the war losses of the church well cared for during their declining days.

The property included in the gift consists of a 2 story house, barn, and 20 acres of land. At home of this sort is especially needed by the denomination, and last year a movement was inaugurated to establish a home for Methodist old people, and a committee for this purpose will report at the conference this week at Charlotte.

Details in the management of the home will be made at the conference. There are about 30 superannuated ministers on the roles and 65 widows.

THE CABLE LAID.

Telephone Communication a Great Boon to a Long Isolated Community.

Beaver Island, one of the most interesting and historic spots on the map of Michigan, once a kingdom in Mormondom, now a thrifty and promising portion of Charlevoix county, is its chief business center the leading fish producing point on the great lakes—its seas covered by well tilled farms, and its forests loading ships for the lumber markets, good old Beaver Island is now linked to the main land by electricity.

The steamer Pine Lake, with 100 tons of coal in her hold and 200 tons of cable on her deck, left Buffalo at eight o'clock Friday night.

The Pine Lake arrived from Buffalo at seven o'clock Monday night. Contractor Reed arrived by train the same evening. At five o'clock Tuesday morning Chief Robinson and Mr. Reed boarded the steamer. At 5:30 the Pine Lake went through the bridge and out into the lake. At the pier mid the tug Taylor took a line from the steamer, which at once hooked so close to the channel bank as possible, and at eight o'clock the shore end of the cable was landed made fast to the pole, and Superintendent Martindale connected the cable with the land wires, which had already been strung to the weather bureau station up town.

On board the Pine Lake Chief Robinson had a telephone connected up with the Beaver Island end of the cable, and at 8:45 the Charlevoix station was called up, and progress reported. At 8:30 Mr. Robinson again rung up and reported that the tug had just been cast off. The Pine Lake was then a little more than a mile out, and everything running smoothly. The first homers came to Miss Gussie Nime, the Western Union operator, who first answered the call, and whose voice first passed through the cable from this end.

Frequent communication was had during the day and the cable was safely landed in Beaver Harbor in the evening.

The Pine Lake reached Beaver harb.' and landed the cable at about six o'clock p. m. Connections were at once made, and Superintendent Robinson got in his "hello" to the chief operator here. Then the first message to go from shore was sent from here by Chief operator, W. A. Smith. It was a message to Superintendent Gallagher, congratulating the people of the Island on being connected by wire with the main land. Then back under the blue waters came a message addressed to Willis L. Moore, chief of the Weather Bureau, Washington, extending the greetings, thanks and congratulations of the people of Beaver Island. Then the Charlevoix-Beaver Island cable was in commission. Shore connections are not yet perfect, but a day or two will put everything in first-class shape.

The map printed herewith shows the course of the cable. The distance is a little more than thirty-one miles, just the Pine Lake had thirty-seven miles of cable on her deck.

The history of the Beaver Island cable is briefly written. Those interested went after it two years ago and got it,—and that is all there is of it. The bill introduced in the last congress by Mr. Darragh for an appropriation of $20,000 was not the bill which gave us the cable, to be historically correct. On this bill a favorable report was secured by Mr. Darragh, but it had yet to be passed by both houses. Mr. Darragh did grand work for the measure and if any man in congress could have passed the bill, he could.

But at this point—the Darragh bill was killed, because a better and surer way was discovered to secure the cable. Of course the original government was to secure a cable for weather bureau purposes. This required that the weather bureau should be made to see the importance of the project. This was done, and the effort was so successful that the bureau not only endorsed the cable, but adopted it and put a $25,000 item in the general agricultural department bill for that purpose. When the weather bureau was induced to include the Beaver Island cable in the general bill, success was certain.

Today we have the cable.

We doubt if the people of Beaver Island begin to realize the great benefit this cable will be to them. It not only puts them in touch by telephone with the main land, but it gives them the benefit of weather bureau forecasts and storm warnings. Storm flags and lights will be displayed more than two hundred feet above the level of the lake. Business interests, farming, lumbering and fishing interests are placed in direct electric connection with the Western Union Telegraph lines, and hence with the entire business world. Resort interest there will be greatly benefited. The cable will stimulate the building of cottages and the establishment of resort colonies.

Beaver Island has one of the finest and safest harbors on the great lakes and some harbors on the great lakes are in the power of its men in the party or out of it. Correspondingly the upper peninsula is a very important portion of the State. We believe that section will claim representation, and we believe that Chase S. Osborn will be its choice for U. S. Senator to succeed Senator Alger.

The Sentinel earnestly advocates the election of Chase S. Osborn to the Senate.

He endeavored to beat out, but failing to weat about, in the afternoon. The increasing northwest gale drove him high and dry. The rig falling crack took the two men off the boat.

—Very much sympathy is felt in this community for Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Fleischer, of Denver, in the loss of their youngest child, aged two and a half years. The death occurred at the home of Dr. Hall, and was a brilliant little boy. The funeral was from the house on Tuesday afternoon.

The General Gillespie and Its Work.

The big sand sucker Gen. Gillespie completes her work here this week and proceeds to Frankfort. She leaves a channel 18 feet in depth from Round Lake to Lake Michigan. The Gillespie was brought to the lakes by the U. S. engineer department for work on the harbors between Michigan City and Cheboygan. In fact she was built in Baltimore for this special work and she cost about $200,000.

When the purpose of the government in building the Gillespie became known, there was a very vigorous howl went up from the Great Lakes dredge trust. Congress was appealed to by the syndicate to prevent her coming but she is here, and the harbors of this shore are the gainers of many thousands of dollars that heretofore have gone into the coffers of the contractors.

First of all, the Gillespie has four times the capacity of any great lake dredge, and, it is estimated can excavate at about one-third the cost per cubic yard of what the ordinary dipper dredge does the work. This means on a basis of the actual cost. With the contract system, there is added to the cost a large profit to the contractor.

Taking Charlevoix harbor as an example, the actual cost of the Gillespie work is assessed, pro rata, against the available funds credited to this harbor. This makes it clear that Charlevoix harbor is mortgaged for at least fifty per cent.

It is well known that the dredge people propose to continue their efforts at Washington to get rid of the Gillespie. It is also well known that the dredge people have had a supporter following up the Gillespie. Capt. French was retained of him, and given street orders not to permit anyone to come aboard who was not properly vouched for. The "spotter" was known to many here this week.

LOUIS SCHANZE.

Chase Osborn For Senator

There is an unwritten law in Michigan which draws an invisible line from the straits south, dividing the state into two "territorial districts." At this time, Joe Burrows represents one and R. A. Alger the other. At Washington these gentlemen have concurrent jurisdiction in all matters that affect Michigan as a whole. Only in the realm of federal appointments is there any division of the senatorial function.

Senator Alger's term will end with the life of this congress, and will not be a candidate for re-election. Town about the Detroit and Saginaw regions several candidates are being groomed for the race, and a most active campaign will soon be on.

We have never set heard to which particular "territorial district" the upper peninsula belongs—but we assume that it may be assigned to either when an emergency like the present arises. The upper peninsula has a member who is its broadest public asset and is belong to Michigan. That man is Chase S. Osborn, of Sault Ste Marie. We have reference to more than once to wise referred to the sterling qualities of Mr. Osborn, in our opinion, based upon a similar what intimate acquaintance, and a knowledge of his public career. Chase S. Osborn is one of the most commanding figures within the boundaries of Michigan. Personal presence, upright appearance and general, he is every inch a man.

Physically he is a giant. No man in Michigan has a better or more honorable record. In about every fight he has been in the party or out of it, he emphatically the upper peninsula is a very important portion of the State. We believe that section will claim representation, and we believe that Chase S. Osborn will be its choice for U. S. Senator to succeed Senator Alger.

The Sentinel earnestly advocates the election of Chase S. Osborn to the Senate.

STARVES UNDER BARN FLOOR

From Dead Cows in Missouri Man After Many Weeks.

Sugar Mount (Mo.) dispatch: A prominent farmer who has been missing from his home for some months was found dead Friday last. He was found under a barn floor in the rear of his house, and it is thought he had been there since the last week in March. It is supposed he died from exposure and starvation. While no one knows why he was there, it is thought he had fallen through the floor and could not get out. Mr. Long was a man of means and was well known in this county. He was a bachelor and lived alone. He was about 60 years of age.

HENDERSON'S MIND FAILS.

Former Speaker Said to Be in a Pitiable Condition.

In his signature on a warranty deed transferring property at Waterloo, Iowa, to J. W. Kepple of that city the physical and mental condition of Speaker Speaker Henderson is made more manifest than heretofore and proves conclusively that Mr. Henderson is rapidly failing. The signature contains a lot of perhaps but his friends fear that the end is near for the former speaker. The last time Mr. Henderson was in Dubuque where and how long was a matter which he did not know. He said he was not sick, but he looked as if he was. He said he was on his way to Waterloo to see his brother, who is reported to be suffering from paralysis, but he could not tell how long he had been on the road. From these and other matters which he let fall it is believed that the Henderson is a pitiable condition.

ARMED MANIAC AT LARGE.

Lunatic Prays on All the Streets and Assaults Turkish Consulate.

Peter Paris, a middle aged man, raging and tearing his way through the streets of Washington, was finally subdued and taken to the police station. He was armed with a pistol and a knife, which he had secured from a hardware store. He made his way to the Turkish consulate, but on being refused admittance he started on a career of destruction, smashing everything in his path. He was finally subdued by a number of citizens and taken to the police station. Paris is a native of Turkey and has been in this country about two years. He is a graduate of a Turkish college and has been employed in the Turkish consulate. He is a member of the Turkish nobility and is related to the family of the Sultan. He is a nephew of Ali Pasha, who was killed in the late war between the Turks and Russians.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE

TOTAL OF $2,635,970,333 FOR THE LAST FISCAL YEAR.

Tremendous Increase in the Volume of Our Dealings with the Rest of the World During the Past Eight Years of Uninterrupted Tariff Protection.

The foreign commerce of the United States has known no rapidly in the past year that the end seems have come in one of the memorable years of its rise of progress and terror thereafter. Now they say the Cassandras of this country to discourse their sentiment, and to make speeches against the law moves than this annual change which they are pleased to call "unprecedented." The free traders will never be satisfied until the wage schedule of this country is as low as it is in European nations, and some of them even intimate that they should be as soon as the continental countries, because then the wonderful results of our tariff would be still more striking. The free traders in the tariff lands more than they do you, and therefore make the most of the fact that our imports are larger than ever before.

This greatest year for traffic ever known does not satisfy the free-trade friends, and they go so far as to say that it is a shame that the trade has not grown more than it has in the past ten years. They claim that the Republican protective tariff system has caused both the country back in the development of commerce, and show are the figures to which they appeal, as furnished by the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury for the fiscal year, which includes the period since the Dingley or present tariff law came into the statute book:

	Exports	Imports	Excess of Exports
1897	$1,050,968,517	$764,730,816	$286,237,701
1898	1,231,482,030	616,041,807	615,440,223
1899	1,250,436,557	697,148,274	553,288,283
1900	1,394,483,082	849,941,401	544,541,681
1901	1,487,764,618	823,189,680	664,574,938
1902	1,381,157,517	903,320,032	477,837,485
1903	1,420,141,466	1,025,827,915	394,313,551
1904	1,460,827,785	1,025,290,192	435,537,593
1905	1,518,561,196	1,117,376,435	401,184,761
1906	1,710,439,641	1,226,744,316	483,695,325

These figures show that in the Democratic tariff year of 1897, when Grover Cleveland and make the price of the clover patch, the total foreign trade of the United States was $1,050,968,517 and that in the last year it has risen from the total foreign trade of $2,635,970,333, an increase of more than 150 per cent. No other country in the world can make such a showing for now business and not business revived after a depression so severe as any other country, or rather, for recovery. The increase of traffic in the last year was 10 per cent for the last year or in the last Democratic year, and the figures are still more when considered in the true light of protection, for they show that the balance of trade in favor of American producers, capitalists and wage earners was increased by 75 per cent, as shown by the exports, and the increase in imports was only 47 per cent.

There never was in the world a poor country whose exports exceeded its imports. Nothing but the backwardness of the rest of the world prevents us from making such a country poor. The good people who say that the fact that it costs our pilgrim in the United States and become an enormous tariff tariff are the free traders, who claim that the heavy balance of trade should leave all the gold here. They forget that there is a great volume of foreign investment in American securities, and that that is what keeps the gold in the old world. But that is beside point, just as the farmers of the West have in the past ten years received the mortgages on their lands by paying money to Eastern banks.

A point in the foreign trade for the last year which shows that the protective tariff has encouraged trade, rather than hindered it is that the largest gain in imports was in dutiable goods, which increased from $401,641,855 in June, 1904, to $426,641,855 this year. Nearly $7,000,000 in one month in dutiable goods from a tariff that the free traders say is heaping out the goods of other countries and making enemies for Americans. The total increase in imports the past year was $126,425,139. That is the way the foreign producers are trying to "Americanize" the world, forsooth. Then, the wool of the earlier which the United States shears them, and they know, in spite of the free traders, the sheep would be no sorb American market without that same protection to the industries and the countries the country with such a record in need of tariff revision or reciprocity program is to pay particular favorite among the foreign nations.—Sunday Telegram.

Dr. Temple's Reply to the Deacon.

If Temple's reply to the deacon, Dr. Temple's answer to a candidate for priest's orders is all evil. Having reason to think the candidate's qualifications, the bishop inquired upon his wording aloud in his chapel a chapter from the Bible.

"I am sorry to say, Mr. Brown, that you read very indistinctly," pronounced the bishop. "You should get lessons in elocution."

"But, my lord, you know the size of our church, one of the largest in the diocese, and yet a person of our congregation sat in the back row of the church and said he could not hear a syllable in every part of it."

"Had she?" was the bishop's dry rejoinder.

Exasperating.

"Horace Greeley was taunted with having the Tribune printed on English paper. He declares not to be so he paid for the over and urged its contributors for the benefit of the house of confusion." Exchange.

Yes, Greeley, thanks to the cold weather of that duty, the London dailies, when one exception, are printed on American paper. Rather Tribune's reason to the Irish Wonder.

Such quotes from protective duties always exasperate a revenue reformer.

LOOKS LIKE A SCARE

GERMANY'S THREAT OF HOSTILE TARIFF DISCRIMINATION.

It is Being Used by Free-Trade Newspapers to Break Down the Own Tariff System by Means of a General System of Reciprocal Treaties.

It is most remarkable that just at the close of a fiscal year that has shown a record breaking foreign trade in both imports and exports, and at a time when the producers are able to meet the demand of our home market, when there is an active market in all parts of the country in all lines of industry, when we are facing unprecedented activity at the height of the usual dull season, it is a remarkable fact that strong newspapers have been insinuating in covert, direct and sinister fashion that the action of a foreign tariff revision (meaning increased protection) is to be the cause of a great panic in this country. The Chicago Tribune, for instance, says: For years, but with sufficient recovery from disappointed, complicated with a hopeful view, until she had her strength and vigor, and became a more worth of her former self. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." F. E. CONSPIRING FOR RECIPROCITY

New York Importing and Foreign Steamship Interests at Work.

Gustav H. Schwab, who as bullets, is said to be the German, or double company, whose trade is threatened by retaliation in case of the German government has notified to the annual chairman of a committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce a letter to the Baltimore Sun, Board of Trade, concerning that body to adopt and support resolutions in favor of "reciprocity treaties with foreign countries." The New York Chamber of Commerce is a commercial body connected by the importing and transportation companies, both of which are from foreign lands. Immense is overcome state interest. The chief of the State Board of Trade is a reciprocity, or another, or "reciprocity." California and can be represented in the state of Nevada. Nevertheless we are informed that upon receipt of this letter it was referred to W. H. Taft, who is a protectionist, or appears to be a protectionist, or at least, a protectionist. As Mr. Taft represents Ohio, and Ohio is a protectionist state, we believe, a protectionist from Ohio is a protectionist. Moreover, he is a protectionist state, and it probably will be a protectionist state. Yet, it appears, a protectionist from Ohio is a protectionist. Wherefore, upon consideration, the letter should be referred to the protectionist.

We should think it would behoove him to inquire to reviews. The Senate is a protectionist for the purpose of being not in business as his land, and is supported by protectionists from his state. Moreover, a few counties which have land to sell, and some are so, which, to the extent, by the Southern Pacific railroad. Mr. Mills is Southern counties to represent the views of that organization, but, in the other more representative constituencies, in Congress, and also they will be very careful about going out of their way to misrepresent their constituents in respect to a subject which is strongly opposed to the protection for which the board was created. California is supposed to take reciprocity in any form, under any pretension, or with any cloak to—San Francisco Chronicle.

VILLAGES ARE TO VANISH.

Three Hamlets to be Obliterated to Increase New York's Water Supply.

Three more of the Ulster valley's most picturesque villages are soon to be obliterated to meet the ever-increasing demand of New York city for water. The hamlets doomed by the Ashokan reservoir are Brown Station, Cross River and a part of the town of Bedford. The houses, churches, stores, shops and even the cemeteries are to be cleared, leaving only the bare land, which will be flooded with water, making two lakes, each about four miles long. The first of the villages to go will be Cross River, where New York began the erection of an immense dam in 1906. $2,000,000 one of the famous merchantmen centers of Westchester county. It was a populous place of 500, with a population three churches, two schools, a cemetery and a half dozen stores and shops.

The place was founded in seventy-three years and was famous generations ago for its iron and cotton factories. The people will be paid for their property at "market value," but this will hardly compensate them for the loss of their homes and the breaking up of their associations.

About 200 persons in the three villages will lose their homes and business, and most of them will be compelled to go out in the world and begin life over among strangers. In the case of the old people the circumstances are pathetic, and tears and sorrow are expected when the time arrives for them to bid farewell to the homes and neighbors they have known since childhood.

The Repeater.

In discussing at a dinner the voting fraud of Philadelphia, J. G. Gossom, the Weaver's counsel, told a story of a repeater.

"He was an Irishman, chap, this repeater," said Judge Gordon. "He had the stolid and unmoved look of an animal.

"When they arrested him he asked what other by in the dock.

"'You are charged,' said the policeman, with having voted twice.

"'I denied, sir, I'm innocent the prisoner. 'That's odd. I remember to be paid for it.'"

Author's Unevenful Life.

Anthony Hope, the British novelist and playwright, was examined for sale law, but says he found in his child was that he failed to make a prize in his profession and not to turn to written in consequence, he declares that in all his life of forty-two years there has not come one incident that is worth telling—he has lived the average life of an English gentleman.

Kidney Diseases Worst of All.

How to Cure Them Dangerous and Fatal Maladies.

No one can afford to let a kidney disease run unchecked—a thousand after be has disease of the kidneys. This is especially true of Bright's disease, the most dangerous and fatal of these ills. The symptoms to watch for are scanty or frequent urination, pain in the back, puffiness of the eyes, dropsy, diabetes, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, gravel, pain in the bladder, irritation, etc. If you have any of these symptoms you should at once use Doan's Kidney Pills, the great kidney remedy. Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists at 50 cents per box.

Mrs. Lucinda Bailey, of Ann Arbor, Mich., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our family for years with good results. We always keep them in the house and we know they are a reliable kidney remedy. I recommend them to my friends and they always express themselves as being benefited by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

(CHAPTER XIII.—continued.)

Henry Lyon said Dolly was to be himself in other and best sections of society, and he was very much pleased at seeing the two sisters. Only one fear he entertained for a little while, lest the sweet innocent sister in the of the whipper-snapper, who seemed but to use her as a plaything, should be too much for her simplicity.

Mrs. Lyon was for very angry with them; you used to hate them!

Nor was Dorothy Vaughan pleased for one minute, but her husband was always right, and he was so pleased at the prospect of a Christmas Day with Dolly, Norah and Arthur Vaughan, that she was quite in a little dream herself about it.

A little dress design dropped from her pocket, and Dolly picked it up, and was all excitement at the idea of a Paris dress, and Dorothy was quite pleased, too, when she found that her sister was not at all the worse for her visit to London.

"Why, Dorothy, I believe you have grown younger, or else Paris has done you good!" said her husband, as he looked at her with the utmost admiration.

"Or else Dolly's visit has done me good," said Dorothy, with a little blush.

"Well, I am sure it has done me good, and I should like to know what I shall do without you, when you are married, and I suppose you will be married some day, and I don't know who else I shall have to care for."

"Why, Dolly, I believe you are crying!"

"Nonsense, Dorothy, I am not crying at all, but I do wish you would not talk as if I should never see you again."

"Why, I shall be very glad. What you call an impossible—one or other—"

"Dorothy, I wish you would not talk like that! It is like—"

"Nonsense, Dolly, I am tired!" he said very seriously. "and time suffer from your visit, if you keep me up much longer. Now, I want you to go to bed, and I want you to be well and strong to-morrow, for I want you to be my partner in the dance, and I want you to be fresh and bright for the occasion."

"Well, I will try, Henry, I will indeed, and I am very, very sorry if I have made you cross."

"Cross! I am not cross, but I will be cross if you do not go to bed at once!"

"Good night, Dorothy, good night, Arthur, good night, Norah, good night, Henry, I will be good, I will indeed!"

"Good night, Dolly, good night, and I hope you will be good, for I am very, very tired, and I want you to be good."

BAR NEGRO CHILDREN

KANSAS SCHOOLS REFUSE THEM ADMITTANCE.

In Kansas City and Bonner Spring Colored Pupils Are Ordered Per mission to Leave with Whites—Parents Threatened Mandamus.

Negro pupils have been refused admission to the public schools of Kansas City, Kan., and the same action has been taken at Bonner Springs. Kan. Colored people have been sending children to the schools of these places for years, but this year the trouble began when the parents of a little girl named Ward attempted to enroll their daughter in the Douglas school in Kansas City. The girl was refused admittance and her parents were told that she could not be admitted to any school except the one for colored children. The Ward family is well known in Kansas City, and the action of the school officials in refusing to admit the child has caused much comment. The Ward case is the first to come to the attention of the public, but it is said that several other colored children have been denied the privilege of attending the schools of Kansas City, Kan., and Bonner Springs.

Attorney Frank P. Mulvane, who represents the Ward family, said that the school officials had no right to make such a rule. He said that the Ward family would be entitled to a mandamus compelling the admission of their child to the school if the case should be taken to the courts. Mr. Mulvane said that the school officials had based their action on a decision of the Kansas supreme court in a case from Topeka, but that the Topeka case was not parallel with that of the Ward child. The Topeka case involved the question of the admittance of colored children to the high school, while the Ward case involves the question of their admittance to the primary schools. The Topeka case was decided in 1903, when the supreme court of Kansas held that the school board had the right to maintain separate schools for white and colored children. The court said that the Topeka high school was not a primary school, but was a school of a higher character, to which only children who had passed through the primary schools could be admitted. The court said that the school board had the right to say that colored children should not be admitted to the primary schools with white children.

Mr. Mulvane said that the Ward case would be taken to the district court if the school board persisted in its action. He said that if the board persisted in its action in the district court he would carry the case to the supreme court of the state if necessary. He said that he was confident that the Ward child would be admitted to the primary school of Kansas City, Kan., if the case should be taken to the courts.

CHARGES NOVEL BLACKMAIL.

Lloyd Williams Accuses His Wife's Brother of Conspiring With.

Brother of Conspiring With.

A novel form of blackmail is charged in a suit filed in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, by Lloyd Williams, 145 Forrestdale street, Chicago, against his wife's brother, who he charges with conspiring with his wife to extort money from him. The bill of complaint charges that Mrs. Williams, who was Miss Lloyd, and her brother, Ed Lloyd, conspired to induce Williams to pay them $2,000 to prevent the publication of a story that would be injurious to the reputation of Mrs. Williams. The story was to be published in a Chicago newspaper, it is said, and the suit charges that Mrs. Williams and her brother had induced a newspaper man to write the story and had induced Williams to pay them $2,000 to prevent the publication of the story. The story was not published, it is said, and Williams has filed a bill in the circuit court of Cook county to have the money returned to him. The bill charges that the story was to be published in a Chicago newspaper, and

QUEER DINING ROOMS

MEALS EATEN IN THE AIR AND UNDER THE SEA.

Two Occasions on Which the Spires of Cathedrals Figured in Repasts—Diving Bells and Submarine Boats Used by Eccentrically Inclined.

One of Zimmin's most applauded feats was making an omelet while balancing on his nose a dinner knight. When crossing Niagara he performed his culinary exploit, which he subsequently repeated in England in many strange situations, but the least being above the Channel, where he crossed twice than once.

The summit of Salisbury's spire was used as a kitchen in 1605. When a plumber named Hensley, having ventured his height of 404 feet, succeeded with the aid of bellows to cook an adopt repast, consisting of a shoulder of mutton and a couple of fowls. Again in 1782, when the same spire stood in front of Pepper House Grill, to whom the job was entrusted, cooked and ate a side of bacon and beans in the adjustment of the crowd collected below.

On one occasion five adventurous spirits under the leadership of a certain Pierre Boulanda, tailor with a taste cooking others, seated in spire of Devon cathedral. On reaching the absolute gilded statue of St Michael, which then stood on the summit, they proceeded to cook their dinner, which they ate with great gusto, much to the amusement of the onlookers whose health they drank at the conclusion of the feast.

Dessing Dodge, the famous wind, once warm Jids up of into the American submarine Arcadian cooking omelette about thirty feet from the surface. The vessel was a party of gaiety invited to dine, but in spite of the novel experience of partaking a bite beneath the surface of a dinner cooked under the water. The meal was a brilliant success, as they were the dapper and sprightly actors sky monkey tiers under neither rank from as brave the Richard Ind Fulton.

A diving bell was somewhere since utilized as a dining apartment, a wager had been made that a certain gourmet could dine off a dish of half a dozen oysters between the water. This adventure went which took place at Naples was done in conditions of a submarine nature, his achievement to six gourmets who had used a diving bell for partaking of a meal cooked on board a large model boat at least.

In 1788 one James Austin had a wager of $100 that he would cook a dish pudding his feet beneath the surface of the Thames near Richmond Hill. The feat was readily accepted and many people flocked to the appointed locale to watch the strange exhibition of the culinary art. Boiling oil is in pan, in the center of a sack of flour the pudding was lowered beneath the water where for 15 hours and a half it remained. It was then taken up and pronounced by a committee, who declared that Austin had won his wager, the pudding being fit eatable.

Three years preceding chef we find the celebrated William Hall to the place from steering to that separate national life. Charles Waterton who entertained six sailors to a dinner on the branch of a tree, the dishes were cooked on another platform erected on a neighboring tree, which only were dispatched to a lake in means of an ingenious contrivance called the. The entertainment was voted an unqualified success, the cook and assistants who were hoisted aloft and lowered in a chair covering themselves with enthusiasm glory.

In the tower of Eiffel cathedral hangs a huge bell ten feet high and twelve feet in circumference, weighing thirteen tons. Within this, in July 1715, dined ten of the town's most wealthy burghers on dishes cooked in a kitchen temporarily erected on the beam that supported the ponderous mass of bell—a solid metal. To celebrate this repast medals were struck, having on the obverse the portrait of the novelty and on the reverse the inscription of the curious scene.

Protection and the Republic.

No one has fathomed the generosity tariff in an absolute sense. For it is profound as the Republic and the public expressed the national aspirations of the human mind in the political sphere. It is one of the exhaustless themes, and will be the study of statesmen for all time to come. It signifies the personality and present source of republican government, and is peculiarly distinguished by the fact that it is the only explanation. You cannot make a tariff overlaying on any other theory except that of the protective tariff. The United States has shown the constitutional, it could not maintain its constitutional organization in the absence of a protective system, but by the introduction of the system it recovered from the disorganization and has become the most eminent of the nations commercially and politically. And on this question of the tariff the Republican and Democratic parties are fundamentally distinct. The Democratic party is a party of a matter—whether or not the United States shall be forever what it is—the dominant nation.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Japanese Quick to Learn.

When in 1857 Lord Elgin visited Japan and insisted on making the stream a present of a yacht and also insisted on arranging a treaty with him in behalf of England, he noted the extraordinary thirst for knowledge and quickness in learning which distinguish the Japanese. Within a week a raw Japanese crew had learned how to manage the stranger's new yacht. The Japanese commissioners were look pains to imitate the dance which their guests gave after dinner when the queen's health was drunk, as soon as they understood that "when you in the west wish to honor a person especially, you rise and stand after your meals."

ELECTIONS OF 1906

TARIFF LEAGUE HAS BEGUN CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

A New List of First Voters Being Secured, to All of Whom Will Be Sent Documents Advocating and Defending Protection.

Some time will elapse before the Congressional campaign of 1906, but the present is judged to be most fortunate because of the lack of committee in Congress, but the strength. We have actually spoken of the investigation which is being made for commercial conditions abroad by representatives of the manufacturers at Washington. The American Protective Tariff League has to be modesty in the way of securing data in preparation for future consideration the tariff question. It is forthcoming a campaign among those Americans who will then vote for the first time. Letters are being sent to persons of the tariff league in all sections of the country with the request that they will fill out blanks giving the name of every person of their acquaintance who attained to be 21 in the year 1906. If it should happen that the organization should be unable to secure an address will be made to make tariff propagation of the people who are thus first entitled to the cause of citizen in the country. Whether this will be a large number is enough for the cause of protection to American labor and American capital.

The adoption of the system of sending them addressed will result in the voters who receive blanks in the mail and bring the national campaign of 1906 to the doorstep of the voters. Thousands of Republicans will receive the blanks addressed to them by the League. The blanks adopted are the same as those used in the United States under the Republican administration which produced the work we have. The free traders now want to return to work for the same object, but they may be able to theory to the tariff question. Whether they will be able to do so is a matter which we do not know. It is a matter which we do not know, but there was when the Democrats had to gate in 1896 but the theory is said. The theory would bring all the trade of the world to the United States, which would, in fact, have nothing then to supply that trade with.—Worcester Telegram.

Work for Conciliatory Endeavors.

The report of a committee in England appointed to his people to aim to be promptly notified of sickness among the emigrants, and to be in readiness and at last mentioned the fact to the Christian Endeavor society. At the next business meeting a committee was formed, the duties being to keep the poster posted with a view to visit and read to the sick, carry flowers to them, and see that the church was represented every Sunday. The success has been such that the whole church has conversation in similar fashion.—Theory.

Justice in Victoria.

Are You Engaged?

Engaged people should remember, that, after marriage, many quarrels can be avoided, by keeping their digestions in good condition, with Electric Bitters. W. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., says: For years my wife suffered immensely from dyspepsia complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and vigor, and became a mere wreck of her former self. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." If Mr. Hines & Co. druggist, sells and guarantees them, at 50c a bottle.

The Prosperous South.

The prosperous southern reports which show remarkable activity throughout the country find its echo in amounts of cash spent for pleasure in many localities, notably in the south. Thus the Dallas Tex. Journal of recent commercial prosperity for a year shows enormous gains in the amount of money spent on the amusement of citizens who have been in the situation shows that within a few years increases from moderate sums to nine times have been made, and that, for instance, the amount spent for sporting equipment, and the sums spent for charitable and the 1,200 miles and several thousand miles are distributed in entertainment. Would it significant that this work is done by a branch largely by businessmen? What has allowed been accomplished? This is, very much of the new village enterprises in order to accommodate business waiting to be done and to provide means to realize which are certain to be important factors in raising spirits.

All this is most pleasing and encouraging. While the South is decidedly benefited and enriched by the new transportation facilities and by the opportunities thus afforded for most profitable marketing for its products, the whole country shares in the gain. Notably is this true of the Northwest region to which Northern farmers of industry are brought into touch with the fine climate of the South. The opening of the new railroad mileage which is under way in the Pacific will also be a factor in the development of the South. The Pacific coast is a great market for the products of the Southern States. Such leaders as Senator Smith, leaders of trade, have for the communities, will be in a position to make large purchases in the North or what is wanted and cannot readily obtained in the South. Thus the Southern people are in a position to be emphatically here in a place, as to which, rather than which helps and helps all. The more rapidly the South builds, increases and accumulates wealth, the more will be sold to it by the North, and the more rapidly the South will help and helps all. The more rapidly the South prospers, the more will be sold to it by the North—it will be not only for that region but for the whole country.—New Times.

Germany Would Lose.

On the contrary of things it would seem that we would lose more than Germany in a tariff war between us. The last year some sixty per cent of our exports to Germany consisted of raw materials, and only forty per cent of our imports from Germany. Thus we lose more than Germany in the exchange of trade, and we lose more than Germany in the exchange of money. Germany has to pay us in gold, and we have to pay Germany in goods. Germany would lose more than we would in a tariff war between us.—Boston Herald.

Everybody Listens

In a little hamlet a few miles from Cleveland the telephone bears worn out its service and the subscribers are 15 to 20 out of it.

It is said the bell sounding among a certain party this the feature which it will be interested in the current immediately raise somewhere may be doing and comfortably seating herself at the phone, leaning down the receiver and prepares to listen to everything in the line of business.

A visitor to whom this expensive scheme was new was somewhat disconcerted the other day when at the phone in a strid voice that boomed out with business in those tones:

"Now, you sit through bells! Mary Jane hoot that Simpson affair I'll be to a word with her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Kidney Diseases Worst of All.

How to Cure These Dangerous and Fatal Maladies

No one, or at most not a million persons have unchecked a modest alarm for the discovery that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. Its wonderful success in the most distressing cases has established beyond a doubt its remarkable curative powers. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is a vegetable compound and a most healthy medicine. It fulfills all the requirements of a healthy stomach, liver, kidneys, and bladder. It is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found the most helpful and the best medicine you can take.

Sworn statements of cures by Swamp-Root are constantly being published. Its success is due to its curative powers in the worst cases of kidney, liver and bladder troubles, such as pain in the back, kidneys, liver and bladder disease, rheumatism, dropsy, dyspepsia, stomach troubles, gravel, poor health, and bad blood, and to overcome the painful, dangerous and fatal diseases that are the result of these troubles.

Sworn testimonials and a testimonial letter telling how you feel when you are sick, Kidney, Liver and Bladder troubles are common, and most people are sick from one of these troubles the first symptoms of which are a lame back, pain in the kidneys, frequent headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, dizziness, heart disease

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOUETT CAMERON

CHAPTER XX.

In the month of October, when the days have cooled and shortened, and a chill from early morning lingers in the air, Mrs. Hodge, of Hodge Hall, in the Midlands, was sitting in her boudoir with her daughter Ethel. The room was a delicious one in which to spend a cold day, for the fire burned in a wide, open grate, and the sun, shining through the mullioned windows, made the place exceedingly cheerful.

Mrs. Hodge was a very young-looking woman, and her daughter Ethel looked so much like her that she might be mistaken for her sister. Ethel was a tall, slender girl, with a fair, sweet face, and a mass of golden hair. Her mother was a little more stout than her daughter, but she had the same fair, sweet face, and the same golden hair.

Ethel was reading aloud to her mother from a letter she had received from her lover, Lord Lyndhurst, who was with his regiment in India. The letter was very long, and very interesting, for Lord Lyndhurst was a good writer, and he was a man who had seen much of the world and its people, and was able to write about them in a way that was very entertaining.

Ethel had read for some time, and her mother had been very quiet, when the latter said, suddenly:

"Ethel, I wonder if Lord Lyndhurst would be—would be—well, you know what I mean, dear—would he be—would he—"

Ethel laid her hand upon her mother's lips and kissed her.

"Yes, I know what you mean, mother, and I think he would be—he is—very, very good to me. He—"

"Read what he says about his mother," said Mrs. Hodge, with a little sigh.

Ethel turned to the last page of her lover's letter and read:

"Tell your mother that I shall be very happy to have her for my mother-in-law, and that I shall do my best to make you both happy. I wish I could tell you how I long to see you, but I cannot. We are ordered to the front, and we may be there in a few weeks. I cannot bear to think of it, for I shall be miserable until I have seen you and your mother. I have some leave coming to me, and I shall try to get it at once. I cannot write more than this now, for I am very busy. Tell your mother that I will be a good son to her, and that I will love her for your sake, and for her own sweet self. Ever your own, Lyndhurst."

"He is a good man, mother, and he loves me very, very much," said Ethel, as she folded the letter and put it back into its envelope.

"I wish I could see him before he goes to the front," said Mrs. Hodge, with a little sigh.

"He may be able to get a few days' leave, mother, when he hears that we—that we want him so much," said Ethel, with a little blush.

"I wrote to him by the last mail, and told him that I was very lonely, and that I was afraid I should be very, very unhappy if anything should happen to you, or to him, before we had been married," said Mrs. Hodge.

"Mother, I wrote to him, too, and I told him that I was afraid I should be very, very unhappy if anything should happen to him before we had been married," said Ethel, with a little blush.

"Then we are both of us in the same condition, are we not?" said Mrs. Hodge, with a little smile.

"Yes, we are both of us in the same condition, mother," said Ethel, with a little blush.

"Then I think we may be very, very happy, dear, while we are waiting for the return of our lover," said Mrs. Hodge, with a little sigh.

"Yes, I think we may be very, very happy, mother, while we are waiting for the return of our lover," said Ethel, with a little sigh.

"Ethel, do you think that Lord Lyndhurst—that he—that he—that he

HIGHWAY LAW.

New Law Recently Enacted by the State Legislature.

The people of the State of Michigan enact:

SECTION 1. That there is hereby created and established a State Highway Department, which shall be charged with the giving of instruction in the art of building, improving and repairing public wagon roads and bridges, collecting reports from township and county highway commissioners, overseers of highway and superintendents and commissioners of streets in villages and cities, and with the distribution of any state reward for improving the public wagon roads, that the Legislature at any future session may provide for, or any funds that may be given to the State for such purpose by the United States government.

SEC. 1. The chief officer of said department shall be denominated the State Highway Commissioner. He shall be a citizen of this state, and shall have his office at the seat of government, and personally supervise the duties thereof. He shall be appointed within fifteen days from the time that this act takes effect, by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office for a term of four years from July first, nineteen hundred and five, and until his successor is duly appointed and qualified, he shall receive an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars to be paid monthly. He may appoint a deputy, who shall be a competent civil engineer, with the approbation of the Governor, and may revoke such appointment at his pleasure. Such deputy shall take and subscribe the oath prescribed by the constitution, and whenever the commissioner by reason of sickness, absence or other cause, be disabled from executing the duties of his office, his deputy duly appointed shall execute the duties thereof until such disability or cause be removed, or until a commissioner shall be appointed and such deputy shall receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars, to be paid monthly. The commissioner shall employ other clerks or employes as may be necessary to perform the duties incumbent upon the department, who shall be paid monthly. The salaries of the commissioners and others employed by authority of this act shall be approved by the board of State Auditors, and paid upon the warrant of the Auditor General. Provided, that in no case, however, shall the running expenses of the department, including the salaries of the commissioner and all others employed by the authority of this act exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars in any one year. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said office of commissioner, by reason of death, removal or otherwise, the Governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate if in session. The commissioner shall within 15 days from the time of notice of his appointment, take and subscribe the oath of office prescribed by the constitution, and file the same in the office of the secretary of State and the said commissioner shall give to the people of the State of Michigan a bond in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, with sureties to be approved by the Auditor General, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. The commissioner shall make a biennial report to the Governor to be by him transmitted to the legislature at each biennial session thereof. Such reports shall contain the name and compensation of each and every person that may be or has been employed by the department and the whole amount of expenses by the department during the biennial period previously reported. Such report shall be made on or before the first day of February, nineteen hundred and seven, and every two years thereafter, and the commissioner shall have printed a sufficient number of these reports to provide every township overseer of highways in townships under the cash tax system, every township highway commissioner, and county highway commissioner and superintendent or commissioner of streets in the State with one copy, enough more to satisfy the demand that the public weal may warrant.

SEC. 2. The township overseers of highways of townships under the cash tax township system and highway commissioners of the several townships in each and every county in the state, and the county highway commissioners in counties working under the county road law, shall meet annually in a road institute, at such time and place in each county as the State Highway Commissioner may designate, there to consider such matters as he may present to their attention and to discuss such matters of road improvement as may be of special interest to such overseers of highways, township and county highway commissioners and every overseer of township highway commissioner may charge to his township the same per diem for his day as one in actual road work, together with actual expenses for the day, which shall be reasonable to allowed by the board or committee, or county auditors who may have the authority in such matters in the county in which he is a county highway commissioner.

SEC. 3. At the request of the State Highway Commissioner, every road district overseer of highways, every township overseer of highways commissioner, every county highway commissioner, and every village or city superintendent of commissioner of streets, shall make a secret report to the State Highway Commissioner, on or before December first each year, answering such questions as the state Highway Commissioner shall deem proper to ask and they are able to answer, giving him such information as he may require and he shall already gain appertaining to roads, streets, methods of construction, material, machinery and such other matters which he may furnish his annual report.

SEC. 4. Any road district overseer of highways or township overseer of highways or township highway commissioner or county highway commissioner, or village or city superintendent or commissioner of streets who shall refuse or neglect to make such report at the time stated or within thirty days thereafter, or who shall make a report which shall be in whole or in part false, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, in any court of competent jurisdiction, be fined in any sum of not less than ten dollars and costs, and not exceeding one hundred dollars and costs, or be confined in jail not less than ten days, nor more than thirty days, for each and every offense at the discretion of the court. Upon those of the provisions of this act may be prosecuted in the name of the people of the state of Michigan, and it shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney of each county to prosecute for any violation of the provisions contained in sections four and five of this act.

Too cold Chicago.

It may well think, he has got off cheap, who after having contracted consumption or indigestion, is still able to perfectly endure his length. Nothing will do this but Dr. King's New Life Pills. A quick, pleasant, safe cure for Constipation, Sick Headache, Jaundice, Malaria, Blood Poison, Kidney Complaints and Nervousness. Only 25c at F. G. Dunn & Co. drug store, guaranteed.

Shortage of Freight Cars

The tremendous shortage in freight cars this fall is worrying traffic managers on all the railroad systems. Our building plants everywhere are unable to hand over new equipments fast enough to satisfy the demand.

"The shipment to the car supply is bad all over the country," said General Traffic Manager Dutcherie of the Pere Marquette, "and it is as bad in Michigan as anywhere else. It is due to the enormous increase in every line of business.

"We have a daily demand of from three to four thousand cars and cannot fill it."

St. B. Appointments.

The following are the local appointments of M. E. pastors in Grand Traverse District:

Charlevoix, J. W. Vickers; Petoskey, Asa Martin; Pellston, H. V. Wade; Norwood, J. P. Durham; East Jordan, G. E. Allen; for the past five years missionary in South America, Boyne City, L. Grossebaugh; Bellaire, W. A. Robinson; Central Lake, H. B. Wynn; Eastport, J. Pepper; Alpena, Niles, is the new Presiding Elder and the retiring Presiding Elder, Rev. M. D. Orwel, goes to a pastorate in Big Rapids.

A Pastor's Study Ruined.

Pastor Berry, of the Baptist Church, went to Petoskey Monday to preach a special sermon at the First Baptist church. Upon his return Tuesday he discovered that the study at the church had been raided during his absence. But the robber only took a good and not evil, for when they departed the study had been thoroughly renovated and their footprints showing it very comfortable and inviting. The pastor greatly appreciates this kindness, and no doubt will preach better sermons hereafter.

The Manistee County Order Case.

Judge Davis, who heard the evidence and arguments in the perennial Manistee County order case, has filed, in special term, his decision under advisement.

No one presumes to make a forecast of what Judge Davis will decree in the case, but the people of Charlevoix county will be glad when the calendar shows this bugbear contain this celebrated case.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Hayes City suffered a severe loss at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning in the burning of the planing and machinery of Gardner Kerry. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have been incendiary. The fire department discovered that stones had been placed in the hoses. Inspector of this the men were delayed in getting the fire under control. The loss is a total one, which amounts to $15,000, with no insurance.

Sixteen Miles while automobiled west into the electric light power house at East Jordan and after talking awhile asked the electrician which wires would kill a man if he took hold of them. He was informed that he better leave all the wires alone and in another minute there was a flash and Myers was dead. He had taken hold of a live wire with both hands and died instantly. Whether it was accident or whether he contemplated suicide is a question.

Traverse City Record: That the preparation of building an electric railroad in Traverse City and to Old Mission is not a dead one, is proved by L. K. Gillette, the promoter, who has an exhibit of valuable reports from one of the foremost civil engineers of the United States, giving the proposed road a good send off. From extensive correspondence with his lawyer and the bond houses, Mr. Gillette is assured every few days that the work of installing the matter is progressing as rapidly as a deal of such magnitude can, and he tells the The Daily Eagle that the project which he is handling is on the dream, but will soon be a reality. There are many details to be handled before the work on the road can be commenced.

Bellaire Independent: The Northwestern Michigan Odd Fellows Association will not hold a meeting at Bellaire this fall, as was expected. The prevalence of small-pox in Bellaire throughout the summer months made it out of the question to set an early date for the meeting. When the small-pox finally abated it was found that several of the invited speakers, and the requisite grand lodge officers, could not attend at the desired time, so a later date was decided upon. When this date became known it was found to be identical with the first and second days of the fair of East Jordan, and that the East Jordan Odd Fellows were much disappointed as to the date. There were several other features of the contemplated program which could not be carried out and the season was too far advanced for another definite post-ponement, so it was finally decided to have no meeting this fall, or at least nothing more than a business meeting to arrange for a meeting next year.

—L. T. D. A. meeting Thursday evening.

—Michael McCann of St. James, was here over sunday.

—J. L. Crane has a new display in his advertising column this week.

—Mrs. D. S. Washburn returned last week from her summer sojourn in the west.

—Lorenzo's store will be closed from Friday 6 p. m. to Monday morning on account Jewish holiday.

—John Miller last week began the foundation for a residence or summer cottage on Lake Dixon Avenue lot.

—The meeting of the Current Event Club, to have been held this evening is postponed for two weeks.

—Ray Graves has the record up to date. At the north pier Friday, with a common herring hook, after a hard fight, he landed a five pound black bass.

—There was a family reunion last Sunday at the home of Chester Blanchard, of Boyne City, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Vosting, of Chicago, uncle and aunt of Mrs. Blanchard.

—Dr. Armstrong has leased a four unit of rooms over Hitson' drug store, which he is fitting up for office rooms. To his equipment he is adding many new up-to-date articles for surgical use. He will occupy the rooms this week.

—One of the very interesting twin boys of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hallett, died Sunday, aged eight months. The loss is keenly felt by the parents, as the boys were unusually bright and promising. The remaining child is, however, in good health.

—Married, at the home of the bride's parents, in East Jordan the 21st. Mr. Benjamin Bowman of Chicago Lake, to Miss Stella Smith of Charlevoix. After a trip to New York on a visit to Mrs. Burr's sister, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burr, will be in Central Lake, where Mr. Burr is employed in the Pere Marquette station.

—Rev. Mr. Putnam, who will occupy the Congregational pulpit next Sunday, comes as a candidate for the pastorate of this church. He comes very highly recommended by a large number of Congregational ministers, including the retiring pastor, who knows him well, and is familiar with his work in other fields.

—The N. M. Trains Co. announces its annual excursion to the Soo for for next Sunday, Oct. 1st, by the elegant steamer Missouri. The steamer will have Charlevoix at 6:00 p. m. Tickets are good for the round trip, $3.00. This is the one great opportunity of the year to see the wonderful Soo, and the magnificent scenery of the Soo river.

—John Bowers, of Grand Rapids, Most Worshipful Grand Master, and Frank T. Lodge, of Detroit, Right Worshipful Grand Lecturer F. & A. M., of Michigan, stopped off here Tuesday on their way to the Soo to visit past grand master Fletcher I. Turrell. They spent the day in fishing over the town, and Charley Turrell took home off in his racing motor boat.

—And now it is stated that the C. H. & D. and Pere Marquette, otherwise the "Great Central System," has again been sold, and that T. Dwight Morgan is the purchaser of 60,000 shares. There is some question as to where the control of the road now lies but the newspaper accounts state that this point will be settled when the directors of the road hold their next meeting.

—Pinnebog service at Epworth Church on sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—Jas. Hookey, of St. James came over Friday and went to Chicago on business.

—A. L. Fitch has begun the erection of a fine residence adjoining Dr. Judd's on the north side.

—On Sabbath evening and during the winter months the preaching services at the various churches will commence at 7 o'clock. Young people's meetings will commence at 6 o'clock.

—Mrs. F. A. Watson, formerly of Charlevoix, but now of Frankfort, Great Lady Commander L. O. T. M. of Michigan, has been here the past ten days, visiting the hives of this section and meeting her many friends.

—This year's peach crop, which was repeatedly killed off but spring proveses to be one of the biggest on record, it is estimated that the Michigan crop will be upwards of 6,000,000 baskets, nearly double that of most fruitest years. An immense grape crop is also being marketed.

—A farewell reception was tendered Rev. Ira Hyslop and wife at the Congregational church on Monday evening. The attendance was large, and the occasion a very enjoyable one, aside from the general feeling of regret that it marked the departure from Charlevoix and the church of these two estimable people.

—Saturday night six cottages on Northern Point were entered through either doors or windows which were carefully pried open, evidently with the aid of a strong iron bar which was passed under lines and lifted so that the locks were broken off and the entrance made easily. Charlevoix is not alone in her trouble.

—Elk Rapids Progress: The Charlevoix Sentinel brings out Chase S. Osborn of Sault Ste. Marie as a candidate for United States Senator to succeed general Alger. From a somewhat intimate acquaintance with Mr. Osborn extending back for two decades we can say that Michigan has few men as well qualified for the class. He is an indefatigable worker, a loyal republican, broad and liberal minded and a genial gentleman. There are too many candidates, however, and too much time yet before election, for us this time make any predictions as to possibilities.

—Steel range peddlers, with their glittering promises and ambiguous contracts, are said to be coming this way, the last heard from them meaning date at Big Rapids. Just why a steel range peddler, a stranger and out for the money only, caring nothing for the quality of his goods or the value of his word, should be permitted to invade a community is not quite clear. He will promise anything, will clear range peddler, to effect a sale. He will misrepresent his range, he will offer a contract for signature that may turn up at a note somewhere, and it has even been known that the contracts were raised to marketable value through the changing of the figures and the range itself is never as represented. It is the home merchant who is among with you. Read what he has to say to you through the newspapers. He is here today and tomorrow and next year, he is honest with you because he expects to retain your good will and favor and patronage; he sustains through tax contributions by maintaining public improvements and utilities, well you know where to find him on every day. Join the acquaintance of the steel range peddler, remember that he is a grafter, nothing more, nothing less, and confine your dealing to the home merchants.

—MILLINERY openings at Mrs. H. A. Carr's Friday and Saturday Sept. 29 and 30, the ladies are cordially invited to attend.

WANTED—A farm of 40 acres, with buildings and water in Charlevoix county. Address U. S. Craker Bay Shore Mich.

BURGLARY.

Thief Caught Red-Handed as He Left Premises.

A bold burglary was committed in the storage of J. W. Teasdale, on the North side Saturday night, and the thief was in and out.

About 10:00 Mrs. F. N. Chase, who lives near, saw a light in one of the windows of the Teasdale residence. She at once telephoned down town, and deputy Sheriff Posey and night officer Simmons, with a dozen citizens picked up on the way, went to the house and surrounded it. Officer Simmons went to the back door, which he found open, and as he was about to enter he was confronted by a man.

Simmons quickly poked his gun under the man's nose, and he surrendered. On this person was found two pairs of opera glasses, a few articles of a manicure set, and a large variety of articles, including a bunch of keys. He had entered by forcing open the back window sash door, and had broken a pane of glass from another door through which he had reached and drawn the bolts. Two other inside doors were forced open and everything was in confusion, as if he had been aware of his detection. He gave his name as Frank Connahan. He was recognized as a man who with a companion had bought a lunch at Chilman's restaurant at five o'clock that afternoon. The companion is believed to be a negro.

At his preliminary hearing in Justice Collins court Monday morning Connahan pled guilty to having entered the house and to being in possession of stolen articles, but denied a skeleton key charge, which would convict him of being a professional burglar. Further hearing was set for today.

Connahan is a man about 25 years of age, with full black beard, and is a stranger in Charlevoix.

That Jewish Resort.

Inquiry from persons that seem reliable give force to the report that a Jewish resort is likely to be established in Charlevoix.

It is a well known fact that the Jewish population of our summer visitors is large, embracing many of the most prominent men in professional, financial, and commercial Jewish circles.

It is also a fact that some of the most estimable and delighted men and women of that race are regular summer resort patrons—the Belmonts, Rosenthal was a relative, instance; a man who for nearly forty years was one of Chicago's most prominent attorneys. We also remember with much pleasure the visit last summer of Harold Bloom, field Zouave, the world's greatest jazz pianist. There are many other distinguished Jews who have adopted Charlevoix as their regular summer homes.

The projects, as we understand it, is to establish a resort with a large club house, and grounds large enough for a number of cottages if desired. Knowing the Jews who come to Charlevoix, we are sure the enterprise will be carried out, be of no small proportions.

Teachers' Reception.

The citizens having one week ago given a reception to the teachers at the home of Dr. Greene, it was fitting that some recognition should be given them by the church, and so on Friday evening, an informal reception was tendered at the parlours of the Methodist church, by the Epworth League to their friends and the Superintendent and teachers of our schools. An enjoyable program was rendered, followed by a social time. Refreshments were served.

The Charlevoix News prefers a Science price for potatoes when the market opens this fall. It is said that the quality of Northern Michigan potatoes this year is much better than in many other sections of the country, and that in itself is a good omen for our growers.

DECISION AFFIRMED.

Judge Mayne Has a Big Feather in His Cap.

Judge F. W. Mayne has a feather in his cap, says the Traverse City Eagle, in the sustaining by the supreme court of his decision made in a case which will undoubtedly be a precedent for future action through out the state, the supreme court's decision having just been given.

The case stated here 11, 1903 the township commissioner of highways of Cedar township, plaintiff of C. W. Garner & Co. of St. Louis, a total stock value, upon the request of a majority of highway overseers of the township, the township supervisor got up blanks with the company's agent which the latter executed the matter of purchasing the machine.

The payment of $500 for the machine was to be made in installments and an order was drawn on the township treasurer for the amounts. The order was sold by the company to the First National bank, a city and the township treasurer refused to pay the amounts, the bank brought suit against the township to compel him to pay the amounts as soon as he included in the budget for the township which had not been done. The township commissioner contended that the proper official action had not been taken in regard to the purchase.

Judge Mayne took the case from the jury and discussed it. It is not the province of the jury, he said, that those attorneys go to Lansing and argue technical points to go around well, and the fact that, in this case, the superior court only pay for his time and action independent, left the good faith of the superior court not questioned in the matter. The writ was denied by Judge Mayne and the bank appealed to the supreme court, the court now affirming the judgment of Judge Mayne.

The Fish Hatchery.

Mr. Fiskens of the Alpena hatchery, came up a month or more ago Tuesday, had left for his station.

The Northern hatchery has been in operation under Mr. Tomlin and otherwise remained well deserted, ready for the fall work.

The manager of the Jordan hatchery has, in all respects, amply demonstrated the superiority of Charlevoix over all other stations or lay points for a permanent hatchery.

The government is practically in possession of a site. It is the island contained with Ferdinand, Bell and Lake streets and commercial fishing centers, on water is economically adapted to the work. Superintendent Clark is on record at Washington as favoring the proposition.

All these conditions combine to justify an energetic campaign this winter to secure an appropriation for a permanent hatchery.

Last year, Mr. Clark made experimental hatcheries was successful with success in view of making a fair showing for a larger establishment. The quality of plant has been the most successful station, and the permanent hatchery must surely follow.

Summer Institutes.

Geo. Weaver has issued the following circular:

Recognizing the fact that as a rule teachers do not attend institutes effectively excepting our home institutes, I have decided to discontinue the institutes for the last twelve weeks of the school year. Instead of holding for the last twelve weeks of the school year, the institutes will be held at the usual time, by special request and upon the twenty-fifth day of May for the twenty-fifth day of September of each year as "memory days," to be observed impressing and beautifying the cemeteries throughout the county.

Sharing the spirit of reverence and love for the memory of the dead which inspired the observance of Decoration Day, I earnestly recommend that all the citizens of Michigan properly observe the approaching "memory day" and while loving hands decorate their sacred dwellings with the sacred grounds within which lie all that is mortal of friends and kindred. The time and service will elevate and ennoble all who render it."

SCHOOL NOTES.

The different classes of the High School have elected their respective officers.

On the coming Saturday there will be a foot ball game between the East Jordan and Charlevoix foot-ball teams.

The High School Chorus which is under the supervision of Miss Sayer is larger than usual, having in it the number of seventy persons.

Mr. Brown of the Memorial commission of the University of Michigan gave a very pleasing address to the High School on Friday afternoon.

Mr. Wessler is a talk to us and that we did not show enough enthusiasm in the cheer yells. He asked the president of each class to appoint a committee to either make or find new class and High School yells.

The first election of officers for Lyceum created much excitement. Seniors and Freshmen obtained all the offices, but there is a great deal of class spirit remaining. The Seniors are making preparations for a lecture which will be held soon and which will be held at a later paper.

Our basket-ball girls had a very unexpected challenge from East Jordan and played there on Saturday afternoon. The score was 19 to 6 in favor of East Jordan. However, this was a very fine showing for the Charlevoix girls because all conditions were unfavorable for them. Another basket-ball game will be held here Saturday between the East Jordan and Charlevoix teams.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Mr. N. A. Shores and wife of Charlevoix were in town Sunday.

Mrs. Nettie Hemall, of Buffalo, was here visiting friends over Sunday.

George H. VanPell and Miss Mary Clark were married last Wednesday.

Mrs. Daniel Stafford gave this week a Clarion to visit her daughter, Mrs. Clark.

J. Wolfspierman, of East Jordan, and E. A. Swartwout, of Ellsworth, were in town Sunday.

Mrs. Chettie Cooper, of Elk Rapids, was a Sunday night and will return a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Spaulding moved sometime this week to Elk Rapids, and will there stay all winter.

Moses Howlish moves into S. S. Spaulding's house and Ed. Flynn will occupy the house formerly occupied by Howlish.

Miss Annie Dimstead will leave Friday for Petoskey, where she will take a teacher's course at the Graves school.

Grace and June Stafford will leave next Monday for Mount Pleasant, where they will attend the State Normal school the ensuing year.

There will be a Masquerade Ball at the Town Hall Friday evening, Sept. 29th, given under the auspices of the Norwood Dramatic Club.

Moses Lapper and wife, of Charlevoix, were here over Sunday. Mr. Lapper was on the Johnson place some time for a number of years Norwood to London about eight years ago, and from there to Charlevoix.

Edwin F. Sweet, the present mayor of Grand Rapids, elected on the democratic ticket, has announced his desire to be the democratic candidate for governor next year, and has sent to a Grand Rapids newspaper that if he is disposed to seek the nomination he will not be a candidate for the race for the same was in it. It will be remembered that Mr. Sweet was in the race for the same nomination last year, and at that time he, and the outcome of the disorder and riotous proceedings which characterized the democratic state convention it resulted that there was only disappointment in it for him. Mr. Sweet may arrange to remain in the Blue Light longer next year, if the empty honor of a democratic nomination shall be given him, but the result will be the same in the end, defeat and disappointment. Governor Warner's sincere efforts to give a satisfactory and successful administration of state affairs has won for him the favor and good will of a very large majority of the people of Michigan and his renomination and re-election are quite assured regardless as to whom the democratic convention may be.

FLOOD WORKS HAVOC.

TWELVE PERSONS SAID TO HAVE BEEN DROWNED.

Streams of Missouri Become Raging Torrents and Sweep Everything Up Like Straws—Thousands of Head of State Assessed and Slashed on Check.

One of the worst floods in Missouri at the mouths of the river has been raging through the state since Friday, when it began. In addition to much damage done to property, twelve persons are known to have been drowned, and there may be others of whom there is no report. The worst damage has been done in the northern part of the state, where the Grand, Chariton, Little Chariton, Platte, Nodaway, Nishnabotna, Thompson, Little Blue and other streams are out of their banks and have caused great damage to property. Out of Kansas City it is reported that the Blue river is rising fast and that the bottoms are all under water. The Missouri river is also rising and is out of its banks in many places. Reports from Sedalia say that the Lamine river is out of its banks and that the Missouri Pacific railroad is in the bottoms and may be forced to suspend operation. The Missouri Pacific also reports that its bridge at Boonville is in danger of being washed out. The oil city and a portion of Independence are under water. The Chariton river is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Grand river is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Little Chariton river is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Platte river is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Nodaway river is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Little Blue is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Nishnabotna is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Thompson is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The Missouri is out of its banks in many places and has caused much damage to property. The Lamine is out of its banks and has caused much damage to property. The

JUVENILE GRANGES.

THEIR ADVANTAGE TO THE SUBORDINATE GRANGE

An Example of Practical Co-operation—Grange Speakers at State Fairs—How Fairs and Granges May Cooperate.

Juvenile granges are increasing in numbers slowly, but surely. When their great helpfulness to the work of the subordinate grange, particularly in preparing for it an interested, intelligent and enthusiastic membership is understood they will meet with positive approval and will increase and multiply. The difficulty in organizing a juvenile grange is not that there are the few children who would be interested in it but to secure for the organization a number who will continue, devote themselves to the young people and direct them in their studies. The juvenile grange has its own corps and staff of officers, just as is required that a division be chosen to superintend all and put the young folks and assist wherever assistance may be needed. The girls they take in performing their degree work and in the organization of all the work of their grange is not equal to any one who has been in the subordinate grange.

One of the most enthusiastic workers in juvenile grange work is Mrs. G. H. Harris of Genesee, who has taken an active interest in juvenile work and has had the work in her county, and has filled out all her reports that we need and keep our eyes on Mrs. for the good of the order. She will be glad always to organize juvenile groups. The possession of useful ones are more than we ever dreamed. From the very first every meeting has been a success. In fact, as often local fairs, degree conclaves are. Well, I should not have come tonight. I was so tired, but the children were bound to come. It is a drawing card for the grange. But then it will take pains I think, though. It is a good one. The great reason is that between the ages of five and twelve are the most impressionable years. Holding these years the plastic mind of the child receives and retains impressions for good or bad which last throughout life. If the young mind is not surrounded by good influences a great opportunity is lost to develop virtues that are of lasting value. Time enough after fourteen, you say? Then, why is it that when school workmen are needed in the delicate arts and crafts they are brought from the old country? There the very young cradles are taught the arts and crafts and young parents of Czech of workmanship that can never be attained by those who begin later in life.

CO-OPERATION PROPOSED

A Grange Principle That is Not Universally Worked.

Members of the grange can take a lesson from the action of farmers on Long Island in attempting to combine for their mutual welfare. In the vicinity of Riverhead N. Y. there are growing 30,000 acres devoted to potato culture, and the farmers there believe that they can purchase fertilizer supplies in bulk and profit by the economy as well as obtain cheaper freight rates by shipping in carload lots. There is a very prosperous agricultural association on the island which has stood considerable money on its account. The cost of cauliflower seed has been reduced from $25 to $20 per pound in four years. Before the association was formed farmers paid as much as $8 an ounce in some cases. "Practically and intelligent farmer with a few acres in cauliflower is now assured of a fair profit of from $100 to $1000." Not all manual is the case of "Anybody" who, a farmer of Rolling Hollow, who last year paid $200 an acre from tenants acres and so on.

This is to show, the milk the grange and our, one of the grange, will get cooperation as it practical thing is not always to mind enough. Isn't it about time "to get together"?

Grange Speeches Worth Money.

Overseer George A. Fuller on the New York state grange is engaged in furnishing county fairs with grange speakers at state grange expense, and the Press Lantern, he is right. Fair managers pay for board, lumber and other bills and "beans," and if they request a grange orator, a Worthy Master should put up for it in their expense account. People go to fairs to see the sights and the crowd gather to hear speeches. The county fair and the grange is the best place to call attention to several years in succession. People come to see Mrs. and the Fair, now and the big pumpkins. What he said no one remembers now, and little attention was given to it at the time. Unless he gave his speech to the papers it might as well have gone up in the balloon.—Utica Press.

The Grange and State Fairs.

The state board of agriculture recently passed a resolution that the annual session of Ohio Patrons, which is held Wednesday and Thursday of state fair week each year. There is much that state fair secretaries can do for the grange, but it is not so much, by a good deal, as the grange can do for the state fair in ohio or somewhere else. Both may be encouraged to the advantage of both.

Protecting of a Beehive.

Overseer C. J. Bell of Vermont, who is also master of the state grange, with his daughter, was a guest of honor at the entertaining of the new in-dividing Vermont at Quincy, Mass., on Aug. 21. Miss Bell, the sponsor of the event and broke a bottle of Ala-Gloss ale on its side so it glided down the ways and she gave the bottlemip its name.

"Blow me down" is the name of a grange up in New Hampshire. That's better sailor than "Blow me up" would have been.

THE PATRON'S INFLUENCE.

The Grange Should Be the Safeguard of the Farmer's Interests.

The grange is the natural and conservative channel for the information of the voice of the established farming community. It is in no respect that its say concerning in which the grange is organized it includes in its membership the intelligent, independent and substantial farmers of that community. These, then, are in a position to express the progressive sentiment of the community, says the Granger Bulletin, and it should be so, and in every public matter that the grange, the safeguard of the farmer's interests, must be represented with.

Are your taxes too high? Where are good offices in your county politics longer? Are the public contracts given to public favorites to extreme good prices? Where are town and in the promotion of all being equally distributed? Where are the public funds used and this energy? Where are the public contracts? Why? A grange? Some said a hundred other questions, and the grange and not the remedy for them is always waiting your hands.

The reform of these evils is not politics. It is business—the farmer's business and the grange is the good principal agency for carrying it out. Make it fairly organized and acknowledge that the farmer and his interests are at the basis of the prosperity of the country and that everything which contributed to the industry, well, all of these interests are considered in the subordinate degree and dependent with the weather stations. Some right is our own communities and our own counties, we should apply the corrective power which rests in our hands. He firm, determined, consistent effort makes it to be found that our farmer, being the industry is given a position in politics, and how the product of his labor shall be used.

AT CHAUTAUQUA LAKE.

Grange Day a Notable Success in Every Way.

Grange day at Chautauqua Lake is always a success, whether it rains or shines. And it is well that success does not always depend on weather, for it does about one-twelfth of the time, one time in the middle and one of morning. Chautauqua being so high up in the clouds, we suppose. The best grange hall on the grounds was thronged throughout the day and its accommodations taxed to its utmost. Through the efforts of State Master and Mrs. Writer C. Gibson, who have charge of the house this summer, and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Van Horn, who generally assisted them for the day, the hostesses were added to the large popularity with members of the grange.

State Master Jones presided at the forenoon meeting, and most addresses were given by State Master Hull of Pennsylvania and State Master Wilson of Illinois. At 2 p. m. S. J. Lowe, master of Chautauqua Pomona grange, presided. Bishop Vincent gave the address of welcome, to which Hull responded. Wilson, Hull and Lowe were assigned to the subordinate grange work, and Wilson and Hull were assigned to the Pomona work. Lowe did a little of both. Wilson's address was a strong one, and he was called upon to give it in Pomona work. Hull's address was a good one, and he was called upon to give it in subordinate work. Lowe's address was good, and he was called upon to give it in both. Wilson's address was good, and he was called upon to give it in both. Hull's address was good, and he was called upon to give it in both —In the abstract sense, it is, of course, the function of a newspaper to give the news. In the realm of cold minded and cold-hearted city journalism this function is not judged by the accumulations of sordid material or impurity. Anything that means a good "news item," goes, whether it carries a heart-starting or sad message. In the country, however, it does not necessarily mean that such news is not of the highest order of importance, which outweigh the fleeting disappointment of overzealous journalism. In small towns where society is more or less homogeneous, and where neighbors are neighbors, it does that one could find it worth while to carry the news of the death of a neighbor, or the illness of a neighbor, or the misfortune of a neighbor, or the good fortune of a neighbor, or the good fortune of a neighbor, or the good f

Mary Stokes of Pittsburg, who has just started for her future home in Canada with a worse case of indigestion or the blues or a broken heart, Miss, it is not for us to say, tried to end her life on account of her indigestion. She was cured for her trouble by the discovery that she is the heiress to a fortune left her by her father, John Stokes, who died in Canada some years ago. Among the papers left by her father was a letter addressed to her, in which he told her of the fortune he was leaving her. It was in the form of a letter, and began thus:

"My dear Mary—I am about to die. I have left you a fortune in Canada. Go there and claim it. Don't let your mother get it away from you. Don't let your brothers get it. Don't let your sisters get it. Don't let your cousins get it. Don't let your aunts get it. Don't let your uncles get it. Don't let your nephews get it. Don't let your nieces get it. Don't let your mother get it. Don't let your canary bird get it. Don't let your parrot get it. Don't let your pet lamb get it. Don't let your—"

Here the letter became illegible, as Mary had taken a dose of poison and was dying. She had taken it because she was in despair over her indigestion. She had tried everything else, but had failed to find any relief. She had read in the papers that the Pittsburg Dispatch was giving away a fortune, and had sent for a copy of the paper. While she was waiting for it she had taken a dose of Dyspepsia Cure, and was in the agonies of death when the postman came with the paper. She read the story of the Dispatch's generosity, and then she read the story of her father's generosity. She read the letter her father had left her, and then she read no more. She had taken a second dose of Dyspepsia Cure, and was dead when the postman came back with the news that she was the heiress to a fortune. She had been in the agonies of death for an hour, and had taken two doses of Dyspepsia Cure, and was dead. The doctors at the side of her death bed could do nothing but say that the Dyspepsia Cure had killed her. A post mortem showed that the Dyspepsia Cure had killed her. FAVOR FORESTRY.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE GRANGE INTERESTED.

The Value of the Forests Over $700,000,000 Depending For the National Grange Meeting—Other Items of Interest to Grange Men.

At the last annual meeting of the Massachusetts state grange a strong plea was made by Master Hale in his annual address for more efficient work in protecting the forests of the state, and a recommendation was made that a state forester be appointed. A law has been enacted to this effect and such official has been appointed, we believe.

The New England Homestead remarks that the hint the state grange can do is to lend to the state forestry its energy and enthusiastic support in the end that the merely present results may be accomplished, but that there may be given to the state a permanent system of intelligent forestry whose benefits shall be to all the coming generations.

It is too true that we look at most everything from a monetary standpoint, and the value of trees in the nation cannot be estimated by the dollars and of feet of lumber that will go on the number of cords of wood. Here I mean the forests are more valuable than any other product. By the last United States census the forest product of this country were over $700,000,000. The next largest, was agriculture. Without going into further details, the results show that the forest products exceeded by more than $150,000,000 all the gold, silver, iron, copper, lead, zinc, coal, tobacco, petroleum, barley and buckwheat put together.

Some small things will give you a general idea. Maples make $10,000 worth annually, one mill uses wood cords making toothpicks—another mill turns out 75,000 clothespins daily; twenty-six mills make shoe pegs, wooden caps and gauge for children use $500,000 worth annually, buckets $1,000,000, farm implements $25,000,000 worth in wagons and carriages and $20,000,000 worth of wood making cider boxes, which are thrown away as soon as emptied; in Maine $2,000,000 worth to make the bads our shoes are made on, spruce to make about 1,000 tons of paper per day.

In view of these solid facts, state granges should every where hold these first endeavors to further any efforts made by the state toward the protection of our forests.

GRANGE JURISDICTION.

An Important Matter That Should Have Careful Attention.

The territory immediately surrounding a grange hall should be as well cared for by another grange in adjoining for members. A grange has a right to retain jurisdiction over such troubles as lie close to it and who can get to its meeting place more conveniently than to find another grange. The further away grange should also respect jurisdiction and encourage appeals to apply to the nearest grange.

In a case where Mr. and Mrs. A. are admitted to join grange No. 1 although living four miles from it and only one mile from grange No. 2 and with no obstacle to prevent them from attending No. 2, it is plain that No. 2 has jurisdiction over them. Unless No. 2 is willing upon request from No. 1 to waive jurisdiction No. 1 should notify Mr. and Mrs. A. to enter for membership in the nearest grange. I also says the Pennsylvania organ of the state grange. And we agree.

Where there is more than one grange in a township, though there should be none nearer together than four miles, but when town lines extend from the meeting place of one grange it should be understood that each grange has jurisdiction halfway to any adjoining grange, and neither grange should intrude on a jurisdiction of the other.

Grange Day at New York State Fair.

The New York state fair opens one day on the programme to the grange. A large tent is erected every year in which the Patrons place the addresses made this year on Sept. 17 were by Professor Cornell, Master Brim of New York, who welcomed the grangers; Hon. S. S. Norton, Hon. F. A. Derthick and Hon. Aaron Jones, master of the national grange. The women's work committee of the state grange had a meeting the same day in the women's rooms on the fair grounds and presented a most pleasing musical and literary programme.

Preparing For National Grange.

New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are making preparations to send large classes for the seventh degree to the meeting of the national grange in Atlantic City N. J. to-morrow (Sat. Aug. 24 the Pennsylvania state grange held a special session at West Chester, Pa., for the purpose of conferring the sixth degree on a class of 225 candidates. The New York state grange will probably hold a special session at Rochester, site of Newburg in October for a like purpose. New Jersey will also send a large delegation.

F. A. Derthick, master O. R. G. and member of the executive committee of the national grange, was the speaker of the entire membership of the Union in the place his loss occasioned by the death of his wife, which occurred recently.

The Southport (Pa.) subordinate grange is presenting to town $500 in a new hall, 40 by 60 feet, three stories high, with a Farmers' exchange on the first floor.

Columbia grange, No. 33, Bradford county, Pa., initiated 123 candidates during the last quarter and received also by dance and money by organization. (Good record)

After an exciting revolver bout with Postmaster Rossiter, the two well-known men who lodged at the Alden penitentiary Sunday night made their escape in the darkness about 2 o'clock next morning. Ten dollars in money and $25 in stamps were secured.

A tender collision occurred at Hoyne Pulp last Thursday between two Grand Rapids & Indiana freight locals through unknown orders. Forty cars were demolished and both engines were disabled. A carload of wood alcohol exploded and fire immediately started, burning the wreckage.

Probate Judge Fay E. Hall of Petoskey will die for an example of guilt and hatchet. An alleged bad hatchet was brought in from his farm where a village sitting machine had cut off two fingers. At 1 o'clock he had left the hospital with his fingers dressed and at 3 o'clock he took the train for the state capital of the judge of probate at Flint.

The famous Central Lake log case has been decided by Judge Mayne, in favor of the defendant, H. A. Dorr. The latter was sued some a year ago for keeping boom in the village limits contrary to ordinance. Before Justice Clark he confessed, though Leavitt & Gorie of that place, that the ordinance was invalid. Justice Clark believed it but did discharge the prisoner. Later Dorr was restrained, and before another justice was convicted. He appealed to the circuit court, and now Judge Mayne has tossed down his decision as above stated, holding the ordinance as void.

Arrangements have just been completed whereby Indian City has another substantial addition to its already large list of wood working industries. The White Veneer Co., is the name and work has been started on the erection of the buildings. The company proposes to manufacture the best grade of hard veneering. The officers are President, W. H. White; vice pres. and supt. A. A. Howard; treasurer, R. V. White; secretary, W. L. Martin. All are residents of Hoyne City except Mr. Howard, who is from Mt. Pleasant. The company expects to start with a force of men forty to sixty men.

Lead poisoning caused by using condensed milk, is said to be responsible for the death of the six months old twins of Archie Janovich of Muskegon, the contractor in the Octoberly breakwater. The little girls died within a few hours of each other Sunday. Archibald imparts item with his wife and three children to Octoberly during the work of saving the breakwater. They had been accustomed to feeding the twin baby girls on condensed milk, as the supply around more uniform and the warm season made it difficult to keep fresh milk. Sunday night both children were taken with spasms, but seemed to recover. The spasms recurred, giving evidence of metallic poison, but though every relief was sought, they died one after another. A double funeral was held from St. Francis Catholic church.

It would not be surprised at seeing 50 steam jackets this fall in Michigan," said a Greenville shipper to an News and Express representative during morning. "In fact I am expecting that quotations before the shipping season is nearly over will be 50. This opinion is based upon conditions in Michigan as well as conditions in other sections of the country. There is a shortage in the yield in Michigan, according to the Greenville shipper, and potatoes are leaving Montcalm county to supply a demand over in the "should" country, for the first time in many years around Bay City and Saginaw and even down into the Detroit delightful food. This shortage, in connection with the known shortage in other potato producing states and auctions furnishes the suggestion for the seventy-five cent quotation that would not be surprising to the Greenville man. In the Cadillac market, the offering are twenty-eight and thirty cents, according to the counts, white and red. There are two cents in advance of the quotation of last week, twenty six and twenty-eight, and suggests the influence of the feeling at Greenville may be reaching up into this Cadillac.

The "six hundred footer" will make an appearance among lake carriers in the spring of 1906, when all cargo records will again be broken by the new steam carrier. The Pickands Mather Steamship Company, the auxiliary of the United Steel corporation which attends to the lake carrying trade of the mighty steel organization, has contracted with the American Shipbuilding Company for the construction of twin steamers having an over-all length of 600 feet, a keel length of 590 feet, a width of 58 feet, and a depth of 32 feet. It is estimated that the new boat will carry 12,000 tons of ore on a draught of 30 feet, and that each will be able to travel the distance between Duluth and Cleveland in 90 hours, or 5 days and 6 hours, the time now required by the fastest of Milwaukee and Chicago. With the 600 mark attained, there will be renewed speculation as to the maximum limit of length in the capabilities handling of freighters by a dock outlook trade with docks of water and better room at each end of the route, the stretching out of the large lake steamers seemed to continue until the proportion of depth to length is reduced to the danger line. The freight handling facilities of the great ore ports are sufficient for the handling of any cargo that a lake vessel can carry, but if large centers are expected to take advantage of giant freights as well as ore freights, the requirements of navigation to send them the necessary depth to enter, and the improvement of harbors to receive the enormous lake boats, and these may be the subject matter of the next river and harbor bill, the biggest bill on the table.

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

CHAPTER SIX.—Continued.

"A fortune! How can you talk so? I have no fortune!" he said.

He flushed and paled alternately in evening dress. He looked a very well-born young gentleman, and Mary felt a thrill of pride in him.

"Mr. Hedley, I know what I am about. I love you, and I want you to love me. Will you?"

Mr. Hedley was silent. He was very much in love with the girl who was offering herself so frankly to him, but he was a man of honor, and he felt that he could not ask a poor girl to share his poverty. He had his own way to make, and he had no right to drag her down with him. He had seen many a man ruined by a poor marriage, and he was a man who had his own ideas of marriage. He loved Mary too well to do a dishonorable thing by her.

"Mary, I love you with all my heart, but I cannot—I cannot—ask you to share my poverty. I have my way to make, and I have no right to drag you down with me. I—I cannot do it. I love you too much to do it."

"Why, Mr. Hedley, you are a regular old-fashioned gentleman! You mean right and I respect you for it, but I think you might know that I know more about my own heart than you do. I love you, and I want you to love me in return. Will you?"

Hedley had never seen a more charming picture than this girl presented as she stood before him. Her eyes were full of tears, her lips were tremulous with her passionate love for him. He had never felt so strongly the charm of her beauty as at this moment, when he was trying to do the right thing by her.

BUSINESS KEEPS UP

Finance, Trade, Manufacturing and Transportation Reflect the Splendid Workings of Our Tariff System, Resulting in Another Record Breaking Year.

The present situation in finance, trade and industry is the enough vindication of the tariff made by people tonight in case the tariff were let alone. Business is review recently made.

"Confidence in the future still continues. Expect it is good reason, because and large, building is going on, and still with enough on the market trades of product material and are come down this summer."

In other words, the back revival above the hopeless one are being business and even recent are being forward in some instances.

Says the Springfield Republican under its editorial caption, "Favorable Trade in the Fiscal Year":

"Through a striking coincidence at exports of cotton and grain, as compared with a year ago, the balance of trade of the country is currently enjoying quite as favorable a showing as ever last year, or even the year before the gain in exports is only about $42,000,000, while that of imports is increasing.

"So it has been much after month and year after year since the Dingley law was enacted, and it is evidently in expect of manufactures in the very most so much doubted by reformers and free traders. The Republican party, when and for sacrifices, barely escaped the abandonment of the tariffing law in 1897, has a second arm of the economic issue, and, contrary to the very lamentable fears, continually dropped more revenue than by some each happy disappointment as the situation in recent has presented.

"The chance of this happening will not be shown in calling attention to this continued disappointment of the apparently unlucky in material, large or just balances in the foreign trade. The point is not of a continuing fact by and the same effective now or, no doubt, to be subject to a modification of the tariff."

The way the Republican the decades of the Dingley tariff was compelled to our economic experience on the subject was remarkably clear. Not in the 1896 of large favorable balances on all exports of the year, and the foreign trade, which depend in most Democratic year and the balance with our gold. The Republicans made the issue "Dingleyism" and "no improvement," and you should that in the end people decided that, after a years of satisfactory business, the effort to operate a modification of the tariff."

Fallacy of New England's New Idea of Reciprocity.

Lafayette Young, editor and proprietor of the Des Moines (Iowa) Capital, is a guest of the Tremont House while in Boston. The Young party is a distinguished one, for Mr. Young is a leading Republican and a personal friend of President Roosevelt, and he has delivered some addresses on the Administration's policy of reciprocity.

"This is my first visit to Boston," said Mr. Young, "and I have spent a few days in Boston in the interest of the Republican party. I found that the sentiment here is very much in accord with our views.

"I could not help but think what a mistake it was to have the Republican party with the other members of the Tariff Revision Commission, when it is proposed with other parts of the country to have a tariff revision, which seems to have taken the form of a tariff revision.

"The Republican party is the party of protection, and it is the party which has brought the country to the position it now occupies. The Democratic party would have come in to revise the tariff, and they would have gone to the other extreme, and would have injured the industries of the country.

"Now, we have a great nation in New England and the West, in a land rich in natural resources, and we have the power to give adequate protection to the manufacturers of the country. Now, we have the example of South Carolina and Georgia, and other Southern States, in the cotton industry. But when New England wants to make changes in the tariff, it simply means the manufacturers of New England are looking for something the only form which they can get protection, and that is to hold out to the western farmer for the purpose of either manufacturing goods for him or to get rid of the industries and sell them out. Now, I am in favor of reciprocity, but I believe in an arrangement the New Republican party has proposed.

"The fact is, as all prominent men know, that a tariff which does not protect will not pay. Now, the Dingley law, we only have not enough protection to some extent, but we have rather of been in what be considered a reasonable protection, and we have prosperity advanced the trade. I mean reciprocity in some form, I believe in it, but I believe with Theodore Roosevelt and other Republicans, that we should be careful in reciprocity in manufactured goods. Such reciprocity goes against the Dingley law. The Dingley law is the best measure in the history of the Republican party, and there is not a tariff on any part of it for any purpose to anything.

"Every thrift maker performed in the region in making an income for American goods, and it is good reciprocity. I think the Republicans will be unanimously for the Dingley law, which has already proved to be a great success

KANSAS CITY JUNK DEALER HAS TONGUE ALMOST CUT OFF.

Woman Alleg Whom He Had Cleaned-Mandolinos Take Infinite Service Injury Shot Dead Scribbed and Thrown Into Swamp.

Because he refused to reconsider business arrangements in such a way as to benefit his former wife, Jacob Ross was badly cut about the face and tongue by a razor in the hands of Mrs. Ross, at Kansas City, Kan., Thursday morning, and the woman is now in the county jail charged with assault with intent to kill. Ross was on his way to his junk shop when his former wife met him and began a quarrel. Without warning she drew a razor and slashed at his face. Ross ran, but she followed him and continued her attack. He was badly cut about the face and tongue, and the wound in his tongue will probably cause him to lose the use of his tongue. Mrs. Ross was taken to the police station, where she was locked up. Ross was taken to a hospital. Ross and his wife separated a year ago, and he has been trying to get a divorce. He charges that she has been annoying him for some time. Ross is a well-to-do junk dealer, and his place of business is one of the landmarks. The men engaged in the business remember when John F. Ross, the Mad Water Saxe-Smith plant, and Edward Brooks, living in Hammond, were considered employees of the company for many years. The amount of the Ross dealer business could be limited for excuse as at Twelfth and Grand, intending to go to his home in Fairfield, Ia., but called Mrs. Ross on the friend of Ross and the latter, he asserted, persuaded him to file for one of its bonds

Retirement Provision for Civil Service.

Written to the Sentinel:

To the editor of the Sentinel it must have appeared that Civil Service reform has received a far larger share of the discussion than its importance merits. But it is inevitable that in a Democracy questions of government should be paramount, and what, after questions of policy, can be more important than the running of the machinery. Civil Service reform as a National policy never rested on more secure basis than at the present moment with its most ardent advocate in the White House.

A prerequisite to any stable growth is a secure foundation, and it would seem that the advocates of a retirement provision had every reason to be hopeful today, being assured of the stability of service in the Civil Service. Retirement legislation has been knocking in Congress for the past seven or eight years, and while nothing has been definitely adopted in this field, the indorsement of the policy has been steadily increasing.

It is a purpose to show that present conditions in the Civil Service demand and must constantly tend to demand a satisfactory solution of the question. How shall we dispose of those no longer able to perform the duties of their office? That a retirement bill furnishes a solution of this question is not in the minds of the American in its policy and is economically expedient.

At an early period of the agitation the Senate's committee developed the fact that in the Interior Department alone "something over two hundred and fifty persons now on the rolls must be considered as permanently incapacitated either physically or mentally, for the performance of material labor in whole or in part." The number was doubtless underestimated, for they would not so rank any one who could regularly perform his duties in any manner possible and would not be hesitant to publicly charge themselves with maintaining a large number of employes at the government expense, who were offering no services in return. One of the treasury officials is reported to have said: "There are few if any offices in one division could reach the third floor if by chance all the elevators stopped running." When we consider that Civil Service reform is only 22 years old in the United States and that it is only during the past decade that it has become established and recognized institution here, we can begin to anticipate the results which must surely follow. The language quoted is unattractive, but it is the strength of the plant itself. Those who say that the clerk will be discharged as soon as he is unable to perform his duties fail to reckon with the association of office life and the force at their relief. A chief of a bureau will not recommend to be dismissed an old and faithful clerk whose physical or mental condition is such as to make him a recipient of charity therefore, especially when that clerk has created his sympathies by the close contact of office life for many years. Our own experience and the experience of Europe shows that we cannot hope for a solution of this difficulty by discharging these old clerks as soon as they are unable to perform their full duties for it is believed that this would be the best solution even if it were possible. The practical legislator must recognize the fact and deal with it accordingly, just as life insurance companies finding that in spite of the aspirations and hopes of youth the great majority of men are in need of assistance in old age, developed the term endowment policy to meet this need. We have left then two possible forms of solution. A retirement fund supported at additions expense to the government and supported at the expense of the clerks, or deducting a sufficient percentage of their salaries. While these two forms are stated as two distinct methods and are commonly so considered, it is believed that there is no difference in principle. In the one case the government assumes that the clerk is not adequately paid today, and it offers the increase in the form of "deferred pay" in the other method the present pay is deemed adequate and a portion is kept back in the form of "deferred pay." So that the question is not of the present inquiry, is, whether it would be better for the government service to offer the full salaries from month to month, or to retain a portion for a retirement fund, which will be paid after certain periods of service under certain conditions. Strictly speaking, it is not a pension at all that is proposed today, at least, not within the terms of the famous definition of Dr. Johnson. "An allowance made to anyone without an equivalent," but is simply another means of recompensing labor for services rendered. If the opposition to a Civil Pension Law has come from the fear that this was an insincere backed attempt to increase salaries when the present were adequate, then the opposition has been just and the provision should be supplied from the compensation now given to the clerks. Some one has said that "Republics are ungrateful." That they are so is due to the very nature of their being. Things which cannot be measured, which have no definite commercial value in its relations with the employed should not be considered any more than large business corporations consider these elements. Of course the business firm has from grounds of enlightened selfishness found that it was to its advantage to have its employes contented with their work; to have them directly interested in the success and life of the enterprise, and to secure this end it has gratefully increased their wages, provided a payment on the profit sharing basis and the like, but all these methods have resulted in a definite commercial return. Assuming then that we are to apply no other test to a retirement bill for government clerks than that which a business man in the open competition of the world would apply if in charge of the force, however narrow such a view may seem of the situation, it cannot at least be criticized as Un-American, but can, as opponents offer recognize the justice of the claim it can be justified by such standards.

By taking away the urgent necessity of making a provision for old age the clerks will offer just that much more time and energy to the government, and thus which they would otherwise feel obliged to spend in business speculation and investigation to increase their little store for the provision of a rainy day." While it may result in some clerks being retained who are unpaidand on account of the work required, their number will doubtless be less than the present proportion, and we shall have this effect a hundred times over, by the more cheerful and careful work of the great majority. Cheerful because of the assurance that when they are too aged able to perform their duties they will be provided for, and doubly careful for fear of endangering that provision, there would be less inclination for men to enter the service for the purpose of supplying them salaries with funds to engage in business, or to give them a start in their profession, when a portion of their salary would be lost because of their early resignation. Today when a man enters the government service, especially if a young man, he does so merely as a temporary expedient and in consequently his spare hours are spent not in devising plans for letting up the service or fitting himself for a higher position therein, but in preparing himself for his chosen career. While many such find themselves still on the government pay rolls when they have reached middle age, this is due to the difficulty of finding an opening in business, which is usually lucrative with the clerkship. Thus having spent the formative period of his life in fitting himself for something else he comes to accept the government position as the inevitable, and it is just the reminder of his days in a position he never desired or expected to fill. The occupation would itself assume the character of a profession as it has abroad, which would thereby attract a better class of men, who would enter upon their duties with the intention of permanently remaining on the rolls and fit themselves accordingly. That such a result is not purely speculative is born out by the experience of England. Edgar Bates in the National Review for 1895 pointed out that "The liberal terms of superannuation offered in England have in a good measure been a means of attention to good and able men to enter the service" and one of his chief arguments for the retention of the system was to prevent men able and qualified men." From throwing up their appointments by reason of a portion of their salary being held back in the shape of deferred pay. The fact that good men will prefer to work for a decreased salary with a provision for old age has also been born out by the experience of the European countries amongst the teachers. Not many years ago a German scholar refused to become a professor at Harvard College without some provision being made for his old age, as showing the effect which an old age pension has on a continental mind. Today Harvard College maintains a liberal system of pensions after twenty years service and this example is being discussed and adopted by the various colleges and schools throughout the country. When we see a careful and well managed corporation like the Pennsylvania Railroad set aside to addition to assistance $900,000 per year for a retirement fund, we may take for granted that there is something more in a retirement system than a generous and philanthropic desire to see those who have spent from twenty to forty years in diligent service, sufficiently provided for in old age. The Q. of Alfred Dodge tells us of New York, which supports a system of insurance and pensions for its employes, justifies the expenditure on the ground, 2. That the principle is that the employer, the industry, should provide against the depreciation of the employes and for their continuance and development just as he does for the manufacturing plant, and as a certain percent is set aside against this latter depreciation so a similar present on the wage fund should be set aside to be devoted to a similar service in respect to the employes."

It is estimated that if omnibus bill introduced during the 56th congress should become a law it would result in 4,000 immediate retirements with that many appointments and 20,000 promotions if the same force were retained. This would ultimately effect to the younger clerks and coming which might be necessary in case the retirement fund were supported at their expense and would permit the government to recognize merit just that much sooner. This result could not but furnish a strong inducement to better service and a more equitable distribution of work and compensation.

A retirement system would undoubtedly be desirable, especially in the United States even if it were obliged to pay part of the expense of maintaining it in addition to the present salaries. The retirement of the superannuated clerks would result in a reduction of the working force and many of the salaries now paid would go into the retirement fund. It would result in elevating the service and thereby attracting a more permanent and better class of employes, who would be induced to offer their best services to reap the benefit of retirement. The one point in the European systems is that they all have retirement provisions but even excepting republican France or the Swiss Cantons. Thus we see that we are in the point of an ever increasing demand for and acceptance of the pension system, when we have established a stability of tenure in any vocation which is not extinct to public or private institutions, monarchies or republics. When in addition to the benefits to be reaped by the government we consider the advantage to the individual it would seem as if there was everything in favor of a retirement system. An English writer has said, "There is a sanguine element or element of fearlessness lying deep in the character of Englishmen and we are told also of Americans, that exempts them from that apprehension of poverty in old age which haunts the minds of the poor belonging to other races." This observation is born out by the large number of government clerks who have drawn from $1,000 to $1800 per year for twenty five or thirty years and at the end of that period are not yet showing of their monthly salary. To discharge clerks of this class would be to confign them to a life of poverty and reliance on charity when a ready means was offered of making provision for them. "Of course, society owes it to humanity, owes it to itself, that, so far as it is consistent with the good of all none of its members should be allowed to suffer, society recognizes this obligation in a thousand ways." Here we have a variously which is not a charity any more than a term endowment policy supported by the clerk himself would be a charity and which will not, therefore, degrade its recipient. Nor is it any more socialistic than the whole theory of insurance which relies attempts to offer to each individual an exact money equivalent for what he has paid in.

By a retirement provision we have a solution of the increasing difficulties of finding a satisfactory way out of the service for those who are no longer able to perform its duties and an incentive for better men to enter and render more efficient work during their term.

Scott Woodward living near Traverse City is exhibiting some corn stalks that have quite an interesting history. They are about 10 feet tall and have from four to eight sets on each. Two years ago, while George Ely, father of Charles Ely of this city, was prospecting in Arizona, the party dug into one of the many mounds found there, and found a mummy. Among other things buried with it were eight kernels of corn. Mr. Ely took four of the kernels and planted them at his western home, and when his old Chester of this city was visiting him last winter, he secured some of the seed and gave it to Mr. Woodward, who has raised about 200 ears. The stalk grows to an extreme hight and appears rank and thrifty, but on account of the short season in this section the corn does not mature. The corn is neither a yellow, dent, nor red, but the kernels are a sort of copper color and are between a kernel of popcorn and the common field corn in size.

CHILD MARRIAGES IN INDIA.

Inconceivably Sad Life to Which Widows are Condemned.

More than 250,000 girls in India, a score of age or less, were married when the last census was taken, and of these necessarily many have become widows. Between 10 and 15 years the number of married girls was well over 1,000,000, between 15 and 20 years it had risen to nearly [illegible] of [illegible] to the girls in the 250,000 two-year-old matrimony, not nothing more than a contract written upon for them in others long before they themselves were capable of understanding the meaning of them and been bound by engagements which they were not conscious of in their name, and even, been married before they were born.

Most of the widows of such tender years become so before they know what marriage means, and in the thousands of such cases in the Indian Empire [illegible] Hindu widows are condemned to a life of hardship, of unmerited shame and of [illegible] Hindu Scripture.

Though the English law in India would recognize the legality of a marriage of three years old, the widow inevitable remains forever; it will be more than a sin. There are in India at this moment thousands of widows under 15 years, many of whom never knew more than 3 years old.

Obedience a Help.

There is a woman down in Indiana who is hale and hearty at the age of 106, and when she was asked to what she attributed her age and health she replied, "Obedience." And that, too, at a time when the women are having the word "obey" taken out of the marriage service and in other ways evincing the most supreme contempt for the old old profession. It is not to be believed that there are many women who will care to drag out an existence of 106 years in a state of obedience, even if a fair degree of health be assured. The lady mentioned do not act as how long the women lived, although we know that Sarah survived until she was 127 and was so obedient that the Lord blessed her with large when she was 90. And it is fair to suppose that Sarah good Hebrew wives were equally good and well understood. This we see that obedience is of the utmost importance to our human race and is the source of happiness and prosperity. But the women of this age are extremely self-willed and unreasonable.

Increasing Cost of Battleships.

The cost of a battleship some decades ago is in striking contrast with that of today. A few years ago it cost in England from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000, but the necessity of the situation arises that the King Edward VII Dreadnaught would cost $1,500,000 more than the Dreadnaught, though the value of a battleship will be little under $10,000,000.

LATEST BATTLE CRY

CHANGE OF ECONOMIC POLICY TOWARD OTHER NATIONS.

The Chicago Reciprocity Conference Promoted and Manipulated by Interests Which Make No Secret of Their Hostility to the Republican Policy of Protection.

The New York Herald, justly famous for the comprehensiveness and accuracy of its news reports, discusses the recent trade of the country in the following statement from its Chicago correspondent, dated of August 12.

"There is a little difference of opinion as to the comparative importance and influence of the reciprocity convention which is to be held at the Union League Club (Aug. 15) next Wednesday and Thursday. Promoters of the movement are intensely enthusiastic concerning its outcome. They are enthusiastically convinced that as a result of the deliberations of the body there will be a change in the tariff policy of the country, favorable to a more liberal policy than has been in force either under a Democratic or a Republican administration in late years.

"By others it is regarded as the mere venting of the Free Trade idea which the Democratic party has made its stock in trade since the Civil War, and which, if it should be put into effect, would be a material addition to our tariff policy, and the point arises whether a revision would not, forsooth, effect the purpose of obtaining broader markets for our manufactures of our farms and forests. There is no subject which has been more positive serious questions, and knowing that weeks toward these ends, the Chicago Conference promises to be momentous.

"Only a few years ago the idea of reciprocity in its most comprehensive sense was regarded as a dangerous innovation. It was opposed in the Chicago Conference of 1899 by a majority of the delegates, and was defeated by a vote of 2 to 1. Since then the sentiment has been in favor of reciprocity, and the Chicago Conference was a very different body from that of 1899. Now it will come back to Chicago, and it will be a body representing the business interests of the country, and it will be composed of men who believe that the time has come when a change in our tariff policy should be made, and that the Republican party should be the party to make the change, if it is to be made at all. It will be composed of men who believe that the Republican party and administration are the appropriate agents for the general consideration of the question in 1906—that is when the Chicago conference was called to order.

Protection Means Business.

Much discussion during the years when the German-Wilson tariff was in operation arranged less than 200 days, and the new tariff bill, which was passed in a remarkably short time, was framed with a view to correcting the evils of the German-Wilson tariff, which had caused the business interests of the country to demand a change. Protection means business, and the business interests of the country, represented in the Chicago conference, are now demanding that the protection policy of the Republican party be so modified as to make it more liberal than it has been in the Dingley tariff, and that the Republican party and administration be the agents for the general consideration of the question in 1906—that is when the Chicago conference was called to order.

Gets Gas From Vesuvius

Prof. Jaussen, an astronomer attached to the Observatory at Mt. Vesuvius, recently made some interesting observations on Mt. Vesuvius. He ascended to the crater of Vesuvius, and examined very carefully the crater and external gases given off by the volcano. He had been making observations from a deep well, with a chalk crucible. His observations were made in a great depth, and then by an ingenious arrangement, at where the crucible was closed after having been opened and closed after having in gas.

LINSEED OIL TRUST.

Another Rockefeller Monopoly Not Fostered by the Tariff.

In replying to a question from the office of a Hopkinsville newspaper in regard to the tariff on linseed oil, and in answering the usual course of the Democratic tariff reform cry that the tariff on linseed oil is responsible for the trust, Congressman Vandiver said:

"Not one cent of the money of that company is due to the tariff on linseed oil. Rockefeller has even been accused of having made the tariff on linseed oil, if so, he did not do it for the benefit of the trust. It was on the Chicago Tribune, namely, that the tariff on linseed oil was raised, and on the ground that the Rockefeller trust was formed. The Rockefeller trust is a monopoly of American industry, which, because of the fact that foreign competition has always been weak because of the fact that linseed oil is a product of the soil, the price of oil on the market is fixed upon what it costs to produce it in the west. It is admitted that the trust has gained control of the domestic market, and that it is able to dictate the price of linseed oil, but it is a mere assertion that the trust owes a great deal of its success to the tariff on linseed oil. The Rockefeller trust is not a monopoly of the tariff, but of the domestic producers in the United States. Canada and Argentina are the chief competitors of the American producers in the linseed oil market. Canada and Argentina are not protected by the tariff on linseed oil, and yet the Rockefeller trust is able to dictate the price of linseed oil in those countries. The Rockefeller trust is a monopoly of American industry, and yet it is not protected by the tariff on linseed oil

An Ely Rapids gue ehed is said to have given artist orders to the members of his company to never again take steps toward fighting a fire till he is there to supervise and direc.

A party of surveyors started out last Monday to figure distances and angles of the line and set stakes for the pole line to Charlevoix that will carry the lighting and power current from the electric plant to be put in at Bellaire by Henry Richards.

Last Monday the Central Lake Canning Company received 97 wagon-loads of sweet corn, making a total of 190,000 pounds or approximately 105 tons, and it is taxing the ability of the help to hook this fast enough to keep it out of the way of the cutters. Last Saturday this factory used 20,000 cans.

Burglars entered the general store of Sweet & Son of Eastport Thursday night, relieved the cash drawer of a small amount and attempted to dynamite the safe. Dynamite never heard the noise and got after the robbers, with a revolver that would not go off but served most of his collateral. No attempt was made to pursue the robbers.

Elk Rapids Progress. Capt. Joseph Hawley has decided to accept a bonus presented to the boards of supervisors of Kalkaska and Antrim counties, asking that money be appropriated by each county to be used in dredging and improving Torch river. This stream has been gradually filling in since south there is not enough water for the safe passage of the boats. The large number of results on the Inland lakes, and their constant increase, makes this improvement a necessity.

Elk Rapids Progress. Friday afternoon Mrs. A. S. Dougherty and daughter Lottie had a fortunate escape from what might have been a most serious accident. While driving near John F. Boyd's agricultural implement warehouse the king bolt of their carriage suddenly broke and let the front of the carriage drop. Mrs. Charlotte was thrown over the dashboard into the dust, but escaped with slight bruises. Mrs. Dougherty was not thrown out and aside from the fright escaped entirely. The horse was stopped by parties at John F. Boyd's.

Potatoes are a failure in the upper peninsula. The latest advices indicate that the crop will not be more than 50 per cent of that harvested a year ago. Wet weather which brought on a blight is blamed for the rot that has affected the crop. In some instances where the yield has been fair the tubers are of poor keeping quality. Thousands of bushels must be imported this winter to supply the demand. Farmers in Mackinac, Schoolcraft and Delta counties will grow potatoes enough next year. A representative of a biscuit company is now in these counties looking contracts, agreeing to pay the market price next fall.

Petoskey Record. The death of Mrs. Josephine Crakes, whom took place here Saturday morning, was one of the saddest that has occurred here for some time. Last April, as she and her husband were driving to their home in Elmira from a convention they had been attending, their horse became frightened and they were thrown out of a wagon. Mrs. Crakes receiving injuries that caused paralysis of her entire body, excepting the head. She was brought to Lockwood Hospital June 20, and no pains were spared to restore her to health, but the efforts were unavailing. Mr. Crakes bought a home near Bay shore a short time before the accident, but this was disposed of at considerable loss when it was found that she would never be able to live there. She leaves three children, beside her husband. The remains were shipped to Elmira Monday morning, and the funeral was held Monday afternoon. She was forty-eight years, six months and five days old.

Bellaire Independent. The preliminary work toward installing the power plant for furnishing electric current for light and power purposes at Charlevoix was begun by Henry Richardson Monday, by the beginning of the construction of a bridge across the river just above the bridge street bridge. With the completion of the next step in the tearing out of the bridge across the race at the west end of the Bellaire Woodenware Co's factory. The driving of piling for the wheel pit comes next, and several hundred piles will be put down. On this wheelpit the power house will set, and will be a concrete building for the electric generating plant, the pumps of the Bellaire Water Supply also also others. The driving of the piles will begin next week. The work of importing and strengthening the present dam will also begin next week. The present dam will be strengthened with earth. A concrete wall will be built on the upper side of it, that, as a note for the dam has passed, and has another embankment of earth will be added on the upper side of that—i e., on the upstream side. It is expected the work on this will be done in about a month after work begins.

Cadillac News. Information which the News and Express has sought and secured from well informed sources during the past few days leads us to the opinion that potatoes in Cadillac and this immediate vicinity should bring fifty cents per bushel to the growers, but one hardly be expected to pass the half dollar figure. It comes to us from New York that the limit of expectation there is sixty cents, and fifty cents in Cadillac would mean at least sixty in New York. It is stated that potatoes can be imported at present foreign prices and sold in New York at sixty cents. Advices from Cincinnati and other large trading points in the central states are similar to the same effect, that conditions will not justify the expectation of a higher price than fifty cents in southern Michigan. The price has not yet been touched here and may not, but it seems to be the reasonable limit of expectation on the part of both growers and buyers.

In a recent write-up of Ely Rapids we were pleased to find the following comment regarding the business of the Elk Cement and Lime Co. After three or four years of ups and downs, mostly downs, by the way, the plant of the Elk Cement & Lime Co. under its present management, seems to be more than successful. Their output, Elk River cement as it is now, they are running out over 200 barrels per day, a meeting with universal favor and having large sales wherever introduced. In fact the Upper Peninsula representative of the famous Atlas cement, wishes to discontinue the sale of the latter in that section and secure the exclusive sale of Elk cement in its stead, so satisfactory has, the cement been in use. Michigan with the product of our factory, Homer Sly, the general manager of the plant, informs us that their sales have so far exceeded their expectations that it has been necessary to take their traveling representative off the road to enable them to catch up with their orders.

By the accidental discharge of a shotgun with which he was playing in company with a neighbor boy, Roy Wilson, aged 16, was killed one evening last week. Roy Wilson is the son of George Wilson, who lives two miles north of Central Lake. His playmate was Lloyd Figler, whose home is but a short distance away. Both young Figler's parents are visiting in Ohio and the boy, who is about 17 years old, was left alone, with the exception of a sick brother in the adjoining room. The two boys had the gun, which was a lively 5 bader, and were endeavoring to "break" it. It seems that the Wilson boy was sitting in a rocking chair with the muzzle against his breast. The other boy was helping him. It is thought that the gun was cocked, as it was discharged while the boys were endeavoring to open it, probably to see whether there was a cartridge in it or not. At the charge struck the Wilson boy just above the left nipple, entering the heart and coming out of the back just below his shoulder. Despite the nature of the wound, he lingered for fully five minutes after the shooting.

Insignificant Speeches at the Chicago Reciprocity Conference by a Republican United States Senator and the Governor of a Republican State.

Two speeches of more than ordinary significance were delivered at the Chicago reciprocity conference. The speeches of greater or less eloquence were delivered there, but none so thing which an artificially built effort the tendency to struggle and stand from sound party doctrine as the speeches of Messrs Shelby M Cullom and Albert E. Cummins. Men with two conspicuous republicans in attendance upon a distinctly anti-McKinley gathering, and contributing their utmost toward the aims of that remarkable. It was a matter of comment that the supporters of Kansas should furnish the failure of his scheme for reciprocity negotiation through a lack of the sort of reciprocity Hughes. That Hanna of Kansas and Lodge of Massachusetts free raider and Senator Dave Hanna should call back allegiance to the mark was natural and to be expected. But Messrs. Cullom and Cummins are supposed to be orthodox. Mr. Cullom is the leader of Republican orthodoxy in the politics state of Illinois, and Mr. Cummins is the acknowledged leader of republican orthodoxy of Iowa. When these men attempt to make the cause of the Republican party and Republican policy in a proposition for the abandonment of the very protest that has principle the event takes on an aspect of some importance.

For Senator Cullom allowance should be made. He is a candidate for reelection and at his home in Illinois. He manifest greater the Hanna element in his Illinois constituents. Cummins is not so fortunate. He is a candidate for reelection and at his home in Iowa. Cullom never was a close friend of McKinley and never was in well-grounded personal favor. He has supported republican tariff measures and accepted democratic tariff measures but never has taken any important part in tariff making. He has been himself to be a protectionist. He never has made any show that reciprocity in competitive products is a measure of protectionism. In the course of his speech Senator Cullom said:

"I venture that the tariff rates are sufficiently high to withstand the foreign reciprocal arrangements with Central and South American countries and with European nations as well. * * * I have, Gov. what I said previously, not I was opposed to some reciprocity I shall favor the enactment of an act of reciprocity for a maximum tariff to be applicable to every nation that discriminates against our products.

It will be noticed that the sentiment from the beginning and even earlier in the economic points. If the Chicago idea, as he calls it, is carried to the finish to serve as the maximum, there is no other maximum tariff. Will be raised for purposes of retaliation. All that would be needed would be the enactment of an act of congress authorizing the imposing of the duty[illegible] on a nation sufficient to discriminate against the United States. This would enable the President to raise the duty on any product of any country which complained of discrimination against our products.

Governor Cummins of Iowa was more explicit. He said:

"I believe that the time has arrived when we should make a tariff for revenue only. I believe that the time has arrived when we should make a tariff for revenue only. I believe that the time has arrived when we should make a tariff for revenue only.

THE PASSING FRAME HOUSE.

Firewood Construction Putting It Aside on Account of Cheapness.

The firewood construction is now nearly as obsolescent as Home rule—nearly as much of a dream as Home rule. Only a few years ago it was common enough to find in the pleasant suburbs of London, and in the more or less rural districts within a reasonable distance of the metropolis, houses entirely of timber, with the interstices filled in with plaster. Of late years the cost of timber has risen so much that the thing has become impossible. In Washington the cost of a modest dwelling was stated at $5,000 more than a brick house of the same size and pretension. The Indian Department, Bureau of Ethnology, recently built a house for the use of its chief ethnologist, Dr. Hrdlicka, at a cost of $1,800 for frame and $3,000 for brick. The Department of Agriculture, in Washington, has a greenhouse devoted to the culture of orchids, which was started at a cost of $1,500 for frame and $3,000 for brick. The Bureau of Ethnology, in Washington, has a building for its exhibits, which was started at a cost of $1,500 for frame and $3,000 for brick. The Bureau of Ethnology recently built a house for

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Traverse City has concluded to go after a government breakwater.

The Elk Rapids Iron Company find it necessary to add to their capacity for producing charcoal, and six new kilns will be built this fall.

The board of supervisors of Antrim county, in session at Bellaire, have voted to levy a total of $153,000 in taxes this year as follows: Contingent fund, $25,000; building fund, $1,000; poor fund, $5,000; bonds and interest, $6,250.

Bellaire independent: It is expected there will be a preliminary hearing the latter part of the week before Judge Mayne in the injunction case brought by Dr. J. C. Gamble and others against the cement company; which if it is granted would virtually close the mill.

The recent gale did great damage to Beaver Island parties at work on the Hickory Creek marl. The tug Mecosta was driven ashore and badly wrecked, and a large quantity of this bar was strewn along the shore. A number of tons of stone were also swept off the pier.

East Jordan Enterprise: C. I. Cutler at the Argo Milling Co's plant is taking advantage of the unusually long nature of the rain and snow. Two innocent looking strips of metal are laid across their conveyors, to these are attached wires which ring electric lights. When the car or scoop at temple to pass over, an electric bell is quickly heard but how these is equal to warn six millers.

Traverse City special: The snow has done great damage along the bay front. The docks at the Traverse City, Lee Boats & Manistique Railroad are entirely washed out, and will not be working for some time. A Mack tee Northwestern train got out early this morning but the tracks were washed away after so that trains can no longer enter the city. All boat houses along the shore are washed away, with considerable damage to small craft. The breakwater at the Wigwam club house was destroyed, the waves washing against the club house and undermining it. The point between the bay and river where the grandstand traps of the Traverse City Heel & Gun Club are located, is entirely under water. The Elliott attempted to reach the dock this morning, but was obliged to turn back. The water is the highest ever known here.

Traverse City Record: The Rev. J. Te Lindes, of Northport, was in the city today, making the first preparations for next year's Indian camp meeting. It is expected that next year's meeting will surpass anything of the kind ever held and it is suggested that it be made a Congress of Indians, with some of the greatest Indians in the United states, such as Congressman Curtis of Kansas, Dr. Montezuma, who was one of the principal participants this year, and others, present. An attempt will be made, and it is thought, with success, to interest the business men of Northport, especially, and of this city, enough to have erected a big auditorium at the camp meeting grounds. To the efforts of the Rev. Mr. Deets is due a great share of the credit for this year's success and he has begun preparations for next year this early.

Dr. J. J. Robbins, of Boyne Falls, proprietor of the Dayne Stock Farm, is a good example of what other business might have accomplished with the forests of Northern Michigan. About twenty years ago he purchased one thousand acres about two miles from Boyne Falls. He had his timber cut and sawed in his own mill at Johnson station, on his own land, and sold the lumber and shingles for good prices, then used the lumbermen's profits, which he thus saved, to improve the land and build fine substantial farm buildings. Today he and his genial wife are living in a fifteen room house finely decorated and furnished and provided with bath and all modern city conveniences. Had other men used their northern timber lands in the same manner there would be fine, thoroughly cultivated farms with neat, well painted buildings, dotting the northland in place of the dreary waste of stump land which now disfigures what was once one of the most beautiful sections of Michigan.

Fred Smith of Ellsworth expects to have a new boat built for service next season on the inland route between Elk Rapids and Bellaire. Mr. Smith figures the cost at about $5,000 for a boat 65 feet long with a beam of 12 feet. She will be something of a novelty, and built after the same pattern of the craft which he recently exhibited at Bellaire, which he considers a practical boat for both deep and shallow water. The "sample" is 25 feet long, 7 foot 4 inch beam and with 20 people on board draws but 10 inches of water. He has a patent scheme with the propeller shaft arranged so that where water is shallow the propeller is raised, while in deep water it is lowered, giving the craft the advantages of one of greater draft. The rudder is raised and lowered at the same time as the propeller, and the latter when raised is in the protection of the hull, and can be lowered to any depth down to two feet. To prevent drifting, a centre board is provided, the same as in a sailboat. The boat exhibited by Mr. Smith is said to have fully demonstrated the value of his invention. He expects to have his new vessel built at Charlevoix.

MARINE NOTES.

The Saginaw Tribune brought her last cargo of lumber for the Boyne City Lumber Company, for this season, on Tuesday for Kewaunee.

The Edward Hines Lumber Co. of Chicago, has purchased the steamer W. H. Sawyer. The Sawyer has been trading at Beaver Island this fall.

The revenue cutter Tuscarora has been ordered to search Lake Michigan for Benedict Arnot, at work on the Hickory Creek marl. The tug Mecosta drove ashore and badly wrecked, and a large quantity of this bar was strewn along the shore. A number of tons of stone were also swept off the pier.

East Jordan Enterprise: C. I. Cutler, at the Argo Milling Co's plant, is taking advantage of the unusually long nature of the rain and snow. Two innocent looking strips of metal are laid across their conveyors, to these are attached wires which ring electric lights. When the car or scoop at temple to pass over, an electric bell is quickly heard but how these is equal to warn six millers.

WAVES PLAY HAVOC.

A Twenty Hour Gale on Great Lakes Causes Much Damage.

The northwest gale of last Wednesday night and Thursday was the most terrible of the year thus far, strong great damage to harbors and shipping on all the lakes.

Charlevoix harbor sustained its share of the shake up. Old settlers say they never saw a flood so high as that which rolled in all day Thursday. The log flume follows were pier top high, and, as they broke, they swept along their length, making it extremely dangerous to venture more than half way to the pier head.

Early in the day the sea made a breach where the stone breakwater joins the shore line, and Lake Michigan was soon pouring into the channel with a force that ran away the gravel bank, carrying it by dump into the river. At noon the breach was fifty feet wide, and the water by dark.

It looked bad for the channel, and, in the absence of Mr. Mason, acting Mayor Weldon wired the facts to the engineers at Grand Rapids and Tuesday morning Inspector C. S. Vodbis arrived and made a careful survey of the damage.

As contractor Meagher already had his plant at Gaylord ordered to Boyne City, he decided to extend the shape breakwater along the line of the trouble, and is hauling a barge with stone at a Wisconsin port, it is expected that the breach will be repaired at once. The damage to the channel, however only amounted to narrowing it somewhat, and no serious detriment to navigation is expected.

The storm on the north pier was driven several feet out of place and the iron lighthouse was damaged some.

At Holland, the piers were damaged to the amount of $20,000, and other harbors on the shore were hurt.

The heaver island schooner Rouse Simmons, Capt. M. L. Bonner, from St. James to Milwaukee, lumber laden, made out to reach Milwaukee but will miss and miscon means and all sails gone.

The schooner I. V. Jones, from St. James to Milwaukee with lumber, capsized in midlake, and the sailors were drowned. A passing steamer took off the terrainmen of the crew in an exhausted condition.

The schooner, Three Sisters, of Marinette, Wis., which encountered such a rough experience on Friday's gale is now in a waterlogged condition and lying board side on the beach about a mile south of Elk Rapids.

During the storm about 50 feet of the Cameron lumber company's dock at Torch Lake, was washed away and one-fifth feet of lumber went into the lake. The mill was shut down Saturday and all hands put at work gathering up the lumber from the beach.

The schooner Vega was stranded at Ludington, and the Kate Lyons at Holland. Both vessels are total losses, but the crews were taken off by the life savers.

The steamer Hamilton, bound for Chicago made Ludington, rolling terribly, at 9 p. m., and anchored in the harbor.

The Steamer Lydia well known here, went ashore and was totally wrecked, at Manistee.

KING OF ROGUES.

French Prince Hayes Meets Chase for Dress.

The French prince turns out to a great deal of trouble this time ago in consequence of the exploits of George Chase, the well known county clerk, bartender and rascal. Chase was a comrade boy, of repute, and his adventures were extraordinary indeed.

Many of his methods was to investigate western cow towns, in quest of his acquaintance and experience among sporting men, assume a comfortable independence and see those for his own enjoyment. Among those who was caught in the net before confessed that the last adventure in question at a prominent resort at Gulfpoint's southern city and afterward robed the home, handing the whole of the proceeds of her robbery over to Chase.

At the time the news flood in the minutes of Prince Amber as entered Chase, in a splendid house and grounds, possessing horses and carriages as well as motor cars, all of which were paid for out of the pin events of a service girl's conscience, which amounted to more than a fortune resulting therefrom made Chase with all the gravity and high owners of the place, dwelling them in the house, and he was forced to treat the prisoner when he was brought in for trial, in humiliation, watering horses, and menial work, remain in stable and grooming.

All this time the detectives were looking for him but no trace for more assistance than they ever looks out without that, of course, they never saw Chase, and finally the case was dropped. The last wonderful stroke of impudence for Chase including with opportunity and tools, which gave to management opinion expressed regard.

The Fat Man's Tale.

When to Take the Cold Bath.

The morning is the best time for a cold bath, because it is warm when the first gets out of bed, and is in the best condition for a healthy reaction, but one must have a good fire to quickly upon rising. This does not mean sitting by or too close to it, for he has reason about the room and dressing, but should at once, then when this rule is strictly followed, the morning cold bath a benefit.

WHERE HE SAW SNAKES.

Australian Traveler Says Sea Near Australia Was the Place.

A few good stories are now man and B. H. Barnum, an Australian, for a difference the Pacific coast, was on a voyage on the Coast of Australia, when the vessel was ship off the coast. Millions of this snakes could be seen swimming about as far as the eye could reach. They jogs on the mentate and several distinct varieties were recognized by a scientific man on board. During the calm weather the captain could be seen standing the sea from the ocean surface to notable movements except for a slight undulation caused by the movement of the water. When alarmed they direct the arrows leaving a trail of bubbles behind them.

They water snakes are marked by brilliant colors and are more deadly in their venom than the cobra. Their fangs are very short and do not penetrate so deep as the fangs of most serpents, but only a scratch is necessary to produce serious results. In spite of their deadlinedness fangs, the snakes are killed and eaten by our cockatoos and large gulls. Shrimps and other large gulls are the snakes's enemies. Their food is fish, which they secure only between and tell. There are sometimes millions and uncounted, but to say a lot to the fancies of manufacture of the Australian gulf about these great snakes when man for our trade, and, in the sea, with fresh fish, gliding come. One food and fish on a ship and we thought overcomed. Hour thereafter, the snakes disappeared from on board. Well, that they would be unpleasant familiarity.

"All Keep Your Forks"

Willard W. Hunter is to relate for his Sabbath sermon last Sunday morning, "Keep Your Forks." Mr. Hunter announces your sermon subject, and I will go to no trouble to see some place. "Keep your forks" he would say, "Mr. Hunter, I want you to be sure you are not lost, before you start out on an unprecedented search. We want all hands to be on the ground for to be sure possibly there will be no one missing. Well, alas! Instead of adopting my such advice, the, the water, or as she removed the plating after the ship course, said to the mate, "Keep your fork in a boat, authorization Vessel." "All Keep Your Forks."

Prof. Williams Told Him Why.

As a means for practical illustration of the principles of air insight in the lecture room, Prof. William of Hudson university took considerably to walk, saw the, from other the eye and, in fact, the architecture of the various buildings.

When, at one of these out of door sessions the class was halted before the old Presbyterian church, which had two towers, with a mass, in each, one of the windows repaired, rather too impossibly.

"Now, why they put a clock on each tower, professor?"

"Why," came the reply instantly, "that is so that if any one happened to be looking at one the most recent wonders there would be only half to get through."

Kidney Diseases Worst of All.

How to Cure These Dangerous and Fatal Maladies.

No one can afford to have kidney disease and then endeavor to prevent after its ravages have set in the premises. This is especially true in regard to Bright's disease, for when it has fastened its fangs upon the victim death is a kind of release to the victim sufferer. It becomes easy of consideration to such persons. It discourages the coroner's inquiries to discover the cause of death. Kidney Kidney and Bladder Cure is a good medicine to cure all kidney and bladder troubles. It discourages the coroner. It encourages the living to live and be healthy. THE POPULAR PULPIT

THE HUNGER OF THE AGES.

By Rev. Henry Cole.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."—Matt. v. 6.

This is the central beatitude, for it is necessary it embraces all the others, for every virtue (we can hardly be included in righteousness. But it often happens that men who substitute mere formal morality for simple duty have twisted the plain words into self-righteousness, made something as unreasonable as to be impolite to a right mind. As a matter of fact, it means no more than righteous, the hunger and thirst, for righteousness is just the natural and proper desire and endeavor to be right and to do right in all cases the opposite for the right.

"Theological righteousness may mean something beyond humility and mean Have others to excite the real practitioner in a kind of hunger and thirst. This man who has the zest in such things who nothing else was in the other he characterized by the phrase "I want the real article. And a right man will be satisfied to have not the highest ideal of what is being perfectly right when he knows he falls short of it. The Christian ideal is not a conventional one, but a real one, and it will never satisfy the man who is seeking for the right. Perfection is the goal of the race. All human progress is but the hunger and thirst for perfection. Perfection is the right thing in the right place, and it will never satisfy the man who has, before this possible a higher ideal of what is right. Perfection is right in right day. In case of a man who has not the ideal of what is right, then the method is the right. This thing is some fruit. A man may be right in the right place, and yet be a fool. Perfection is right in the right place, and yet be a fool. Perfection is right in the right place, and yet be a fool. Perfection is Elk Rapids Progress: Lowell Scott shipped to the Blue Seal Company Friday 2,480 pounds of radish seed, the product of less than five acres of ground. At radish seed is worth after cents a pound, his returns would be $221.85 or about $44 an acre.

The Michigan Central Land Company is experimenting in a small way by setting out 3,000 apple trees on the apportunity worthless pine barren lands in Iosco county. If this "plan and" well, it will open up another profitable avenue for the agriculture who has only a small amount of capital to invest in real estate.

A whole family was poisoned off at East Jordan one evening last week. The contracting parties were Mrs. Sam Cairney and her daughter, also a son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Bulmanks. The symptoms were: Sick headache and nausea at first. But further, was found to contain Sulphuric Carbonic and Prussic Acid. Not Cook.

The East Jordan Mirror: Hard times has almost put everything that work and will unbendable. The local mill is serious that they have 25 men employed the organization is a large business in going down into the own pocket to furnish work for men for instruction, music, etc. Every best taken is by the fund as at legislature has gone towards the school expenses in addition to which the members have taken kind of the case themselves. They have been tired of the struggle.

A plan is now on foot to dam Manistee river near Sherman for water power to supply electric lighting and power current to Traverse City, Cadillac, Manistee, etc. At that point the river is 60 feet by 450 banks. The plan is to build a dam 30 feet in height and almost 200 feet long. The engineers state that the river has a fall of 10 feet in the mile, and that 4000 horsepower can be developed every mile. If plans go through successfully the plant will be built next summer.

The new mart house at Bellaire is almost completed. That is, the contractors work is all done, but the board is having some extra work done such as oiling the hardwood floors, etc., which was not specified in the contract. The main building will be for hiring of a janitor, which duty will be left to the building committee. The committee will also take steps to put in a sewer to the river right away and as soon as the sewer is put in the building will be ready for occupancy. The building is certainly an ornamentation to Bellaire and a credit to the whole county.

Traverse City Record: James Kelso has been appointed trainmaster on the Pere Marquette to place of M. J. Smith transferred. He will have charge of the Petoskey and Big Rapids divisions. He formerly had charge of the Muskegon, Newaygo and Big Rapids divisions. He knows everything from Big Rapids to Muskegon, but not including Muskegon. Mr. Smith has been with the Pere Marquette twenty-two years starting as a telegraph operator. For a number of years he was agent and in the promotion games as he, rose at last head work and faithful service. He has been in the railroad business since he was 14 years old.

Traverse City is getting a vast amount of unpleasant advertising through the southern or a difference between the city and actual condition that the state press has given to the people. Some of the high school boys have submitted that they participate sessions pronounced, without question as to their age, and on some occasions was given to the matter of boys in an intoxicated condition. At a recent social function in the school building cider was served with the refreshments and altogether a badness has been made and an investigation is demanded by the superintendent. The city authorities will also open a campaign against the saloons that have been guilty of selling liquor to minors.

Living in a big hot in the central part of Louisiana county, far from all other human habitation, Abner H. Filson, a former resident of Traverse City, of Harrisburg, Pa., has spent the last five years in almost perfect solitude, save for the companionship of his faithful daughter. She, for love of her father and in the hope of saving him from a nervous breakdown, decided, it is said, by the excessive use of drugs, gave up her home and came there, bidding every their leaving for all former friends. Living five years in the pines of Northern Michigan has cured Filson of the drug habit. Just recently the abode of the Filsons was discovered by the girl's lover, her pride would not permit her to tell him her location when she and her father locally left home. THE BELLAIRE POWER PLANT.

A Work That Involves Charlevoix Lighting System Changes Next Year

The big dam at Ironton that is to generate power from which Charlevoix is to be supplied with power and light next summer is now in process of construction and everything moving satisfactorily.

Mr. Bickerdyke has nearly finished the excavating for the foundation for his electric lighting and power station, and the driving of the several hundred piles will begin in a day or two now. The school pit will be built of concrete and the building will partly rest upon piles. The cost of the foundation will be in neighborhood.

After the pile driving is well under way the work of constructing the dam will be begun. A concrete wall is to be built across the present earth embankment following the dam, then an additional bank of earth above the concrete. There are seven wheels at present being run by the water power formerly in the dam but these bodies have will be taken down except as they have a center chain pinion to connection that will be used until the plant are driven and the dam completed. Next spring when the power house is built and the lighting plant actually to start supplying Charlevoix's lighting and power system, the water power will be so arrangement that alone the Charlevoix supplement will need either one by small dredge to be operated by electric motor. The electric power will be ready to begin furnishing lighting to Charlevoix by next fall.

The new arrangement will give Charlevoix village far beyond possible improvements for years to come, providing give an night lighting service, and will be a continuous service—a thing that water power for pumping purposes. It is understood that the Alpa Roller Mills will change from steam to electricity, and many other concerns will be the patrons.

The present city steam power plant therefore, will be retained for a year, until the new system has been tested and proven satisfactory beyond a doubt. The change will involve the installation of totally unique and a novel page for the water works system.

This change, while it involves considerable expense at the outset, is thought to be the most economical solution of the water and lighting system in the long run. It means a gain in water pressure, less expense of operating, and increased revenue to the city.

While no definite plans have been adopted with reference to the water tower, it is proposed that the tower be erected on the high bluff above the plant—a plan that will probably be adopted.

POTATOES SALL HIGHER.

The Recent Raise Takes a Jump Toward the Sky

When the potato market opened about two weeks ago, buyers in the east at about thirty cents, and some stock went at. But there was very little activity among other buyers or sellers.

A week ago the market began to take from two to five cent jumps and when corn came was reached the dealers were kept busy, but many of the farmers held back for another raise, and then got it.

Up to date, last week, spuds was quoted, but the price very much settled back to fifty, and Monday a good many thousand bushels changed hands at Charlevoix and neighboring points.

Yesterday (Wednesday) the market still stood at fifty, and there is very little prospect of a decline. As to the outlook for a further rise in spuds, being 1 to 2 cents. The tendency, we think, is upward rather than downward, but, all things considered with potatoes at 50 cents, it may be not the safe of wisdom to be too high up.

This is certainly one of the good potato years, a year that is sure to come to the farmers now and then to level up the average, and wipe out the loss in bad years. It is a year of five-year years have been few and far between when the average has been quite below 25 cents. Of course there have been such years, but a review of the record for the past ten years, after interviewing with buyers, it is safe to assume that the average has been thirty cents.

Therefore, taking the record of a decade as a basis, it is safe to assert that there is no more profitable crop for the farmers of Northern Michigan than potatoes. With good or average crops, Charlevoix and the towns on Pere Marquette Lake, by reason of their extraordinary shipping facilities, should be made the greatest potato shipping center in the State. Northern Michigan potatoes are always considered the banner stock in the markets, and, on the side of the farmers, there is no crop that has a record of fewer failures.

Keep raising potatoes.

TO CONGRESS: Hanlon, the democratic editor of the Michigan Patriot, finds fault with the primary election law enacted last winter, because it may prevent the formation of independent tickets by mass conventions. It is his that effect it will be accomplished just what the anti-primary partisans are demanding throughout the last state campaign. Conventions could be bought, they insisted, and they wanted no more of them. The people can be trusted if opportunity is given them to act for themselves. It was urged, but Hanlon evidently has now no confidence that they will act if he would have them. He and the people of Michigan that were would be bunkers are compelled to eat almost humble. Hanlon's lack of confidence in his following is well founded.

PROFUSE DISPLAY OF AMERICAN FLAGS NOT LIKED.

Decorations in Winning Church Bazaar and Dominant and King Edward, Was Almost Forgotten—Its Senate Stickness Unknown in Outer Prices.

When the congregation assembled in the Maryland Street Methodist church in Winnipeg, Man., to attend the bazaar-closing service they were surprised to find the entire interior of the church draped with flags and a picture of President Roosevelt in a prominent position. The usual colors were noticeable by their absence. The flags were those displayed from the windows on the occasion of the President's inauguration, and were about 2,000 in number. The reason for the unusual display was that the church had recently paid $2,000 cleaning and painting bills, and had exhausted its funds in filling the pulpitum. Each was left a dollar ahead of the game.

BIG INCREASE IN SHIPPING.

Grain Carriers for Nine Months Exceeds Last Year's Record.

Lake Superior shipping for nine months ending with September, 1904, has been made a matter of record. Report on Offices

To the Hon. Board of Supervisors. Your committee to inspect several county offices and report on same would report and the following. That the Sheriff be instructed to purchase a small roll top desk for his office. The Clerk to purchase that supply item for his use and purchase a standard typewriter for the use of the county and dispose of old machine as he deems best.

Respectfully submitted,

Wm. J. Gallagher, Josiah Hoffird, Richard Lewis, Committee.

To the Board of Supervisors of the County of Charlevoix.

Gentlemen: Your committee to inspect the several county offices would respectfully report as follows. We have visited the office of J. M. Harris, Judge of Probate; H. C. Cooper, County Treasurer; Frank A. Kenyon, Register of Deeds and Darwin F. Meech, County Clerk and find all the office fixtures, furniture, record books, plats, files, etc. extremely neat and carefully kept reflecting much credit upon the occupants. Four years ago, owing to the poor condition of the abstract books in the Registers the incoming office Mr. Kenyon was requested by his board to dismantle the general binding of the books as much as possible, in a manner which would tend to destroy them, and we wish to commend him upon his favorable condition in which we find them. Wm. J. Gallagher, Josiah Hoffird, Richard Lewis, Committee.

On motion G. W. Bailey above reports were both accepted and adopted.

On motion J. L. Price, James Nisley was appointed to fill vacancies in the several committees caused by the resignation of Mr Payton—carried.

On motion Geo. S. Craker the case of the Vance boy was referred to Supt. of Poor with authority to pay doctors for surgical operation—carried.

Propositions of Dr. Lewis regarding small pox read to board by chairman.

On motion J. L. Price proposition was rejected.

On motion Frank Pearson, chairman of committee on Bonds, the following bonds were approved.

D. S. Payton, County Treasurer, $30,000, sureties, Willard A. Smith, Geo. W. Crouter, John Ward, Wm. J. Pearson, J. M. Harris, Wm. H. White.

Ernest W. Coutter, Sheriff, $10,000, American Bonding Co. of Baltimore.

Ernest A. Robinson, Surveyor, $2,000, Richard Lewis, Frank Pearson.

Charles A. Sweet, Coroner, $500, A. B. Nicholas and Frank A. Kenyon.

Darwin F. Meech, Register in Chancery, $3,000, Wm. J. Gallagher and Fred Smith.

Darwin F. Meech, County Clerk, $2,000, Will E. Hampton, R. B. Armstrong.

On motion R. Lewis, treasurer made report showing indebtedness of county, who holds same, when due and amount of interest same is drawing—Carried.

On motion Geo. S. Craker, committee to settle with county treasurer report to this board tomorrow morning the indebtedness of the county as near as they can. Carried.

On motion Geo. W. Bailey, board adjourned until 9 a m tomorrow.

Darwin F. Meech, Clerk. J. H. Graff, Chairman.

January 5th 1905.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Roll called, quorum present.

Special report committee to settle with County Treasurer.

To the Honorable the Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix County.

Gentlemen: Your committee to investigate the indebtedness of the county would report that they cannot at this time give the exact amount of indebtedness by reason of outstanding orders which the committee could not investigate in the time given them in which to report. With the assistance of the treasurer, however, we are able to approximately place the amount at eleven thousand dollars ($11,000) as being the indebtedness of the county of Charlevoix and the 1st day of October 1904. In order to arrive at the exact amount of the debt we would recommend that the clerk and treasurer be instructed to prepare a list of all outstanding orders and the names of the holders and rate of interest. This list to be reported to the Board of Supervisors at their next meeting.

Richard Lewis, Josiah Hoffird, Wm. Nelson, Committee.

On motion Frank Pearson, above report was accepted and adopted.

On motion Wm. J. Gallagher, bond of Hiram A. Thompson, Grain commissioner, $10,000, with J. M. Harris and H. A. Ivey as sureties was approved.

On motion Wm. J. Gallagher, bond of Joshua H. Ray, coroner, $200 with Wm. Pearson and Frank Kenyon was approved.

Report committee to settle with County Treasurer.

To the Honorable the Board of supervisors of Charlevoix County:

Your committee to settle with county treasurer would report that they have examined the books and vouchers in the office and find them correct. The accompanying report of the treasurer which is submitted with this report shows the financial condition of the county on the 1st day of January 1905, all of which is respectfully submitted.

Richard Lewis, Josiah Hoffird, Wm. Nelson, Committee.

A DEAD PAST

By MRS. LOVETT CAMERON

(CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued.)

She was alone at last. Carol had gone to her own room, and Mrs. Ford was in her bedroom.

It seemed to Phyllis that the death was unreal—that this was the beginning of a dreadful dream, from which she would soon wake and find herself safe in her own little bed at home, with her mother sitting by her, and her father, who was so strong and so good, coming in to say good morning to her and to kiss her before he went to his work. Her father, the man she had always thought was a strong, manly man, who had been her ideal of what a man should be, had proved himself a coward and a traitor, and had left her to face the world with a stain on her name, and with a burden on her young life that was more than she could bear. Her mother, the woman whom she had always thought was her ideal of a true, pure, noble woman, had proved herself a—she could not, she would not, think of such a word as that—she could not think of her mother in any way except as the woman who had been her ideal of what a woman should be, and who had died before she had had time to realize that she was not what she had seemed to be. Her father was dead, and he had died by his own hand, and he had left her to face the world alone, and to face it with a stain on her name, and with a burden on her young life that was more than she could bear.

Yesterday and yesterday and yesterday—the day of her mother's death, the day of her father's death, the day of her own shame—had been days of such misery that they had seemed to her almost as long as years. She had lived years of misery since the morning when she had gone down to breakfast with Carol, and had found her father waiting for her in the hall, looking more like a ghost than a living man, and had heard from his lips the news that had made her life a ruin and a desolation.

She had thought that the worst of her misery was over when she had gone to her mother's room, and had seen her lying so still and so peaceful, with her face turned toward her, and had been able to kneel down by her and to hold her cold hand in hers, and to feel that her mother was at rest and was free from all pain and all sorrow. She had thought that the worst was over when she had been able to cry a little in her own room, and to feel that she was alone and could be quiet for a little while. She had thought that the worst was over when she had been able to kneel down by her mother's bedside and to pray that God would take her away from this world of misery and shame and sin, and would let her lie by her mother's side in the quiet grave. She had thought that the worst was over when she had been able to pray that God would take her away from this world of misery and shame and sin, and would let her lie by her mother's side in the quiet grave. But the worst had not been over then. The worst was not over now. The worst was yet to come, and she was alone to face it and to bear it as she could.

She had been alone for some time when there came a knock at her door, and when she had opened it she had seen her maid standing there with a tray in her hands. The woman had brought her a cup of coffee and some toast, and had spoken to her in a way that had shown that she was sorry for her, and had called her "Miss Phyllis" for the last time. She had taken the tray from her, and had thanked her for it, and had asked her to say that she was not well enough to come down to dinner that evening, and had asked her to say that she was very sorry to be so troublesome at such a time, and that she would be better in the morning. She had drunk the coffee, and had eaten some of the toast, and had felt that she was better for the food. She had felt that she could think more clearly and more calmly than she had been able to think since she had first heard the news that had been her death-blow. She had felt that she could think of her mother without breaking down, and that she could think of her father without losing all self-control and all self-respect. She had felt that she could think of her future and of what she should do with her life without feeling that her brain was on fire and that she was going mad.

She had thought that she could think of all this, and could try to decide what she should do, and what was her duty to do, now that her father was dead and had left her to face the world with a stain on her name, and with a burden on her young life that was more than she could bear.

She had thought that she could think of all this, and could try to decide what she should do, and what was her duty to do, now that her father was dead and had left her to face the world with a stain on her name, and with a burden on her young life that was more than she could bear, when there came a knock at her door, and when she had opened it she had seen Carol standing there with a letter in her hand.

Carol had brought her the letter, and had told her that it was from her father, and that it had been left with the other letters that had been left for him to post when he was dead. Carol had left her alone with the letter, and she had opened it and had read it, and had found that it was addressed to her mother, and was a letter that had been written by her father on the night before his death. It was a letter that had been written by her father to her mother before he had left the house to go to his death by his own hand. It was a letter that had been written by her father to her mother before he had left the house to go to his death by his own hand, and it had been left with the other letters that he had left for the post, and had been given to her by her brother-in-law, Carol Ford, who had been her father's partner, and who had been her father's friend, and who had been her father's friend and partner for years before he had been her father's partner.

It was a letter that had been written by her father to her mother before he had left the house to go to his death by his own hand, and it had been left with the other letters that he had left for the post, and had been given to her by her brother-in-law, Carol Ford, who had been her father's partner, and who had been her father's friend and partner for years before he had been her father's partner.

She had read the letter, and she had read it again, and she had read it a third time, and she had read it as she had read it the first time and the second time—as a dreamer who is living through a dreadful dream, and who is trying to wake from it and to be free from it, and who is trying to wake from it and to be free from it, and who is trying to wake from it and to be free from it

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME XXXVII. CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1905 NUMBER 26

Charlevoix Sentinel.

WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Elk Rapids special Nov. 1st. This village was quite excited over a series of fires yesterday originating at the furnace. The first alarm was turned in at 11 00 the cause being an explosion of the gases that had gathered in the big stack which "kicked." The sparks from the explosion were carried by a strong southwest wind to the roof of the pattern room. The blaze was extinguished without much difficulty but at 1.30 the stack "kicked" again and with such force that it blew the hopper out of the stack and the "soap" house was set on fire. The three hose companies were called out as the wind had carried the log city down to her houses and the firemen drenched and it was necessary to do some quick work to prevent a conflagration.

Traverse City Record: Capt. W. P. Robertson of the Manistique car ferry No. 1 passed through the city this morning from Northport where he went Monday evening to formally open the Hotel Scott under a new management. Captain Robertson purchased the property several months ago to take charge Nov 1. Mr. Robertson will become the active manager, while a son, Dudley L. Robertson, will become the clerk. The name of the hotel will be The Northern and every comfort known to an up-to-date hostelry will be found. Dudley Robertson left this country five years ago under Uncle Sam's protection, his duties taking him into the Asiatic waters, where for the past three years he has served in Admiral Evans' squadron as quartermaster of the Monadnock. He returned two weeks ago and will hereafter become affiliated again with his mother country.

In the greatest fire Bellaire ever had, the Bellaire Woodenware company's plant was entirely destroyed, with the saw mill on the 20. Mr. Richardi estimates the loss at $50,000 on the large plant valuable machinery and stock. The insurance is small. Mr. Richardi thinks the origin of the fire was spontaneous combustion, but the general opinion is that it caught from the operation of a steam jobber within 100 feet of the factory. This is one of the largest manufactories of clothes pins in the world. It throws over 50 tons out in a week. The progress of the fire was so rapid as to cut off the escape of many of the employes except down the log track. Several jumped from the second story, some sustaining serious injuries. The Henry Richardi factory was saved only by hard work of the fire department and citizens and because of a favoring wind.

Traverse City South Side, George W. Carey of Marshall died suddenly this afternoon at 12:50 at Park Place of an illness that lasted only a few hours. Death was caused by hemorrhagic of the heart. Mr. Carey was taken ill today while in Chase Olsen's cigar store and a doctor summoned who relieved him as much as possible and assisted him to his home at Park Place. The man dropped down on one bed with all his clothes on and as he was thought the spell would soon pass away he was not put to bed. He revived considerably and the doctor left him giving Landlord Holden instructions to visit the room occasionally. Chester Black, an employe of the hotel, went to change the water bottle and as he stepped out for the water heard the man gasp. He called Mr. Holden who responded unhesitatingly. The doctor was summoned again, but the patient had breathed his last before his arrival. The deceased was a travelling man for the tobacco firm of Daniel Scotten & Co. of Detroit and called on the trade about six times a year. He was well known among the business men.

A case that is peculiar in the annals of Northern Michigan, where such town is anxious to obtain every manufacturing plant and industry possible, is that of Dr. J. D. Pennington, et al., vs. the Elk Portland Cement company of Elk Rapids. The case is one praying for an injunction to restrain the company from allowing the dust from its Portland cement factory to injure property near its plant in Elk Rapids. It is claimed that shade trees and lawns and other vegetation in a considerable distance of the factory is either killed or injured by the settling of the dust from it. The entrance of the dust into houses and its effect on the work of the housekeeper and upon her nerves, with its irritating friction upon otherwise pleasant family relations, is dwelt upon also. As there is no way to run the mill without the attending dust nuisance the action is virtually one to related to drive the company out of business at Elk Rapids. The cement factory first began operations with a wet process mill, using marl. The dust nuisance was then complained of but abiet changing to a dry process mill and using limestone the results are alleged to have been many fold more unpleasant and injurious, causing a marked depreciation of residence values within the zone of its influence, which is Elk Rapids' choicest and best over section. Hence the suit.

Northport and Suttons Bay attacked for three nights by a howling pack of the score of wolves, emboldened by hunger, in a dense forest in Iron county, Steve Lourin and Isabel Sullivan, timber hookers, at last ended their fierce assailants, and have returned to civilization from one of the most thrilling experiences reported to hunters or lumbermen in the history of the upper peninsula. Lourin and Sullivan, in planning for hunter, pushed their way far into the unbroken wilderness in Iron county. They suspected no danger from wild animals, and consequently were prepared with nothing but hatchets for the desperate attack made upon them Wednesday night. An enormous wolf had been sighted, but a horde of the forest animals was not anticipated. Living in their cupolas, the timber cruisers were startled by the howls of the approaching pack. Nearer and nearer they came. The men sought refuge in the only course open to them—climbing an immense fire to keep the animals at bay. They succeeded, although the waves came very near, making the situation more than desperate, until the animals drew off on the break of day. This thrilling experience was repeated Thursday night, with an encore Friday night. The men at last reached civilization, thankful that they are alive.

MARINE NOTES.

The fleet that was winterbound here several days last week—the schooners Dickinson, Hadley, Lyons and Grand Haven, got out Saturday afternoon. None of them are reported in trouble.

The schooner Abbey, Capt. George Crane, hailing from Chicago and bound south from the Beaver Islands loaded with fair bark, went on the beach north of the Portage last piers to Monday night's storm and is a total wreck. After a desperate effort the Manistee life savers rescued the crew.

Deputy United States Marshal O'Donnell sold the tug and the schooner Vega and her cargo for $425, to satisfy the claims of the tug owners of the crew who began libel proceedings to recover wages. The Vega went on the beach at Ludington during last week's big storm and the crew was rescued with difficulty by the life savers.

The official investigation into the burning of the passenger steamer Harlee A Hart under Detroit last June has disclosed the fact that members of the crew, when off duty, were accustomed to lounge on a pile of life preservers, smoking pipes and cigarettes. It was there that the fire started. Four officers of the steamer were suspended by the Marquette inspectors who handled the case.

A Cheboygan special of the 20 says: The schooner Westside, loaded with 300,000 feet of lumber, caught fire while tying at the Cribs dock at midnight. About one-third of the cargo is damaged. The boat is on the bottom in shallow water, with the cabin and stern burned to the water's edge. The cause of the fire is unknown. The schooner was 125 feet long, 26 feet beam and 11 feet deep. She was rebuilt last week. Her former owner was Minnie Edwards of Chicago. The schooner was here with a load of lumber last week.

The Elections.

Of the elections Monday next to note was conducted in New York city which was carried by Tammany, re-electing McClellan for mayor by a small majority over Hearst. Jerome the independent reform candidate for district attorney, was elected.

The democrats elected a state treasurer in Pennsylvania for the first time in 20 years. Weaver was elected mayor of Philadelphia by 50,000 majority.

In Chicago the republicans elected every candidate on their ticket.

In Ohio we went democratic, electing Patterson governor over Herrick, by 20,000 majority.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. W. BARRON, Chatham, R. F. D. Press correspondent Nos. 1203 Mule Grange.

THE GRANGE FAIR.

An Innovation That Is Likely to Become a Permanent Institution.

The grange fair is an institution of comparatively recent date. We refer to agricultural shows, the county fairs, which are under the management of Patrons of Husbandry, and where exhibitors are most, if not exclusively, members of the order. The number of these fairs held the past fall is astonishing. And the interest displayed by the Patrons is quite remarkable. The first that those fairs saw run in farmers for farmers is one secret of their success. They are agricultural exhibitions pure and simple, the horse race is eliminated. They are centered on the school with many a child of country agricultural society interest they are planning for the future, and in them the farmers are promoting there there is a bond to the county agricultural societies that give large gains in income and taking. Horticulturally this is good evidence of what the grange can do and is doing for the agricultural interests of the town or county. It is promoting those interests in a most practical and circumspect way when it looks to industry in the south of wholesome thrift in exhibiting the products of our farm and the handiwork of the household.

Before more revolutionary innovations are the granges of Armstrong county, Pa., who are moving to have a genuine agricultural council for Indiana county under their auspices. There are about 2,500 members of the different granges and it is proposed to issue 500 shares of stock at $100 per share, to be sold to members only, no one to have more than one share. A tract of 100 acres has been optioned.

NEW ENGLAND GRANGES.

Many and Earnest Preparing For the Annual Meetings.

The Manse state grange will meet in Bangor on Jan 16-21. The largest gathering in the history of the state grange is anticipated. Elections of officers will take place this year. The number of voting delegates will be 500.

The grange has just completed a prosperous year in the way of strength. Young, the grange which have already been instituted. It is now the largest order of the state and one of the most powerful. During the past year many new grangers have been instituted, but the last one of State Master Gardner and his corps of officers has taken up strengthening the granges already formed. In this work they have been most successful. Thus a third more membership of a little young Essex last year, when the state grange met in Lewiston, it has now increased to regular 5,000, which is fully up to the guns in past years.

The thirty-fourth annual session of the Vermont state grange will be held in Montpelier, commencing Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 11 a. m. It is expected there will be a large attendance and that the ethnologic degree will be exemplified Wednesday evening, the Jamesa Monitor, Improved and Midwest entertainment, of Boston, has been engaged for the session.

The Grange is Booming.

The granges are booming on all sides. Large classes of candidates are being initiated. Exercises are being made attractive. Business and pleasure are combined in the meeting. The Patrons have the combinations of helpfulness, an office that commands the respective attention of the season. They begin to understand the immense power that could be exerted by a farmer organization that, embracing the majority of the farm population and living along in close neighborhoods and communities, would demand of the national and state governments the same rights and privileges for the and times that are given without question to other citizens. Keep the grange growing and see to it that it is already a power in the land and it may be and will be made infinitely more powerful than it now is.—New York Farmer.

Schools of Agriculture.

At a meeting of the St. Lawrence county Pomona grange at Norwood, N. Y., educational matters were discussed. The prominent thought of the meeting was that the state should by some way provide means to establish schools of agriculture in schools in the several counties of the state where agriculture might be taught and its principles studied in a practical way. The system in Wisconsin was referred to as bringing this instruction closer to the people than it is now given in the agricultural colleges. The matter will be referred in formal resolution to the state grange at its next meeting.

Prosperous Maine Grange.

The grange at North Vassalboro, Me., has recently erected a new grange hall. The building is 22 by 52 feet with a front wing 15 by 21 feet. It is two and one-half stories with basement. It is well provided with all the conveniences for a convenient grange hall, including kitchen, closets, cloakrooms and a dining hall. The latter is 20 by 36 feet. The lower room is intended for public meetings and is provided with a stage. The whole structure cost approximately $1,600.

Mary E. Lee, superintendent grange course in agriculture and home state science in Ohio, will give a demonstration lecture on sanitation and vitalization before National Association of Farmers' Institute Workers at New Orleans in November.

One Grange, Six Fairs.

Jackson grange of Illinois has held six successful fairs in its library, the last having just closed in September, with sale of 22 fat hogs. The grange owned a seventy-two pound pumpkin lot.

—Mrs. O. A. Sees gave a complimentary Saturday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Mrs C. L. Judd, and her daughter in law, Mrs. F. M. Sears, at which city before were present. Refreshments were served. A very fine musical program added interest to the occasion. Miss Bess Judd sang two selections, and Misses Hyde Miller and Mabel Judd furnished piano numbers.

—The long standing trouble at the Ludington life-saving station has satisfactorily and satisfactorily adjusted by the appointment of Jacob Carlson as permanent keeper. The new keeper has assumed charge. He was formerly a surfman on Grand Haven long one of the members of the famous Grand's fine prize crew. For two years past Carlson has been keeper at Whitefish, where he went after serving two years in charge of the big Point Betsie station. He is a fearless life saver and very popular. The old crew will not resign now that keeper Hoecker has retired.

—Mr. Gleeh, wife of Capt. John Gleeh, of this place, died early Friday morning. She had been ill for some time, but was so improved in health last week, that Capt. Gleeh went with his tug to the Harbor to land fishing grounds. He was reached home Friday morning and died that day evening. The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon at the Baptist church, and was largely attended. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. Some of the L. T. P. A. and the K. O. T. M. M. k.ts, expressed a desire that some present there were represented at the obsequies. Capt. Gleeh and family express their gratitude for all kind services and sympathy.

—The Charlevoix Hunter's society held its adjournment meeting, Friday Nov. 10th at the home of Major, R. H. Hedges. A very pleasant time was had, and the program very appropriate. The meeting opened with an instrumental solo by Miss Blanche Hedges followed by a very interesting paper "The Celestial in Business" Miss Hanson was then given of ten minutes which all improved in a sound way. Election of officers was next in order with the following result: Hon. A. Bunker, President; Mrs. F. W. Mayne, 1st Vice President; Mrs John Hanson, 2nd Vice President; Miss Mary L. —On Friday evening, a work social will be given at the Methodist church, by the sewing and help department of the Epworth League. A program will be rendered and refreshments served. All who have received invitations are expected to bring them.

—A Cleveland special says: Judge Taylor of the United States District court to day handed down a far reaching decision holding in effect that the Sherman act does not control the prices of fish and oysters, directly or indirectly. The Booth company sued the Nelson and other attachment of the Independent Company of Chicago for damages, on the ground that the defendants had engaged in the fish business after they had tried to run the Booth company out of the business. Judge Taylor in his decision said that the Booth company was a trust, and therefore the agreement they had entered into was not binding because legislature granted a license of franchise to one of the Booth company.

A GAS PLANT.

Preliminary Steps to Connect for a Franchise.

Through Mr. A. L. Gratiot Grand Haven engineer who was among the business men solicited for a gas plant last month in the interest of securing this enterprise for Charlevoix, Mr. Gratiot has been in the city the past week and has made a thorough canvass of the business and residence portions of the city with the result that he has secured sufficient subscriptions to warrant the installing of a gas plant. It is the intention of Mr. Gratiot and associates to make a formal application for a franchise at the next meeting of the city council. The plant will be of the latest and most approved pattern for generating and distributing gas for illuminating purposes. The plant will be located in the business portion of the city and will be of such capacity as to meet the requirements of the business and residence portions of the city. The plant will be of such capacity that the mains will be extended to the outlying portions of the city as the demand for the gas may warrant

CASSIE'S HOPE GONE

COURT OF APPEALS REFUSES HER NEW TRIAL

GIRL'S NOTORIOUS FATHER CONFESSES MURDER—HE DIED UNDER SUSPICION—TWO YEARS LATER SAW HIMSELF IN VISION AS HE DIED.

Mrs. Cassie Hope, the young woman who was convicted of the murder of her father, Dr. Hope, in Ann Arbor, Mich., in a most cruel manner, by cutting his throat while he was asleep in his bed, and who was sentenced to imprisonment for life, has been refused a new trial by the court of appeals, which has affirmed the decision of the lower court. The case was one of great interest, owing to the young woman's position in society and the fact that the murder was committed in her own home. The evidence against her was practically the same as that which was presented at her first trial, which resulted in her being sentenced to imprisonment for life. The only new evidence was that of a man who testified that he was in the house at the time of the murder and saw the murderer, who was not Cassie Hope, but a man who had been a lodger in the house and had left the city the morning after the murder. The man who testified to this also said that he was himself the murderer, and that he had been in a state of hypnotism at the time he committed the murder, and had seen himself in a vision as he did the deed. The man who made this confession was a well-known citizen of Ann Arbor, and he died a few days after the trial. The case will be taken to the supreme court of the state.

SEND FLEET AFTER CASTRO.

Demonstration Against Venezuela Is Threatened by France.

France has at last taken decisive action in the Venezuelan question and will now deal with President Castro with strong hand. This is announced emphatically from Paris as resulting from the arrival of the French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc at Fort de France, Martinique. With two more French cruisers already waiting there, one French, the other Italian, and getting in readiness for offensive operations. It is quite evident that the French Ambassador and Chargé d'Affaires have left Caracas and the Italian Legation has closed its doors. The French fleet has fighting vessels and an sufficient transports enough to overwhelm the Venezuelan coast in its entirety, if necessary, and it is now stated that the French government is about to send the French Ambassador back to Washington. It is quite evident that France means to take no chances in a small war against Venezuela, and has no doubt been encouraged to make demands which Castro will not grant, in the belief that the United States would not be unfriendly to France in the matter. The French ships in question brought the news to Fort de France that the Venezuelan forts in question had opened fire upon the French ships, and that the French had responded with a few shots, which had silenced the Venezuelan batteries. The French ships then landed marines and took possession of the forts in question, and the French government is now preparing to make demands for the payment of the cost of the bombardment, for an ample apology for the insult to the French flag, and for the payment of a large indemnity for the damage done to French citizens and their property by the Venezuelan mobs. It is quite evident that France means to make a demonstration against Venezuela which will be felt throughout the world, and that the French government has not taken the step without the assurance that it will be backed up by the United States in its action. The general board of the navy, of which Admiral Dewey is ex-officio head, has submitted to Secretary Bonaparte a recommendation for a naval increase program. The Secretary now has the subject under consideration. It is understood the general board has recommended the construction of battleships of greater tonnage than any proposed for the American navy. The other recommendations aimed at by the officers of the board are the establishment of a fleet of torpedo boats to be brought together every month, so that it may be supplied with coal, so also will the fleet of battleships be brought together every month for coaling with the full approval of the United States in a manner having little contact the program before the House of Representatives through the French ambassador at Washington. In a great many quarters the news from the West Indies is received with great satisfaction, and it is quite universally thought that France has taken the right course in the matter. The French people are very much excited over the affair, and are in a mood to support their government in any action it may take in the matter.

WILL OF CHIEF JUSTICE VOID.

Even Enemies Jurist Makes a Fault Testament.

Thus, the will of the late chief justice of the United States, Melville W. Fuller, is declared void by the courts, and his property will be distributed among his heirs and next of kin instead of being given to the persons named in his will. The will was drawn by Fuller himself, and was in his handwriting, and was not witnessed by any person. It was drawn in the form of a letter addressed to his wife, and was found among his papers after his death. The will was contested by the heirs of the deceased, who claimed that the document was not a will, but was a letter to his wife, and was not intended to be a will. The court of appeals has decided that the document was not a will, and that the property should be distributed among the heirs and next of kin of the deceased.

Wounds Wife, Kills Self.

Washington, Pa., Special.—Jealousy was the cause of a shooting affray near Prosperity, in which Mrs. Mary Wilson was shot in the left breast and her husband, Thomas Wilson, then shot himself through the heart, dying instantly. Mrs. Wilson will recover. Wilson had been drinking and had been jealous of his wife for some time. He had threatened to shoot her and himself if she left him. Mrs. Wilson had left her home and was visiting her mother when her husband came to her and shot her and himself.

The New York Election.

Mayor Hazzard defeated Noah Davis in the Brooklyn contest by a majority of 17,000, and Mayor Low, of Troy, was defeated by Mr. Wilson, the Democratic candidate, by a majority of 1,500. Petition regarding Bridge, South Arm Township.

September 25th, 1905.

To the Honorable Supervisors of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan.

Gentlemen: Whereas, it is necessary to build a bridge across the Intermediate River in said County of Charlevoix and Township of South Arm and, whereas, said Intermediate River runs through South Arm township in nearly its extreme western division and therefore it is of very little benefit to the people of said South Arm township; and whereas the relocation or insertion of said bridge is upon a United States route making it absolutely necessary to keep in good repair said bridge, and, whereas the conditions herein before set forth are a burden to the tax payers of said township and imposing upon them as they verily believe, taxation that might be justly paid by the people of the whole county. For the further reason that the said Intermediate River is a navigable stream as defined by the laws of this State, making it further necessary to maintain a draw at the same bridge, therefore, and for the further reasons heretofore set forth your petitioners would respectfully pray that you cause to be contributed by the whole county, one half the expense of building said bridge, the cost of which for the whole structure will be from One Thousand to Twelve Hundred Dollars.

Report Committee Roads, Bridges and Dams.

Charlevoix, Mich., Oct 10th, 1905.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix County

Gentlemen: Your committee on Roads, Bridges and Dams would respectfully report as follows: We have had under consideration the petition of South Arm township signed by J H Graff and others for the county to defray one half the expense of rebuilding the bridge across Intermediate Lake commonly called Dufore bridge, same not to exceed $600 of the Charlevoix bridges and two thirds the expense of running the Drake ferry. We would recommend that the prayer of petitioner be granted.

J. C. Karcher, R. H. Sherman, Chas. Zettler.

On motion Ava Smith, report was accepted and adopted.

CHRIST THE LIVING WATER.

Rev. Edward E. Swift

Everything shall live whither the river cometh. Life is the great gift, the superlative inheritance, the divine gift, the pearl of great price. When we say that Christ came to a soul there will be fullness of life. He came not, as Mohammed, now, when in search of philosophy, to elaborate a theology, nor yet to give the world a new code of ethics. He came to give life.

Conversion is the inoculating of the divine life in the soul of man. The Christ life has everywhere been the inspiration of the very best in the Christian kinds that the unbelieving intellect life has been developed. There are found the humbleness spoken designed to alleviate sufferings of the human race, and public the rights of the golden rule among men. Hope shall live whither the river cometh. To see Jesus Christ is to know the hope that is big with immortality. Peace shall live whither the river cometh. The soul away from God is full of turmoil. When Jesus comes there will be harmony between desire and choice, knowledge and action, the will of God and the will of man, and that means calm in the midst of the wildest storms.

25 Bushels of Wheat to the Acre

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Thousands of farmers in Canada raising from 25 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre, oats, barley and other crops in proportion, are now enjoying the fruits of their industry in a country where land is plenty and taxes are light. Some districts have had a second crop of wheat off the same land in one season. Mixed farming is also a profitable business. Cattle raising is also very profitable, the country being well adapted for it, and the cost of feed being very small. Many farmers have made their pre-emptions and purchased adjoining sections, and are now in a position to care for their stock and grain. Many have made from $2,000 to $5,000 in a single year. There is still room for many more to share in the prosperity that has come to others. Some of the most productive land in Canada is still open for homestead entry, and can be had free of charge, or purchased from railway companies and land companies at from $10 to $15 per acre. Schools, churches, markets, good roads, and all other conditions that make for comfort and prosperity are to be found in the districts referred to. Write for literature, rates, and full information as to where to locate, to the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the undersigned agent.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Among the improvements that are to take place for East Jordan is a new three story brick hotel, which will be built on the Spencer lots on Main Street by V. Nowson and wife proprietors of the Exchange Hotel.

In a game abounding in runs of from 20 to 50 yards, and marked by some of the fastest playing ever seen on a local gridiron, the Petoskey High School defeated on the 4th the Mancelona eleven by a score of 68 to 0. Mancelona held four downs once and she made first down once.

Gorman Gordon, former assistant postmaster at Lansing, was sentenced lately by Judge Wanty of the United States court to the house of correction at Detroit for one year for issuing fraudulent money orders for $4.38. Nelson Shelton of Thompsonville, who made a false pension affidavit, goes to the house of correction for six months. Frank Bitner of Detroit, who burglarized the Cascade postoffice, got a six months term.

Boyne Journal learns that the rails on the D. G. G. & M. R. R. are near nearly to Gaylord. It would be a startling if the road would run as far as this river to our sister town as soon as it is practicable, and then every Boyne goer and pay his respects to his neighbors. Hereafter there will doubtless be a closer communication between the places and it would be a good thing to create a cordial feeling between the towns.

Joe Maddock, of East Jordan, is the Year of the University of Chicago, his coaching of the westerners having resulted almost as successfully as that of the great Michigan footballist. The Salt Lake Herald says regarding a recent victory. "When one comes to solve the problem of how it was done, the one word 'Maddock' is the only solution. The mighty Maddock whose name will forever be wove in the fabric history of this state, yesterday proved himself all that has been claimed for him—a coach who has no superior in the western country."

Boyne Journal: H. L. Swift of Bellevue Farm spoke at the M. E. Church last Sunday morning. Although he insisted at the start that no collection be taken for him, the audience would not have it that way, and at the close of his remarks, an opportunity was given for subscriptions toward the payment of the mortgage on the property. Although the audience was not large and but few knew he was to speak, the sum of $23 was quickly raised. Mr. Swift was much affected by the surprise given him and goes on with his work with a tighter heart because of the sympathy and confidence expressed by his home people.

Miss Myra Stewart of Bayne Falls, is the principal figure in the sales disappointment case, the one that baffled the authorities of Grand Rapids since last Monday evening. Miss Stewart, who bears a good reputation in her home village, being one of a large family in Boyne Falls, recently went to Grand Rapids to live with relatives while she was learning the trades of dressmaker and milliner. At the regular hour for putting work she started for the home in which she lived but never reached there and foul play is suspected. The girl was of a modest, retiring disposition and did not go out much nor have much company, but a traveling man had been calling on her of late and her friends in Ionia, the family and authorities in looking for her.

Traverse City Record: The steamer Illinois tied up at the local dock yesterday and took on 1,000 sacks of potatoes, a carload and a half of cider and some woodenware. This, with the 5,000 sacks of tubers which the big boat had picked up along the bay was all that she could handle. The potato business has reached such a magnitude that it has been necessary to divide the freight business between the two boats, the Illinois running from Chicago to Traverse City and return, taking scarcely anything but potatoes, while the Missouri runs from Chicago to St. Ignace, Chebogan, Mackinac Island and intervening points taking on regular freight. If, when the boat reaches the bay there is any available room, she fills it up with potatoes. There were 5,000 sacks of the spuds at Suttons Bay yesterday, 5,000 at Northport, 1,000 at Omena besides the thousands of sacks at Elk Rapids, Old Mission, Acme, Glen Arbor and South Manitou. The larger part of these were shipped yesterday but some were left and the crop keeps pouring in.

"I Thank the Lord" cried Hannah Pratt, of Little Rock, Ark., "for the relief I got from Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Healed my four full running sores, which nothing else would heal, and from which I had suffered for 5 years." It is a marvelous healer for cuts, burns and wounds. Guaranteed at F. G. Just Casual Observations.

Just to remind you, we mention the fact that good old "Main street" has gone out of existence, and "Park Avenue" has taken its place.

And that leads us to observe that every street running east and west should be named to avenue. We have Bridget avenue on the south terrace and Dixon avenue on the north side. Why not change Antrim, Mason and Clinton streets to avenues, retaining the present names.

We hear considerable grumbling at all the water works feature of the forthcoming change in the city pump system. The claim is made that the water of the present time, coming from the long underground gallery, is always cool, whereas, with a stand-pipe, exposed to the autumn sun, the high standard of our water will be lowered. If this is true it is a to be deplored, for Charlevoix water is famous for its coldness and purity.

When the fall foot crowds and our fellows go north a hundred miles or more to get a deer, we are reminded that the writer of this has seen deer run from the woods through the principal streets of Charlevoix and jump into Round Lake, and he can well remember when it was easy to get deer in Charlevoix and Antrim counties when there was no closed season.

Then again he can remember when a partridge or a quail was never seen within a hundred miles of Charlevoix. When the first partridge was seen in this neck of the woods it created a sensation.

It is the nature of a boy to kill a squirrel. We know a boy forty-five years ago, who, delighted in the past time. But in those days it is against the law. Indeed kill the squirrels boys The park is full of them, and the dead trunks contain their winter store of nuts. Don't disturb them.

Cannot These People be Accommodated, Just to Stop the Yawp?

Petoskey Inconsistent. Through misunderstanding on the part of Charlevoix the football game that was to have been played this afternoon was called off. Instead the team played with the Alpena high school at 1:30. While having a date arranged here for today, Charlevoix made another date with the Alpena high school to play there yesterday. The game resulted in a score of 12 to 0 in favor of Charlevoix. Supt. Elliott went over in the afternoon to learn the circumstances but could get no satisfactory answer. As they refused to play today a game was arranged with the Alpena boys.

—If the coming grade the gas franchise it should be with the express stipulation that the foreign street, pavement shall not be disturbed. In any event we hope the council will not sell herein at the matter. There are good reasons against giving the matter serious consideration.

—The Northern Lumberman has hope that no obstacle will be left undone to equip the Grand Rapids lively school foot ball team from the interscholastic league. Charlevoix contributed to a celebration which it will not take an outsiders money and reputation sponsored. The Grand Rapids high school team is expected to be in the city on Thanksgiving day.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wormsen, who are about to move to Manistique, were surprised by a number of their lady friends Friday, who took with them a bountiful supply of eatables and a generous supply of good, hearty good wish. Albert is an accommodating man, the balance of the day was spent in social enjoyment. Mr. and Mrs. Wormsen will leave Charlevoix with the best wishes of all.

—With the first day of the new year, less than 30 days away, births are to be registered with Township clerks in the townships, with the village clerks in Villages and with the city clerks in the cities for the purpose of public statistics. This is a new law and it will be imperative that every one with whom everyone should be familiar. Outside of the expenses it is not generally known, although it affords invaluable information to the state, and is a commendable change in expense method.

—Mr. C. F. Pinney, of Kalamazoo, the company representative in charge of the Hygeian contracting company, arrived here yesterday. He has been instrumental in the matter of the proposed change in our lighting and water system. Mr. Pinney and the company take hold right and anyone who knows Mr. Pinney will make a mistake if he does not expect a good job. The company guaranteed to install, considering the importance of the change, the expert advice should be secured in the matter of the ready execution of the two systems.

The Charlevoix High School Foot Ball Team Victim of Hunter's Brain Fuchies.

The home boys of local foot ball team arrived home from Grand Rapids Saturday night in their shorn glory, minus all boasting thereof. They came here defeated by a score of 42 to 0. Yes, they were defeated before they left home, defeated by pre-arrangement, immediately defeated. And it is not strange that, in a city where the atmosphere is reminiscent of reducing cane molasses, that there should always be missing various items within the environment of other social influences. They

This was formerly a closed campaign, in playing a country high school team in a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants. The disadvantage was not taken into account from the start. The game the Charlevoix team lost, they could down to the adverse influence of the Grand Rapids team. Charlevoix boys have been gathered and shipped twenty-one miles of vapor, and Mr. Stewart expects to make the local natives from thirty feet to forty inches. Last year the average of eggs hatched was 60 per cent.

The eggs are gathered this fall and placed in cold storage, young chicks are turned loose on the young grounds in the spring. If the eggs are hatched and placed, and are well, there is up what hatches minimum of take root success.

There is every evidence that a greater than this phenomenon takes place. Fatherhood say that the local team lost the game by exceeding that of the previous two, and expose the error of the proposed harmony for Charlevoix.

To those who have lost faith in the local team there is no excuse for the loss. There is no excuse for the loss. There is no excuse for the loss. There

Among the improvements that are in view for East Jordan is a new three story brick hotel, which will be built on the Spencer lots on Main Street by Y. Newson and wife proprietors of the Exchange Hotel.

In a game abounding in runs of from 20 to no yards, and marked by some of the fastest playing ever seen on a local gridiron, the Petoskey High School defeated on the 4th the Manistique eleven by a score of 65 to 0. Manistique held our down once and also made first down once.

Graham Gordon, former assistant postmaster at Leland, was sentenced lately by Judge Wanty of the United States court to the house of correction at Detroit for one year for issuing fraudulent money orders for John Nelson Shelters of Thompsonville, who made a false pretense affidavit, goes to the house of correction for six months. Frank Bliss of Detroit, who burglarized the Cascade postoffice, got a six months term.

Boyne Journal learns that the men on the D. G. & A. R. R. are laid nearly to Gaylord. It would be a nice thing if the road would run an excursion over to our sister town as soon as it is practicable, and then every business man should pay his respects to his neighbors. Hereafter there will doubtless be a closer communication between the places and it would be a good thing to create a cordial feeling between the towns.

Joe Maddock, of East Jordan, is the Year of the University of Utah, his coaching of the westerner have resulted almost as marvelously as that of the great Michigan footballer. The Salt Lake Herald says regarding a recent victory: "When one comes to solve the problem of how it was done, the one word 'Maddock' is the only solution. The mighty Meadows whose name will forever be wove in the football history of this state, yesterday proved himself all that has been claimed for him a coach who has no superior in the western country."

Boyne Journal: H. I. Swift of the Beulah Farm spoke at the M. E. Church last Sunday morning. Although he boasted at the start that no collection be taken for him, the audience would not have it that way; so at the close of his remarks, an opportunity was given for subscriptions toward the payment of the mortgage on the property. Although the audience was not large and but few knew he was to speak, the sum of $211 was quickly raised. Mr. Swift was much affected by the surprise given him and goes to work his work with a lighter heart because of the sympathy and confidence expressed by his home people.

Miss Myra Stewart of Boyne Falls is the principal figure in the latest disappearance case, one that has baffled the authorities of Grand Rapids since last Monday evening. Miss Stewart, who bears a good reputation in her home village, being one of a large family in Boyne Falls, recently went to Grand Rapids to live with relatives where she was learning the trades of dressmaker and milliner. At the regular hour for quitting work she started for the home in which she lived but never reached there and foul play is suspected. The girl was of a modest, retiring disposition and she was go not much for have much company, but a traveling man had been calling on her of late and he is suspected by assuming the family and authorities in looking for him.

Traverse City Record: The steamer Illinois tied up at the local dock yesterday and took on 1,000 sacks of potatoes, a carload and a half of eggs and some woodenware. This, with the 3,000 sacks of tubers which the big boat had picked up along the bay was all that she could handle. The potato business has reached such a magnitude that it has been necessary to divide the freight business between the two boats, the Illinois running from Chicago to Traverse City and return, taking scarcely anything but potatoes, while the Missouri runs from Chicago to St. Ignace, Cheboygan, Mackinac Island and intervening points, taking on regular freight. If, when the boat reaches her bay their is any available room, she fills it up with potatoes. There were 3,000 sacks of the spuds at Suttons Bay yesterday, 6,000 at Northport, 1,000 at Omena besides the thousands of sacks at Elk Rapids, Old Mission, Acme, Glen Arbor and South Manitou. The larger part of these were shipped yesterday but some were left and the crop keeps pouring in.

"I Thank the Lord!" cried Hannah Plant, of Little Rock, Ark., "for the relief I got from Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It cured my terrible running sores, which nothing else would heal, and from which I had suffered for 5 years." It is a marvelous healer for cuts, burns and sores. Guaranteed at F. G. Just Casual Observations

Just to remind you, we mention the fact that good old "Main street" has gone out of existence, and "First Avenue" has taken its place.

And it is safe to say that every street running east and west should be changed to avenues. We have Hulburt avenue on the south terrace and Union avenue on the north side. Why not Lake Avenue, Mason and Clinton streets to avenues, retaining the present names?

We hear considerable grumbling about the water works feature of the forthcoming change in the city power system. The claim is made that the water at the present time, coming from the deep, under-ground gallery, is always cold, whereas, with a stand-pipe exposed to the summer sun, the high standard of our water will be lowered. If this is true it is to be deplored, for Charlevoix water is famous for its coldness and purity.

When the fall hunt comes and our fellows go north a hundred miles or more to get a deer, we are reminded that the writer of this has seen deer run from the woods through the primitive settlement of Charlevoix and jump into Round Lake; and he can well remember when it was easy to get deer in Charlevoix and Antrim counties when there was no closed season.

Then again he can remember when a partridge or a quail was never seen within a hundred miles of Charlevoix. Within the first partridge was seen in this neck of the woods it created a sensation.

It is the nature of a boy to kill a squirrel. My know a boy forty-five years ago, who delighted in the pastime. But in these days it is against the law. Hon's kill the squirrels boys. The park is full of them, and the dead trunks contain their winter stores of nuts. Don't disturb them.

Seeking New Fields to Conquer.

The Charlevoix high school foot ball team will leave here tomorrow morning, returning, for Grand Rapids Saturday morning they will play Grand Rapids.

Saturday afternoon they will be in Ann Arbor in time to take in the big game between Michigan and Wisconsin.

Cannot Those People be Accommodated, Just to Stop the Noise?

Petoskey Resorter: Through misunderstanding on the part of Charlevoix the football game that was to have been played this afternoon was called off. Instead the local team played with the Alpena high school at 1:30. While having a date arranged here for today, Charlevoix made an other date with the Alpena high school to play there yesterday. The game resulted in a score of 12 to 0 in favor of Charlevoix. Supt. Elliott went over in the afternoon to learn the circumstances but could not satisfactorily account for the change. He had refused to play today a game was arranged with the Alpena boys.

Our Last Mother.

Consumption runs in our family, and through it I lost my Mother," writes E. B. Reid, of Harmony, Me. "For the past five years, however, at the slightest sign of a Cough or Cold, I have taken Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption which has saved me from enthusiasting trouble." His mother's death was a sad loss for Mr. Reid, but he learned that lung trouble must not be neglected, and how to cure it. Quickest relief and cure for coughs and colds. DUNGEED.

The Charlevoix Team Second Foot Ball Team Visits the "Water Dead" Facities.

The home high school foot ball team visited from Grand Rapids Saturday night to take advantage of bearing them. They never back defeated by a score of 65 to nothing and they were defeated before they left home, defeated by overwhelming odds, totally defeated. And it is not strange that in a city where the atmosphere is redolent of rubbery and humors, foot ball should absorb the unknown vapor, even whether the environment of surroundings be defeated.

There was immediate a disposition to placing a country high school team in a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants. The disposition was manifest most from the start. In the first half of the game the Charlevoix team had the cute sort down to the advantage of the home team. Charlevoix had a large railroad extension project.

Grand Rapids put two fresh men in fresh foot, but of whom were [illegible] and each weighing from 180 to 190 pounds. Added to the contrast, the lessons down the Charlevoix team deep into the ground severely. In the final the Charlevoix boys were slightly [illegible] and consequently from the beginning of the second half our boys were discouraged by the overwhelming superiority of the visitors. It seemed as if the second half was a mere formality.

Charlevoix will certainly be more than ever United States foot ball [illegible] for the proper information of [illegible]. It seems as if the [illegible] Grand Rapids team [illegible] Charlevoix team [illegible]

BEGIN A LONG MARCH.

BATTERY IS TO WALK FROM KANSAS TO TEXAS.

Soldiers Who Have Been at Fort Riley Same Spanish War Are Changing Sandhills-Clothed Army for Tropics.

The Sixth Battery of artillery, which has been stationed at Fort Riley, since the Spanish-American war, marched from Fort Riley to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, a march of approximately 1,000 miles, in a little more than a month. The journey was made by the battery in order that it might be hardened for service in the tropics, as it is expected that the battery will be ordered to Cuba or Porto Rico. It is said that the battery will be ordered to the Philippines, as it is known that the Sixth cavalry, which was stationed at Fort Riley, has been ordered to the Philippines and it is not likely that two regiments of cavalry would be ordered to the Philippines unless it was to be used in the tropics.

The Sixth Battery is composed of men who fought under Dewey at the battle of Manila bay during the Spanish-American war. It is said that the men are ready for service in the tropics, and are in a fine condition for a long march. It is said that the men are ready and willing to go to the Philippines, Cuba or Porto Rico, if they are ordered to any of these places. It is said that the men

CHAPTER I.

[illegible]

St Richard Darling. Come with me to a wider home and I will show you that I have just got in its place his nephew, a remarkable youth. That cousin of mine was a fool, sir, a fool. Knowing Sir Richard as he did, and believing, as does my son, in taking people as they are, I had hoped that Sir Richard would have contented himself by a position which would cost me little to maintain. He knew my circumstances, made no pretence of being rich, and yet he had the impudence to send Lord Rodney to me. Contented to a position which would cost me little to maintain, Sir Richard suddenly awakes to space or notice.

"Sooty, cried Mopfell, again very hot, both in the face and voice.

Lord Rodney stood his ground manfully, though he knew that he was in the wrong. He was too a gentleman to allow his cousin's strong sense of injury to weaken his position. He stood respectfully, but with a firm face, while his cousin, pacing from a half a dozen paces, spoke of Sir Richard's conduct to him, of his unmerited neglect, of his own claims upon his relative, of his own poverty, and of the injustice from which he suffered.

"Sooty," said the old man, at last, "I'm a fool, sir, a fool. I'm a fool, sir, for having a nephew. Richard Darling, sir, is a fool, sir, for having a cousin. We are all fools, sir, except Mopfell, who is a knave. Sooty, I'm a knave, sir, for being a fool. Sooty, I'm a fool, sir, for being

ETHICS OF FOOTBALL.

American Public Has Been Pronounced Football Mad.

The Rev. David Hillhouse Bred, S. J., President of the University of Georgetown, D. C., has addressed an open letter to the student body and alumni of the University, in which he takes strong ground in favor of more clean and honorable athletics, and pledging the aid of Georgetown to that class of field sports. His opinion of football as it is now played is well calculated to attract wide-spread attention. President Bred says, in part:

"During the present season one members of the Georgetown team has been bitten in the ear and another in the breast. The game as played to-day is literally for things. Its aims are more detestable than those of the prize ring. There it is not allowed to "strike below the belt," the contest is between man and man and it is not allowed to strike a man when he is down * * *. The studies of football backers, as taught by some of the best known coaches, are to strike in the most vulnerable parts of the body, to use as many men as possible to strike the player singled out for injury, to strike and injure the player who is down and stalloned to the earth by those who have thrown themselves upon him.

That is a severe statement of fact, and a severer arraignment of the ethics of football. But severe things it is, it is not more severe than the arraignment of President Eliot, of Harvard, who has declared that football as it is played today, encourages the brutal instincts of the player and develops the instincts of cruelty when it is deemed necessary to success to supplement brutality by chicanery.

President Angell, of the University of Michigan, has declared the American public to be football mad. That is, in itself, a severe arraignment, not alone of the public, but of the game as it is played today, and it is an arraignment not pleasant to contemplate. President Bred is arraigning the game with citation of facts. President Eliot in doing likewise by the statement of conclusions from facts, and Secretary Taft felt it to be his duty to caution—with a threat attached—against "fanatical rough play" in the game with Annapolis.

If the American public is football mad it is time an inquest was being held with a view to determine what steps can be taken for restoration of the public to sanity on the question of the gridiron. Otherwise—and on the bodies of the victims—the brutality and trickery of the game will continue to be held, with broken heads and necks and bitten ears and throats as accompaniments. In the meantime there is a sane body of men in better position to work reform and restore sanity than the presidents of the great educational institutions of the land.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Cadillac Evening News: One leg broken and one neck twisted until its owner, unconscious and bleeding, was carried from the field, is the somewhat suggestive record of a football game Saturday afternoon, between the Ferris Institute and Traverse City teams at Big Rapids. Walter Brewer of Lansing, who the Traverse City team, is the owner of the broken leg, his accident occurring in the first half, and while the physicians were setting the broken bone Wilson, another member of the Traverse City eleven, was carried into the office, covered with blood, and unconscious and with the muscles of his neck and back torn loose. Then, too, the Ferris Institute team, not content with crippling its opponents, won the game.

Petoskey News: The report reached Petoskey Tuesday that on Monday night the train that crossed the straits of Mackinac on the ferry brought in consideration of four dead deer and five dead hunters who had been shot while in the north woods. The percentage seems awful, but not unreasonable when it is known that the estimated number of hunters to cross the straits this year exceeds 7,000 and 2,000 for resident hunters in the Upper Peninsula and you have an army of men. If every one fills his license of two deer will probably be very few of the hunted animals left.

Besides this the press dispatches tell of the finding of an gang with a wire stretched across the railroad tracks, either man or deer is likely to get a charge of buck shot if they stumble onto the wire.

An Error.

Rosette Rose of Grand Rapids, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. W. R. Lawton for a short time. They are spending the day in Boyne City with friends. Mr Rose is well known here, having come to Petoskey in 1870. He was the founder of the Democrat, now the Petoskey Independent, which was, with the exception of a few circulars printed the year before on a jewel press, the first newspaper in Emmet county.—Petoskey News—This is an error which Petoskey papers often make, and never correct. The Charlevoix SENTINEL was the first paper printed in Emmet county. When the SENTINEL was started in March 1869, Charlevoix was in Emmet county. The act creating Charlevoix county took effect in April of that year. Therefore, the SENTINEL is the pioneer paper of Emmet county, and is proud of the distinction.

An Error.

Jennie Rose of Grand Rapids is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Lawton for a short time. They are renewing old acquaintance with many friends. Mr Rose is well known here, having come to Petoskey in 1875. He was the founder of the Democrat, now the Petoskey Independent, which was, with the exception of a few circulars printed the year before on a proof press, the first newspaper in Emmet county.—Petoskey News. This is an error which Petoskey papers often make, and never correct. The Charlevoix SENTINEL was the last paper printed in Emmet county. When the SENTINEL was started in March 1895, Charlevoix was in Emmet county. The act creating Charlevoix county took effect in April of that year. Therefore, the SENTINEL is the pioneer paper of Emmet county, and is proud of the distinction.

For several months there have been rumors floating around that the bank of Harbor Springs was to change hands and be merged into a State Bank. The deal has been completed and the Emmet Co. State Bank will be put into operation December first, capitalized with a capital stock of $25,000. Wm. J. Clarke will be president and James T. Clark will be vice president. Frank Lemon, who has been cashier of the bank of Harbor Springs since it was started by Mr. Martin, will have the same position in the new institution. The board of directors will be made up of the following list of well known business men: H. Frank Lemon, James T. Clarke, Matt J. Erwin, Andrew L. Dennis, Ignatius Shay, Elmer G. Carey, Wm. Clarke, Geo. H. Martin and Wm. Clarke, Geo. H. Martin and Wm. W. Johnson.

A disastrous Calamity.

It is a disastrous calamity, when you lose your health, because nothing can be more unpleasant than sickness. Happy indeed are those who can say, "I owe my life to Dr. Kings New Life Pills. They cured us of liver complaint, dyspepsia, and extreme constipation, and now our health is perfect." Guaranteed at F. O. Hess & Co. drug store. 25c.

For The Term of His Natural Life

By MARCUS CLARKE

CHAPTER II.

In the hospitable country of a generous age, when the sin was light and the law heavy and the sea broad and shark infested, it was a matter of no moment to anyone on the shore what became of a convict.

The man had gone, and he was lost, and there was an end of him. Sometimes, if the man was a favorite, a subscription was made among the convicts on his behalf.

Men who had been in the Hulks with Frenchy, who had served on the same chain gang with him, who had worked in the same quarry, who had slept in the same dormitory, who had lain side by side in the same cell, for such men there was a kind word. Frenchy's wife, Frenchy's children, should be cared for, if money could be got together by a subscription among the convicts.

There was Frenchy's wife, Mrs. Vickers, a good little woman, and hard working, who had seen her husband twenty years before the mast, and was willing to wait for him twenty years more if need be, and to work her fingers to the bone for him if he came back at the end of it. She had been a laundress, and had taught her children to be laundresses, and they had all been happy together in the little house in the Rocks, with the little back yard in which to hang the clothes, and the little front parlor in which to iron them, when Frenchy had come home from his voyage.

They had been very happy indeed, for Frenchy was a good husband, and they had been very poor, for Frenchy was a generous husband, who had spent his money freely when he had it to spend, and who had brought home more than one friend to share his poverty and his joy.

Mrs. Vickers had been married to Frenchy when he was a young man, and had borne him children, who had died, and she had borne him children who had lived, and Frenchy had been a good husband to her in his way, and she was a good wife to him in her way, and they had been happy together in their little way, and she was willing to wait for him another twenty years if need be, and to work her fingers to the bone for him if he came back at the end of it.

Mrs. Vickers was a little woman, with a little face, and a little figure, and a little voice, and she was a little woman who had been a good wife to a husband who was not a little man in any way, and who PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF Charlevoix County 1905.

October 16th, 1905.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. Roll called quorum present. Ways & Means—partial report.

Charlevoix, Mich., Oct. 18th.

To the Honorable the Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix county:

Your committee on Ways & Means, in manner of report of treasurer and clerk, respectfully submit the following report and recommend as follows:

First—That the report be accepted and placed on file.

Second. Whereas your committee after diligent investigation and consultation with the county attorney find no legal way or method of refunding the indebtedness, and whereas the present system of county records is such that it is impossible to ascertain the real financial condition of the county and whereas the present system of paying old orders by issuing of new ones is clearly irregular and whereas the funds at present in the county treasury are insufficient to meet the expenses of the current year, clearly indicate a further indebtedness of several thousand dollars, and whereas money that should have been placed to the credit of certain special funds have been used for current expenses thus indicating the necessity of a thorough examination of the financial condition of the county we recommend that the board authorize the committee on Ways & Means to employ an expert accountant at a cost not to exceed $100 to examine the books of the various departments of the county and that a report embodying the findings of said expert accountant be made to the board of supervisors at its meeting in June next.

J. H. Adams, H. W. Paddock, W. H. Miller.

On motion W. J. Gallagher, supported by S. W. Paddock, that above report be accepted and adopted.

W. H. Miller called for a yea and nay vote.

SHOT BY TOWERMAN.

Treasurer Rothfuchs Gets Bullet in Quarrel with James Kurtis.

James Kurtis, a lumberman in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad, had two shots at Frank Rothfuchs, a resident of Kingsley, in the yards of the latter place, Saturday afternoon. The bullets lodged in Rothfuchs's back and inflicted a fatal wound. Kurtis, who is married and has a family, was arrested and held for trial. Rothfuchs died in the city hospital early this forenoon. The trouble between the men is said to have been caused by Kurtis's attentions to Rothfuchs's daughter. Rothfuchs is a prominent Kingsley Knights of Pythias lodge member. The funeral will be held in Kingsley Tuesday morning.

PLOT IS A FAILURE.

Plan to Blackmail Armour & Co. Out of $40,000 Frustrated.

By changing an engine through the Pullman car company's shops Indianapolis officials of Armour & Co. which is reported offered upon the payment of $40,000 at the hands of the Armour & Co. officials, William A. McKenzie, president of the Union Stock Yards company, and Charles Ewing, president of the Pullman company, thwarted what was intended for a sensational piece of blackmail. At the time of the outrage, it is said, the Armour & Co. officials offered to pay the $40,000 to bring about Kenzie's release from the hands of the blackmailers. Instead, the money was used in the employment of detectives who shadowed the blackmailers to Chicago, this morning, where they were arrested by Chief of Police Kipley, of Indianapolis, who had been notified by the company officials.

The scheme was to have been carried out Friday night, but the attempt was frustrated by the substitution of the engine. The conspirators had secured an impression of the car door key, and had arranged to have a duplicate made. The plot was to have been carried out upon the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad between Danville and Chicago. The men had secured a room in a Chicago hotel, where they had arranged to take the victim. Kenzie was to be taken to Indianapolis and held a prisoner in the car, while the money was being raised. The money was to be left in a locker in the car, and the victim was to be released upon the payment of the money. The conspirators had arranged for the money to be left in a locker in the car, and had arranged to have a duplicate key made. The plot was to have been carried out Friday night, but the attempt was frustrated by the substitution of the engine. Last Sunday was a day of rejoicing at the Baptist Church. After the morning sermon on "Christian Growth," seventeen new members received the hand of church fellowship. This was a beautiful and good impression on them. Each first received was presented with a certificate of baptism and a church manual by the pastor. The house was filled in the evening to hear the pastor's sermon on "Baptism and Communion." The Baptist position on these subjects were shown unquestionably to be the teaching of Christ.

In the afternoon the pastor preached at Bergen school house and twelve made public profession of faith in Christ. These will become members of Charlevoix Baptist Church.

COMMUTER WAS OUT OF LUCK

Encyclopedia at First Trial Throws Him Off the Track.

After the train had started a beclothes commuter came limping upon the last platform of a station some miles distant from New York. Under his arm was the last volume of an encyclopedia in sumptuous binding, and with a cash box and an affidavit in his hand he made for the conductor. The man met him with a deep frown and the local Philippic broke on him as soon as nothing but chaos had been assumed by the main trend. With great vociferation he did begin to lay down the law.

"Now, whoever that he may be you have been paying for this encyclopedia I've had neighbors nearly, and I've mentioned it to them a dozen times before this morning. Now, I gave a new check, a new leaver, and is going to start on the books, and I want to read up the subject of banking before I get in the city this morning.

"So I read on the volume with the letter B (which I'm eating breakfast that is the first thing I've read) and I find that the subject I want has been the second or third in the book. So I read on and I find that it ain't there. Then I look at index to see what I'm looking for, and I find it ain't there. Then I look at index to see what I'm looking for, and I find it ain't there. SET WORLD'S RECORD.

AMERICAN FARMS SHOW UNPARALLELED PROSPERITY.

Secretary Wilson Announces Crop Yields of 1905 to be 25,000,000 Bushels Above Previous Record—Wheat Increase in Land Values.

The production of the farms of the United States in 1905 reached a value of $6,415,000,000, the highest aggregate ever reported, according to the annual report of Secretary Wilson.

Besides the enormous total the Secretary calculates the farms of the country have increased in value during the last five years to a present aggregate of $5,750,000,000.

"Every season during the last five years, in turn, has surpassed its predecessor in the value of the farms of this country."

In dealing with the crop report for 1905, Secretary Wilson calls attention to the great increase of 1905 on the land in use for the production of cereals or staples. He says:

"The total area devoted to the production of cereals or staples in use during the year 1905 was 165,000,000 acres, which is 10,000,000 acres more than the previous year, 15,000,000 acres more than the average of the last five years, and 25,000,000 acres more than the average of the last ten years.

"The increase in the area devoted to the production of cereals or staples in use during the year 1905 was in the following proportions: In the area of corn, 5 per cent; in the area of wheat, 6 per cent; in the area of oats, 5 per cent; in the area of barley, 4 per cent; in the area of rye, 4 per cent; in the area of buckwheat, 3 per cent; in the area of potatoes, 3 per cent; in the area of hay, 3 per cent; in the area of flaxseed, 3 per cent; in the area of rice, 3 per cent; in the area of tobacco, 3 per cent; in the area of cotton, 3 per cent; in the area of sugar cane, 3 per cent; in the area of sugar beets, 3 per cent; in the area of sorghum, 3 per cent; in the area of broomcorn, 3 per cent; in the area of hops, 3 per cent; in the area of peanuts, 3 per cent; in the area of sweet potatoes, 3 per cent; in the area of dry beans, 3 per cent; in the area of dry peas, 3 per cent; in the area of cowpeas, 3 per cent; in the area of velvet beans, 3 per cent; in the area of vetch, 3 per cent; in the area of clover, 3 per cent; in the area of timothy, 3 per cent; in the area of orchard grass, 3 per cent; in the area of alfalfa, 3 per cent; in the area of millet, 3 per cent; in the area of flax, 3 per cent; in the area of hemp, 3 per cent; in the area of sisal, 3 per cent; in the area of jute, 3 per cent; in the area of kafir corn, 3 per cent; in the area of milo maize, 3 per cent; in the area of kaoliang, 3 per cent; in the area of pineapples, 3 per cent; in the area of bananas, 3 per cent; in the area of olives, 3 per cent; in the area of oranges, 3 per cent; in the area of lemons, 3 per cent; in the area of limes, 3 per cent; in the area of citrons, 3 per cent; in the area of grapefruit, 3 per cent; in the area of pomelos, 3 per cent; in the area of tangerines, 3 per cent; in the area of mandarins, 3 per cent; in the area of kumquats, 3 per cent; in the area of tang

AMERICAN STAPLES IN DEMAND

Our Sales to Other Nations Increasing by Leaps and Bounds.

No argument nor tariff experiments is to be found in the current statistics of trade. The growth of the need of more foreign markets is easily made by the fact that since the Ann arbor law was passed exports show a tremendous expansion.

The new export record for 1905 will be heavier more than $1,000,000,000 in value. We shall have fully doubled the volume of our exports ago.

In 1895 our sales abroad amounted to $892,000,000. In the ten years prior to 1895 of increase we shall show by comparison those of $1,000,000,000 and that excess that none since.

In the eight months ending with August, the exports exceed those of the eight months of the preceding year by $101,000,000.

Imports for the same period show an increase of over $100,000,000.

Commerce and the tariff are the Other the New York Tribune says.

These statements are made to the contention of the free trade press that the tariff is an expensive luxury, that it costs to import more than it costs the Dingley tariff. The time has gone by, and some reasonable, simple tariff experiments, for it was found that the Wilson-Gorman tariff, which was to bring in a revenue of $40,000,000 more than Judge Levi Roberts, one of the most prominent men in Traverse City, died very suddenly that Friday night at sparrow. He was at the Wequetong club, of which he is president when attacked and lived only four hours.

Petoskey News: About the time Portland Aikins left for his hunting vacation in the upper peninsula there appeared in these columns a report that the evening pressure the ferry at Mackinaw City had brought over the Bois Blanc Rapids, whose lives had been endangered in the woods. Although Mr. Aikins disbelieved the report, he was somewhat interested and when he reached Mackinaw he investigated the same. The owner on the land in question said that just two Sundays hunters had been brought down on that boat to the last seven years and that the season of 1905 hunters have the opinion the strain should have been much easier. Now that these figures seemed to be a source that is known and reliable to people who go last as clients for the members of their families who are enjoying their annual sport in hunting the deer-footed animal that so plentifully inhabits the north woods.

The new Jacobs brick court house at Benzie has been accepted by the committee on the board of supervisors and the building is now accepted to the county officers. This is in hopes, in the end of the county seat fight, which in the various phases, has lasted over a quarter of a century. The right began when the county seat was removed from Elk Rapids to Inelanor in 1879. Inelanor was then without a landing or courting of any kind and without a passable highway, but it was centrally located and had a good water power and was the rival of any other place. A hot campaign for votes and a stalemate resulted in the supreme court giving the right to Elk Rapids was concerned, but as soon as Benzie acquired a few buildings and a population a county sprang up between it and Central Lake and the people of Central Lake set their hearts on getting the county seat. For 25 years it was impossible to get the question in voting money for a courthouse was added to the people, and when it was finally submitted another hot campaign for votes was on. The issue of accepting the courthouse, ends these matters, and all Antrim county is now proud of the elegant and substantial new county building.

Dozens of all sorts and sizes are floating around Northern Michigan, in unmanned quantities these days, and water power seems to be an extraordinary fancy, all since the Manistee company made a petition for permission to clean the Manistee, Elves Big Rapids wants to fill in the game according to the Pioneer, and visions of gigantic water-supplying plants are the accompaniments of dreams in the Menominee county town these winter nights. As the Pioneer has it: "If Benzonia, an authority on the development of water power, says regarding the finite usefulness of the Muskegon river, I venture the assertion that between Big Rapids and Newaygo there is power enough that can be easily developed to run all the machinery, including electric cars and lighting, to Grand Rapids and Muskegon both. And usage only a small portion, as in the fifty miles of river below Newaygo there are many places that can and will be used for the transmission of electric power without Bush. Water powers in Michigan are worth more to the state than a great coal bearing area would be, for while the coal mine must sooner or later be exhausted, the water power will last as long as water runs. Little Muskegon, the Clam and Middle Branch, branches of the Muskegon river, are also mentioned as having many valuable water power sites along its course." If Manistee company dam at Sherman should materialize, and the returns therefrom be up to expectations, and if that and more, too, then dams will become as common as fleas on a dog in July.

TO FARMERS.

The Sugar Factory Means Agricultural Prosperity.

There has been but one instance in Michigan where a sugar factory has not been operatively, a gold mine built for the operators and the farmers, and the work thereby, which means a great deal to the county, where farmers could not be induced to take beets owing to the much greater value of the land for wheat from catalog. Wherever sugar factories have been operated, they have not only brought profit to their owners, but profit to the farmers.

Official data records the fact that beet crops have carried some per acre than any other crop raised, and that the crop adjusts itself to adverse conditions more easily than any other crop. The record of the past year shows that in every sugar factory locality the farmers are satisfied with results and are increasing acreage for next year.

In official comparative tests Northern Michigan sugar beets have shown a higher percentage of sugar than those of any other section of Michigan. Beets were raised here successive years, and where properly cultivated and cared for we believe farmers would have been satisfied, with results and the business of the Michigan sugar company, farmer and factory been what was desired.

Now this great industrial and agricultural enterprise is consolidated on a safe and stable financial foundation. There is no national enterprise that is so fully allied with the farmers as a beet sugar factory. The promoters of the enterprise realize fully that, without the co-operation of the farmers their efforts and their investments are vain. It is therefore their purpose and we speak authoritatively for the company, to be just and generous with the farmers. They realize that in time, their fair dealing will be a foundation of the farmers means mine-gold disaster.

With what are recognized as clear, by adverse conditions, growing out of past experiences here, the promoters purpose to adjust themselves, with the final object in view of either liquidation and the preservation of harmony between themselves and the farmers.

Mr. Hubbard wishes to meet the farmers and talk over new relations and it is his purpose to do this as opportunities afford. In the interests of all concerned we hope the farmers will meet him half way in this good work.

The success of this enterprise means very much to Northern Michigan, and we are sure the farmers realize the fact, and that they will act accordingly.

Ohio River Rises Suddenly.

A sudden rise of eight feet in the Ohio River Thursday caught unprepared manufacturers and packet agents who were at to get freight off the levee at Evansville, Ind., before much of it was carried away by the flood. Hundreds of contracts were denied of green corn, which will be the crop from four acres short the 100, is on a message. Hogs and cattle have been delivered to lowlands.

GOOD PROGRESS TO POLE.

Ship Arriving at Philadelphia Gives Favorable Report of Peary.

Favorable news of Commander Peary's latest expedition in search of the north pole was brought to Philadelphia by Captain Pinsent of the British tank steamer Strathdene, which arrived at Philadelphia from the east coast of Greenland. The captain stated that it was the intention of Peary to put into North Star bay, with the exploring steamer Roosevelt if conditions were not favorable for going further north. Before the Lakeline left the Danish steamship Ivan on her trip to Copenhagen, she was met by the Peary supply steamer Erik and hailed and signaled that she would not stop at North Star bay, no evidence of Peary being found there, but would proceed to Etah, further north, where her provisions would be carried for the expedition. After that she would return home. Captain Pinsent believes that the expedition will make Grant's Land its winter headquarters the season being unusually favorable for getting further north than ever before.

CAPTURE RAILROAD THIEVES

Gang Which Has Been Robbing System Arrested at Fairbanks.

A gang of thieves which has been robbing the Northern Pacific of supplies at Fairbanks, Minn., for some time, was captured by the railroad detectives in the city last night. The thieves were caught in the act of stealing a car of goods from the company's warehouse. The gang is composed of six men, all of whom are well known to the police of Fairbanks. The goods stolen were valued at $500. The thieves will be arraigned in the municipal court tomorrow morning.

CONVICT BOYS COMPANY STOCK

Gov. Folk Pardoned Because Prisoners Invests in Prison Concern.

Gov. Folk granted pardons to seven boys from Jefferson City to-day because they had invested their earnings in the Central Prison Manufacturing Company, which is a concern that employs the prisoners. The stock was bought by Miss Ethel Lewis, a young lady interested in Fort Leavenworth, who visited the prison and became interested in the "tips" she was given by a prison barber. Her investment in the company consisted before Christmas, for some time she has been at work for the Prisoners.

SNOWBOUND THREE DAYS

Train on Six Road Stalled on Dakota Prairies During Blizzard.

Train No. 18 on the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railroad arrived in Minneapolis last night after being snowbound three days. The train was stalled in the middle of a prairie blizzard. Passengers were compelled to remain in coaches, having been snowed in for three days. The train was propelled in the middle of a raging blizzard. The train was the only one that was successfully operated in the state during the blizzard. Passengers on the train were unanimous in the opinion that the Dakotas form the coldest country that they have ever visited. They can't get cold, they say, in the Dakotas.

Import Parasites for Moths.

Secretary Wilson has issued a circular permitting the entry from Europe into the United States of the species of fly known as the Tachinid fly, which feeds on moth, gypsy moth and brown tail moth. The fly is used in the war on the moths and is said to be the most effective agent in the destruction of moths.

Minister to Cuba Quits.

Herbert G. Squiers, the American minister to Havana, has turned his resignation to Washington. It is believed that the Cuban government, which has been at variance with Mr. Squiers since the latter's protest against Mr. Sanguily's attack on the latter's predecessor, Edwin F. Morgan, American minister to Korea, has been opposed to secured Mr. Squiers.

Mutineers Fight with Troops.

FIFTY-NINTH CONGRESS CALLED TO ORDER.

Both Senate and House Convene Monday with Large Crowds Present—Business Circumspect the Opening of the National Legislature.

Washington correspondence.

The first session of the Fifty-ninth Congress convened Monday at 12 o'clock. Vice President Fairbanks called the Senate to order, while the House was called to order by Clerk McDowell. It was a familiar scene when the Vice President called the Senate to order with two strokes of the gavel. There were few changes in the membership. Death had taken away Senators Berry of Tennessee and Platt of Connecticut. There were no changes among the Senate officials. In the House some changes in the personnel of the Speaker's cabinet, which is composed of the leaders of the various committees, which in the House, before it is acted upon by the committee on ways and means, is the committee on rules, which is composed of Speaker Cannon, Chairman Dalzell, Chairman Grow, Mr. Henry A. CANNON, HOLDS THE WHIP HAND.

Can Keep Any Attacks on the Protective System.

Washington dispatch state that speaker Cannon is not losing any sleep over what the Democrats may be able to accomplish in the way of tariff legislation at the coming session of Congress. Being himself a pronounced "stand pattter" Mr. Cannon is abundantly fortified both by the extraordinary powers of his position and by a majority of the House in sympathy with his views to resist any attack upon the present protective system. Tariff revision at this time could serve no other end than to furnish an issue to the Democracy, which does not seem to have one in sight on any other phase of popular special policy. Mr. Cannon shared the views of a great many other good Republicans that it is useless to force an issue and place weapons in the hands of the enemy. Moreover, he is in a position to use extraordinary methods if need be, to carry his point. The speaker does not contemplate the necessity for doing this, but is possible that he may fill some vacancies on the Ways and Means committee, or possibly even seem to be fitted with men in sympathy with his views, thus strengthening the already absolutely majority in that committee. At the bill must originate in the House it would thus be pretty effectually blocked at the outset, but even should the revisionists gain their ends in the point of a combination with the Democrats in the House it is pretty certain that Mr. Cannon could command a clear majority over the combined forces. Everything considered, therefore, the policy of the next Congress on the tariff question will probable be to let well enough alone. There are not many of the revisionists who would care to carry the fight in an open war against the President, whose chief end they must do hand for the advancement of protection effective direction. Mr. Cannon, it is understood, is not desirous of resorting to any arbitrary exercise of power, and feels confident that he will be able to handle the situation without any undue friction. The speaker usually knows what he is about and will desperate be found fully equal to the exigencies of any situation that may arise.—Paris (Ill.) Beacon.

A Joke on the Doctor.

A Baltimore physician says that recently he handled a Chinese patient, for that was quite unprecedented. He was chatting a big German sprawling over an area sufficient to seat two persons at least, while just in front of him stood a poor, wan woman hanging to a strap. Indignant at this exhibition of selfishness on the part of the German, the physician tapped him on the shoulder saying:

"Sow-sow! Why don't you move a little, so that this tired woman may have a seat?" For a moment the German looked dazed. Then a broad smile spread over his countenance as he replied:

"Tar, doc's a joke on you, all right! Dot's my wife!"—Horner's Weekly.

Where Children Are Sold.

On the main quadrille, on Friday, I received telegrams showing two distinct processes. Two little girls, of tender years, were sold, the one to a wicked procurer, and running about in the time, I suppose they were about to be 12 years old respectively. I do not know where they came from, but I know they were from some distant place of the interior, for the salesman who sold them to the stage Opera-House spoke about them as being from a town. These were brought with a Portuguese man who was so sorrowful at parting with them that he could not be persuaded to sell them at any price. The other little girl was sold to a wealthy man who was waiting for her here when she was brought from Portuguese Africa. The sales of these two little girls show that although the price of human flesh has fallen very much, and the demand is very slight, the supply is still equal to the demand. The sale of these two little girls, I understand, was made by the Portuguese Government, and the money received for them will be used in the service of the State.—Henry M. Stanley, in Harper's Magazine.

Bryan on Ruthless Sentiment.

Nothing is more worthy of consideration in some form or other than the trend of public sentiment. Speaking of Independence Day, William Jennings Bryan at a corner in Memphis, said: "It has been said that sentiment governs, as Napoleon said, a great deal more than it should govern. This trend of public sentiment is a very dangerous thing."

This trend resulted in the recent decision from Paris to Manila Cavite, and on the arrival at the Manila dock, he received the Aguinaldo flag to be sent for the same.

The trend, it seems, had prevented him on the journey, and the train had been wrecked, and the new flag was lost. This was evidence, to the mind of the man who when he met and talk with the words "Auf Wiedersehen" he knew meant Farewell, and two hours later, the corpse of the soldiers of Minnesota, cut in a hundred pieces.

"Oh, very well," said the court, "that set back and fetch me the flag that contains my trunk keys."—Philadelphia Record.

For The Term of His Natural Life

By MARCUS CLARKE

CHAPTER V.

In the prison of Port Arthur there stood a mountain of granite with their scarps. The center of the prisoners in the lighthouse was occupied by "passage." In prisoners' lines meaning a mine." You be put a very liberal interpretation upon the course and so long the convicts are tolerably good conduct and fighting he fell out different ways.

In one passage in from the upper air of the place would have seemed to pitchy darkness. But in certain rare cases tunnel to the surface, which was an shaft to the surface, which was an tunnel running approximately. The prison was known fifty feet long, and the roof, while and rag, the floor height of the "bunks" in the lighthouse were made hard boards and coarse and the prisoners in some places it is enough to sit upon a stool. In the of the lighthouse barks, was a long bench, the prisoners sitting back to back. At the head the prisoner or the foreman, or a trusted convict, sat on a stool, the prisoner facing him. The lighthouse was lighted by lamps of a pattern long extinct in the world, the wick being a rag twisted in a tin cup of oil. The lamps were placed on the floor, and the prisoners sat in the light of them, the rest of the place being in pitchy darkness. Such was the lighthouse when I first visited it, and such it remained to the last.

Where the lighthouse was placed it was impossible to say. The place was a labyrinth of passages, which, branching from time to time, ended in caves, or dead walls, or in shafts of the mountain. Some of these passages were of great length, others were short, but all were so low that a man could not stand upright in them, and so narrow that two men could not pass each other. The prisoners, who were all in irons, had to walk in single file, and, as they chiefly consisted of the "incorrigible" class, they had to be kept in order by the lash. Hence the lighthouse was a place of terror, and its inhabitants were known as the "lighthouse birds."

Here, then, I found, "off duty," as it were, the men who had been my companions during three years in the penal settlement of Port Arthur. Here, in the lighthouse, I was to live for the space, as the sentence runs, of my natural life. Here I was to be "marked" by the lash, and, if I survived the ordeal, to be released at last into the world, a "ticket-of-leave" man, to be "hunted" by the police, to be "marked" by the law, to be "hunted" by my fellows, to be "marked" by Nature, with the brand of Cain upon my forehead, and to herd with men who, like myself, were "marked" for evil doing.

Of the passage in which I lived I can give no clear account. I was there but a few months, and I was ever in a state of stupefaction. I remember that it was very long, that it was very narrow, that it was very low, that it was very dark, and that it was very damp. I remember that the roof was so low that I was compelled to stoop, and that the floor was so much broken that I was compelled to walk with my feet wide lest I should fall. I remember that the place was infested with rats, which ran over us in our sleep, and that we had to fight with them for our food. I remember that the air was so foul that our lamps burned dimly, that we could scarcely breathe, and that we were all of us sick with the fever of the place. I remember that the water with which we were supplied to quench our burning thirst was boiled water, in which our allowance of tea was infused, that our food was a mixture of meal and water, and that our beds were a few inches of damp straw. I remember that we were ironed two and two, that we were chained to our bedposts every night, that we were roused from our sleep by the lash falling upon the backs of our comrades, and that we ourselves were scored by the cat almost every day. I remember that we were mustered by the light of the lamps at daybreak, and that we marched out into the darkness of the morning to our labors in the quarries, and that we returned to our prison in the darkness of the evening. I remember that we had no light but that of the lamps in our prison, and that we were locked up in our cribs while the lamps were still burning. I remember that we had no Sunday, that we had no Christmas Day, that we had no holidays, but that we worked like the convicts we were, from dawn to darkness, under the lash of the brutal task-master.

Of our life in the quarries I can give a more distinct account. We were ironed two and two, and our chains were so short that we could not stand upright in them, but were compelled to stoop like beasts of burden. We had to carry our food with us to our place of labor, and we ate it as we could, in the intervals of our toil, or during the short hours of the night. We had no shelter from the rain or the heat, from the cold or the storm. We had to toil from dawn to darkness, under the lash of our task-masters, who were relays of brutes like themselves. We had to fell the forest trees, to saw them into planks, to square them into beams, to haul them to the prison by our own strength, and we had to do this under the lash, and amid the execrations and blasphemies of our task-masters. We had to do this, we had to live like this, we had to sleep like this, we had to pass our days in this manner for months and years, and we had to look forward to this as our lot for our natural lives.

Of our life in our prison I can give a more distinct account. We were locked up in our cribs at sunset, and we had to rise at the call of our task-masters at daybreak. We had to fold our blankets and to place them upon our beds in such a way that the convicts could see that we had done so. We had to washed in a common tub, and we had to use the towel which was provided for the use of the whole prison. We had to eat our food in our cribs, and we had to keep our cribs in such a state that the convicts could see into them from the passage. We had to pass our days in our cribs when we were not at our labor, except when we were allowed to walk in the yard for exercise. We had to attend divine service in the prison chapel, and we had to read our Bibles when we were not at our labor. We had to be locked up in our cribs at sunset, and we had to rise at the call of our task-masters at daybreak.

All this we had to do, and we had to do it under the lash. We had to do it under the eyes of our task-masters, who were relays of brutes like themselves. We had to do it under the eyes of convicts, who were men like myself, who were condemned to the same life as myself, who were marked men like myself, who were outcasts like myself, who were hunted men like myself, who were men who had lost their lives like myself, who were men who had lost their souls like myself, who were men who had lost their hopes like myself, who were men who had lost their all like myself, who were men who had lost their all like myself, who were men who had lost their all

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Methodist Church.

Rev. J. W. Vickery will preach on Sunday morning and evening. Morning topic "Aliaches." Evening topic "The justice of God's rule over men." Thinking men are especially invited to be present at the discussion of these live themes. Aug. 31, Epworth League, topic. "What Methodism stands for." Leader, Mrs. J. W. Vickery.

At the Methodist church, on Sunday evening, Rev. A. T. Ferguson the newly appointed Presiding Elder of Grand Traverse district, preached an able sermon, which will be long remembered by the goodly congregation which gathered to hear the popular Sir John. He on Monday evening the members rendered him a surprise. A pleasing program was rendered as follows: Piano solo, Miss Jeanette Campbell; vocal duet, Mrs. Woodley and Miss Cole; recitation, Miss Cole; piano solo, Miss Campbell. The pastor introduced the guest of the evening whose remarks were both witty and appropriate, his stay in his 12 charges has been a revelation as to the territory of the soil. A warm welcome was paid to the brethren and sisterhood of some of the outsiders, who small salaries manage to live and bring up families respectably. He believed the temporal and spiritual prospects of the district were indeed great. A delightful social hour followed and refreshments were served.

Congregational Church.

The pastor will speak next Sunday morning on the the "Great Alliance," in the evening, in the "True Aristocracy."

The Christian Endeavor Society is again at work. Remember the meeting Sunday evening at six o'clock. Subject, "What our denomination stands for."

The ladies Missionary society will meet with Mrs. Harsha, Friday afternoon at 2:30.

It is gratifying to note the growing interest manifested in the mid week service. The service last Thursday evening was most delightful.

One of the most encouraging departments of our work is among the boys. Tuesday evening twenty boys met at the home of the pastor to organize the Charlevoix Boys Club. After a social hour with games and refreshments were served and the preliminary steps were taken for the organization of the club. The object of the club is to furnish a good social life for the boys coupled with a passion for their general improvement.

The officers will be installed of Ki Johns night, December 27th by Past Grand Master F. E. Turrell.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Mr. Kennedy, of Grand Rapids, visited the Island on business Monday.

No deer of snow yet to Beaver Harbor. Lake perch are in this time trains were driving over part of the harbor.

Prospects seem good for a light winter.

The H. I. Lumber Co. have bought a new steel larger logging engine for their business here, finding it was required to keep the plant running to its full capacity. It is expected to arrive to-day by steamer Orcott.

Gus Kittinger and W. E. Stephens are expected to arrived to day (Wednesday) on Cowell.

A new regulation bowling alley is being in being built here, which will afford a pleasant way of starting away winter evenings.

The Holy Cross church is to hold its Christmas entertainment at Gallagher's hall, and it promises to be up to the usual high standard.

Born to Mr. and Mrs Will Gibson, a five ten pound boy. Mother and child doing well.

Note Meeting.

Nov. 20th is the date fixed for a Mass meeting of citizens to consider matters pertaining to electric light and water. Notice of place and time will be given.

BEAUTY OF THE DEGREES.

Three Degree Teams Are Raising the Standard to Improve Work.

It is a commonplace now that in many Granges the degrees are being simply rattled off in a perfunctory way. It seems that therein is nothing. But the work in the new Ritual of Ceremonies which requires more careful preparation and precision of speech and gesture appears to have lost its charm for many. Perhaps it is because it is popular to attack. The new ceremony of the degree work, which has performed wonderful service in the same capacity that a spring board is used to jump by a diving swimmer, is now by many not thought any longer of as a means to an end but as the end itself. It could be so much more than that. It could be so much more attractive than it is. It could be so much more helpful to the members.

In each community we come across men who have a vision of what the degree work and practice of a living grange should be.

It could be made the means for good citizens sought to be in the community, for the development of the best manhood and womanhood, for the training of men and women for service. And yet some are attractive to most of the whole entertainment. For such it is the most beautiful, most glorious conception of the ceremonial, giving scope, when in the hands of the degree work and the same general origin of the ball. After the ceremonies to the degree work given in Delaware, I was told as one member, and what a profound impression it made, while the dark stage behind seemed to extend and fill the room with the mystical characteristics of the ceremonial, the kneeling and gentle swaying and harmonious groupings, several of which were introduced by musical figures, seemed to all impressive perfect.

Music in the Grange.

Every grange has musical talent, in each of Grangedom, I'll venture somewhat developed. Of course there is music in grange programmes. Nothing is so quite so well with recitings, discussions, essays and debates as music. The set for the music lecturer, the organ, and but it should be the lecturer's aim to encourage every member having musical ability to contribute to the interest of the meeting.

Great wisdom is needed just now in shaping the grange ship in a straight course to avoid possible shoals and rocks of disaster. Good men are at the helm and behind the gun, however.

If there is no grange in your locality, reader, write for particulars to the secretary of the state grange in your state, and he will give all the necessary particulars.

We can make a wonderful growth in practicability the coming year.

PRINTING & BINDING

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

A movement is on foot for the erection of a seed warehouse at East Jordan by a large seed company.

Hon. H. B. Hudson of Mancelona, has been honored by an appointment as assistant Inspector General on the staff of Department Commander E. C. Gannon of the Grand Army of the Republic of the state of Michigan.

J. Waffle of Banks township, has placed little bushels of potatoes, expecting a better market in the spring. Unless there is a change in the present indications he will wish he had sold this fall at 50c.

Elk Rapids Progress: Judge J. J. McLaughlin has shown us a copy of the Elk Rapids Eagle published in February, 1896, by E. L. Sprague. The Eagle was a four column folio and the entire sheet was about the size of a single page of the Progress of the present day. The letter of the Sentinel, worked as a compositor on the Eagle in 1896, and in 1898 helped to move it to Traverse City.

Petoskey Independent: The plans, specifications and blue prints for the proposed tugboats to be the Northern Michigan Transportation Company's dock at this place, as prepared by H. H. Kerkyk, our local architect, have been accepted. Agent Wetzel, for the company, is now in consultation with local contractors regarding the work which will soon begin. The amount of money to be expended on this work will be to the neighborhood of $5,000.

A club composed of 500 of the wealthiest Chicago people, with Marshall Field at the head has secured options on nearly the entire South Manitou Island, which is five miles long by three wide, and one of the most beautiful spots in Lake Michigan. They hope to get a sufficient bonus at Grand Arbor, with prestige over ferry direct to the island, making the island only 22 hours from Chicago. They will erect fine residences and improve the island, making it the equal of any resort on the great lakes.

At the last meeting of the board of supervisors of Benzie county it was determined to engage expert accountants to go over the county treasurer's books for the past few years. Last week the accountants and the committee to assist them arrived at Frankfort to begin work when lo, and behold! The treasurer's books prior to January 1, 1895, had disappeared! A special meeting of the board of supervisors will convene this week to see what shall be done. The question is, Who was afraid of the examination, and stole the books?

At Petoskey the citizens have provided a room, which is called a "rest room" where farmers with their families, or lone people who are down town shopping may drop in for a rest. A Mrs. Maxam from Alba has been secured for matron, and the place is made very inviting by a supply of newspapers and also coffee and doughnuts are served free. Many people availed themselves of the opportunity to rest from the hot day the place was opened and many of the farmers bring their lunch along with them. The idea is well worth being copied by other towns.

East Jordan Enterprise: The township board met Monday and considered the matter of refunding the Intire bridge at the Intermediate Lake, and also considered the petition for calling a special election to vote on the proposition to vote $10,000 in bonds for road and bridge purposes, under the special enabling act passed in 1895. The object of raising so large an amount, as should be understood by all, is not that the bonds should be issued at once, but as occasion may require, the expenditure in making public roads and making roads and bridges for use of industries to locate here.

Bayne Citizen: As announced in The Citizen several months ago, it has been the intention of Wm. H. White & Co. to incorporate their several industries, and the same was carried out last week. The new company will be known as the Wm. H. White Co. and is officered as follows:

President—W. H. White; Vice President—Jas. A. White; Treasurer—Thomas White; Secretary—W. C. Martin. The above officers also comprise the board of directors. The capital stock of the corporation is $1,200,000, fully paid in, the shares being held at $100 each. The company takes over the big mill, shingle mill, flooring plant and all of the timber holdings of the old companies, the principal part of the stock is held by the House Wm. H. Thomas and James White, in about the same proportions as they were interested in the old companies. The interest held by Robert White, George White, J. M. Harris, S. C. Smith, M. L. Martin, George Hassell, M. D. Reeder, H. H. Jamerson and W. S. Winsnip.

WORST FEARS REALIZED.

The Body of Ella Hines Found in the River Near Hospital.

Since it became known that Miss Ella Hines was missing, the minds of her relatives and friends have harbored the fear that the excellent young lady would never again be seen alive. Their fears were well grounded.

On Tuesday morning Frank G. Hines received a telegram from his brother-in-law, Mr. Laumers, dated Baltimore that the body had been found in the river near the hospital.

Miss Hines had suffered several severe attacks of nervous prostration during which she had shown unmistakable signs of alienation. It is now known conclusively, that following an attack of nervous mania, she became temporarily insane, and threw herself into the river.

The body will arrive here probably today. The afflicted relatives are the recipients of the deep sympathy of all.

BURGLARY AGAIN.

Three Recent Cottages Entered, and Arrests Made.

Three recent cottages have been entered by burglars the past week. The first discovered was that of Prof. A. H. Pattengill, which is situated on the bluff on the Mt. McSauba road. It was found that much material had been taken but, until a search about the premises uncovered material that had been secreted in the brush.

The police authorities at once began an investigation. It was found that three boys, whose names we will omit print, for the sake of the parents who when first in that vicinity had sold a stove, which was found to have been taken from the Pattengill cottage. They were arrested Monday evening.

Monday, constables Wm. Woods, on making his rounds, discovered that the Lindsay Park cottages of Theodore Hasselmer and Geo. Eddie, both of St. Louis, had been entered. The locks on the doors had been completely cut out. They were unable to determine what had been taken, but at once telegraphed the owners.

Tuesday it was discovered that the Lindsey Park cottage, of W. H. Coburn, of Indianapolis, located near the first, had been entered and thoroughly ransacked.

The authorities are investigating.

First Expert Examination.

The committee of the board of supervisors appointed at its last session, to employ an expert accountant for an examination of the county book's, has work employed Mr. C. E. Turrell, cashier of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

Later the committee employed Mr. Ira G. Mosher as expert and legal assistant, at four dollars per day. Upon inquiry from a member of the committee we learn that it was thought advisable that a lawyer should be employ of as one of the experts, in order that illegal bills could be ferreted out, and illegal appropriations uncovered.

We did not understand from the resolution of the board that the expert was to be given legal functions, but that the examination was to bring out in detail the state, financial condition of county affairs. The law makes the prosecuting attorney the legal adviser of the county, and his salary covers such services as he may be called upon to render.

We do not for a moment question the sincerity of the committee, but we think they have made a mistake in more ways than one. The committee is composed of men whose honesty is a source question but we cannot throw off the conviction that an error has been committed, and we think time will demonstrate it.

We do not think the board contemplated any such action on the part of the committee, and if we are not mistaken it will make the fact known at the proper time.

We are told by those who know, that Mr. Turrell made the proposition to do the work for six dollars per day, and furnish his own assistant. The present arrangement involves and expense of eight dollars per day. We cannot see any good and sufficient justification in expending this extra two dollars per day.

But we are reminded of what Mark Antony said of Brutus et al, at the bier of Cæsar.

THE ELLSWORTH POWER PLANT

Contract Let for Supplying and Setting the Poles for the Charlevoix Line.

From the Bellaire Independent:

J. G. Jenkins of Mancelona has made the levels on the race, power house, dam, etc., for the Hydraulic Light and Power Co., and has completed the chart for the pole line to Charlevoix. This line is 25 miles long and will take 1,000 poles. These will be mostly 25 feet in height, though some will be higher. The pole tops will be seven inches. On the entire line only about 60 poles must be guyed, which shows the line as surveyed to be quite favorable indeed. Nearly 16 miles of the line will be perfectly straight. The three wires will be No. 8 hard drawn copper.

Robert Douglas has taken the job for Mr. Tuchardt of securing the poles and distributing them to realizers for setting.

Work on the strengthening of the dam was first begun. The wooden forms for the concrete core are being put in, and some earth filling has been done. Whether or not any of the concrete will be filled into the forms this fall will depend upon the weather. After the core is in, a layer of earth will be filled in upon the upstream side, leaving the concrete core in the center of the dam.

The power house will be 85 feet long and 50 feet wide, one end sitting upon the wheelpits. The roof will be about 20 feet higher than the floor of the bridge where bridge. The foundation and basement walls of the power house will be of cement, with brick walls for the main part. The main room will be in the basement, beneath the dynamo room.

GOOD Short Stories

A Dire speculator, at the famous Delmonico meal, the opinion was by Dow Street Fisher (N.Y.) recently. "Not decked your head," said the laughing Patrick Kavanagh, who charged Joseph Kavanagh with stealing at him in the street. "Faith, and I did, your worship. The better to be revered for five minutes than to be dead all your lifetime."

When the last Vanderbilt baby was born, Mr. Cleveland was asked about the weight. Such he gave its twelve pounds. Dr. Bryant, who was present, interrupted the ex-President to say that the times had reported the young heir to be an eight pounder. "Well," said Mr. Cleveland, "I know I've weighed him with the scales on, but I use when I go fishing."

An ardent "Sugar Grower" in Barnum, used to exhibit specimens of a horse a horse and a wagon and a lamb all roamed together in one sugar "Remarkable!" Barnum, and he to Barnum. "Remarkable is nothing to surprise." said the showman, "all animals dwell together in this way." "Seven months," Barnum answered, "on the 5th I had a lion born and reared."

A man went into a drug store and called for a bottle of sugar pills and which was adjudged than. "No Mam," answer, "we don't sell pills by the dozen." Then duty bids he leave the drugged. Dr. Bryant, who was present was amazed at and that he had not sought out the "Sugar Grower." "Sugar," said the druggist, "sugar is prized the world." "Why, I had a sugar pill last night," said the "Sugar Grower."

"Why, you don't mean to say you swallowed a sugar pill?" said the druggist, "you mistook a pill for a sugar." "Why, I swallowed it, I tell you," said the "Sugar Grower." "Did you swallow it whole?" said the druggist. "Why, I swallowed it whole," said the "Sugar Grower." "Did you bite it in two?" said the druggist. "Why, I swallowed it whole, I tell you," said the "Sugar Grower." "Did you chew it?" said the druggist. "Why, I swallowed it whole, I tell you," said the "Sugar Grower." "Did you swallow it whole

NATIONAL GRANGE.

17th ANNUAL SESSION HELD AT LAKE CITY, N. J.

Matters of Importance Considered and a Summary Given of Resolutions Adopted—Marked Increase in Membership Indicates the Grange Strong Financially.

Atlantic City, N. J., proved to be the best place for the meeting of the national grange. The weather was perfect, rain should be desired, and the large gatherings were seen at its sessions in the pleasure and conveniences of Gold Dust Paterson. The Pomona, which gave headquarters for the national grange, was a large and well-ventilated building, which had been used in Camden for a number of years, and was the scene of many interesting meetings of the national grange. In 1891 it was the place where the Farmers' Alliance of New Hampshire, Hon. John Hamlin, Master of the Massachusetts State grange, and representatives of the government, discussed Russian sunflowers, the cultivation of which was to be begun in the Union, thinking for relief in the Union, to the great commercial significance and the spacious entertainment planned for the Patrons.

The expected attendance of delegates from days of the session was about 3,000. Those who took the journey on the opening Tuesday were very agreeably surprised and encouraged to see the preparation for seating the very large thing and convention.

While there was no quorum to open the Annual City in November, the delegates were not inclined to sacrifice business to pleasure. It was practically a business session. The national secretary reported 200 new granges organized during the year ending Oct. 1, each one organized, making a total of 27,6 Michigan leads with 47 new granges, Vermont reports 25, Ohio and Maryland 22 each, Pennsylvania 17, New York 16, Maine 14, Massachusetts 11 and the other states less than 10 each.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance in the treasury Oct. 1, 1904, of $20,000.27. The income received during the year from state granges for dues was $18,295.26. The total receipts from all sources were $52,314.21. The expenses of the thirty-eight national session were $11,184.77 for per diem and mileage. The total resources of the National grange Oct. 1, 1905, were $40,900.44.

In the large sense of expansion we can state that it seems to be the general judgment that at no time in the history of the Patrons of Husbandry has the organization been in better condition to meet the demands of the times. In Michigan the Patrons have made great progress and can report a wide interest in farm and community matters.

The national session of grange received fraternal delegates.

BOY CONFESSES PLOT.

WAS PARTNER IN PLAN TO BE ROBBED IN CHICAGO.

Thief Threw Red Pepper in Messenger's Eyes and Took $1,775 from Him—Not Known Man Arranged Beforehand.

Charles Hunter, one of the boys arrested the other day for the theft of a package valued at $1,800 from Adams & Evans Company in Chicago, confessed to the police officers that he was the dupe of a man named Robert Forster. A Chicago dispatch of March 31 has the following account of the affair:

Young Hunter, who is but 18 years of age, was taken into the office of the company in question by Forster, who represented himself as a wholesale jewelry house in Milwaukee. He told the boy that he was the messenger in the employ of a wealthy jewelry house in Milwaukee and that he was in the habit of carrying valuable packages of jewelry. He said that he was being followed by a man who had robbed him of a package of valuable jewelry a few days before.

Young Hunter was impressed with the story and agreed to help Forster. He said that he was a messenger in the employ of a wholesale house himself and was in the habit of carrying valuable packages. The two then went out together and walked toward the Auditorium hotel. Forster said he was going to meet a friend who was to give him a package of valuable jewelry. Young Hunter was to be his messenger and was to carry the package. Forster said that he was being followed by a man who had robbed him of a package of valuable jewelry a few days before and that he was afraid of being robbed again. He said that he was being followed by the same man who had robbed him before. Young Hunter said that he was being followed by a man who was after his package of valuable jewelry.

The two went into the Auditorium hotel and Forster said that he was expecting Bluejacket Was Satisfied.

A Chicago man, professor into little pretty story the other day:

"It was a benefit performance," he said, "and at a table in the lobby some programs were sold, and by Miss Lillian Russell, Miss Elsie Janis, Miss Anna Held, Mrs. Fiske, Wallace Hopper, Miss Rena May and two or three other actresses.

"A stunning table it was undoubtedly. A young bluejacket paused before it. He stood quite still for some minutes, with his bronzed young face and his neat nautical rags starting with the most ardent and respectful admiration at the young ladies behind him. Then, with a half sigh, he laid a piece of silver down and turned away.

"'Won't you have something for your money?' one of the ladies called.

"The jackie shook smiled and answered:

"'Why, I had more than my money's worth already, thanks.'"

Usual Way.

"Ever notice it?" mooted the man who always begins his questions at the other end.

"Did I ever notice what?" asked the party who had volunteered to assist with the dialogue.

"That when one of three thirsty chums feels he has a message for the world he always wants to send it 'out west?" confirmed the other.

Indians Want Royal Viceroy.

Now that the police and princess of Wales have gone on a journey to the Orient there comes renewed to a demand from India that the viceroy of that colony shall be a royal personage. Leading newspapers of the great Asiatic dependency endorse the royal demand, adding that the viceroy should have a cabinet, the governor general to be prime minister.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

On Tuesday evening of this week occurred one of the most successful Xmas entertainments in the history of the island. It was given at the Island Opera House, Gallagher's hall, by the Holy Cross Church. The Dominican Sisters divided the program and trained all the performers with the exception of the wedding speaker of the evening who was Captain Campbell of the steamer Beaver. The captain did himself proud as he usually does with what he undertakes in handling the task allotted to him. After stating that he was no speech maker he proceeded to prove the contrary by a happily worded extemporaneous address. His conclusions was the wonderful example which had taken place on Beaver Island during the past ten years. It was just a decade since the sisters came to the Island and at that time the educational system in vogue here was very inferior indeed. In an Arabic class of children mostly boys who listened the books and proceeded to act quiet and make themselves generally obnoxious whenever a thief would land. Two of these gray lads, the Sisters came to the Island and from educational chaos brought forth as talented, respectful and well trained youth as can be found anywhere. The captain said he had never been better entertained by a miscellaneous program rendered by school children with the same facilities for controlling and properly ascribed the changed conditions to the work of the Sisters who teach our Parish Schools. During the course of the evening a purse of $118 was tendered the pastor Fr. Paschal as a Christmas gift. At the close of the entertainment, proper a large number of presents were distributed.

A Fearful Fate.

It is a fearful fate to have to endure the terrible torture of Piles. Jas. Cahill of Bay City, writes Harry Coleson, of Mesaville, Ia. RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Congregational Church.

The pastor will preach a New Year's sermon next Sunday morning. In the evening he will speak on "Choice."

The Christmas entertainment Friday evening was excellent. Great credit is due all who helped to make the entertainment so successful, and especially to Mrs. Burnett for her careful and painstaking training of the children. The court is to be congratulated on the rendering of the Christmas Anthem Sunday morning. It was greatly appreciated by the congregation.

The boys' club met with the pastor Tuesday evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs A. T. Burnett Wednesday, Jan. 3rd at 2 p. m.

Baptist Church.

An excellent Christmas program was rendered Monday evening by the Sunday school, to the delight of the large audience present. Many went away unable to secure standing room. The exercises showed earnest faithful work on the part of those who did the training and taught and labored on the part of the pupils.

Preaching Sunday by pastor.

Methodist Church.

The pastor will preach sermons appropriate to the last Sabbath of the year. In connection with the evening service a brief "Watch Night" service will be held to which everybody is invited.

Preaching services at Epworth church on Sunday at 2 o'clock.

Episcopal Church.

Services at the Episcopal church on Wednesday evening, January 3rd by Rev. C. T. Stout. A cordial invitation to all.

Mystery Solved

The mystery surrounding the great Chicago fire has been solved.

It was known by some of the neighbors that the Dowiens had a good range. Dowien had recently bought a load of soft coal for use in the range. Last week the stove was thought of and a search instituted in the cellar. Scattered over almost the entire area of the cellar were small pieces of the range.

This, taken in connection with the fact that a neighbor boasts that he heard a loud explosion just before the fire was discovered, pretty clearly establishes the fact that the stove had been filled up with coal and shut up. The explosion released a volume of gas, which probably asphyxiated the woman and children.

The story that the doors were locked seems to have been a mistake. The neighbor who was first on the ground opened the front door, when she discovered that the house was full of coal gas which immediately ignited, and fill of the house with a roaring flame.

CONDITIONS CHEERING.

Snow Factory Affairs Have Reached Smooth Water.

When the St Charlevoix Sugar Co. was dissolved this month and the West Michigan Sugar Co. came into existence, risks were taken. A hard state of affairs confronted the new organization. They were burdened with a heritage of indifference on the part of the farmers and closely bordered on antagonism. There was good reason for it, and the new company knew it.

The difficulties must be surmounted, or future operations were impossible. Without the co-operation of the farmers the factory must remain idle. First of all, the new company provided for liquidation of old claims, on a suitable basis. They started into the new deal well grounded financially, and, last of all, with a firm purpose to win back the good will of the farmers.

That has been done!

Representatives of the company have been among the farmers, attended their meetings and had heart to heart talks with them. The company has not only counted a mutually advantageous "A" of "Wins," but has financially backed such inventiveness on the part of the farmers. It was really on the initiative of the sugar company that Arthur Beattie was sent to St. Louis and Holland. His report has served to firmly establish confidence in the minds of the farmers, and there is no longer room doubt that perfect harmony now exists and that the farmers will grasp the opportunity with avidity and co-operate with the sugar company to make the enterprise an unprecedented success.

With the beginning of the new year the company will begin to make contracts with the farmers, and there is no question but that the number of contracts will exceed those of either of the two years under the former regime.

The writer of this has interviewed many farmers, and all of them are in excellent self confidence as they now present themselves, and all express themselves enthusiastically with reference to the outlook.

NORWOOD NEWS.

School closed Friday for two weeks vacation.

Wm. Cowen who is working at Toledo was home for Christmas.

Chas. Greeley, formerly of Norwood but now living at Kaiz, was here over Sunday.

Mr. F. H. Nichols, brother in law of Chas. Ferguson, arrived Saturday night from New York city.

Mrs Sadie Simmons who has been visiting at Kaiz over the past two months, arrived Friday night.

Martin Valentine from Thompson, arrived Wednesday night and will stay until after New Years.

There will be a meeting in the Town Hall Friday evening Dec. 29th in the interest of the lost running business.

Miss Grace Stafford who is attending school at Mount Pleasant, arrived Saturday and will stay during the holidays.

The Christmas exercises at the M. E. church Saturday evening given by the Sunday School children, was said to be almost the best ever held here.

E. S. Harris and wife, Mrs. Wilson and Marion Harris who is home from the University of Chicago, and is a sweetheart, all of Ellsworth, were here Sunday.

Don't forget the New Year's supper given by the L. A. S. at the town hall Jan 1st 1906. Before the supper a photographer Allonia residing at the good looking people in Norwood will be shown. The album will be manipulated by Mrs. Wm. Ivarl who is an old hand at the business, and the machine will be worked for all there is in it.

Daniel Flanigan died at his home at Antrim City Saturday evening. Mr. Flanigan was one of the early settlers by the township of Hayes, coming there in the early sixties. He was a soldier in the war of the rebellion. Neal Flanigan, now one of the janitors in the Bitzenhouse Sawmill Co., of Chicago, is the only living child of his first wife, and there are none by second.

—A very profitable sugar beet meeting was held at Horton Bay last saturday night. Sugar company representatives were present, and the attendance of farmers was large. The concern the meeting was great satisfaction. The farmers at that section appreciated section of Charlevoix county are in line for a good large acreage of beets for 1906. Also are they show up equally well. There is no longer the slightest doubt that sugar beets will be the principal product of northern Michigan next fall.

—Two specials. Attorney Wilmore campaigning of the Sugar Beet Co. has come to a close after a job of sixty days. The factory started sitting October 1st and had to run two months from without sunshine or sittings of beets during the entire run. The beets were poor, and all of the time, and the sittings weather has prevented rapid harvesting and hauling of the crop. Over 60,000 tons of beets have been harvested at the south this year, which required 1,000 cars and seven wagon loads, and our sugar output was 120,000 pounds per day, or a total of over 12,000,000 pounds of sugar during the run. The average run of beets has been 16½ per cent, showing fine and proper cultivation, and the conditions with the Alma factory have resulted 225,000 for beet crops. All who have had settlements are now satisfied and are contracting for next year. The factory has had 1,000 unsuccessful runs, having turned out 1,800 tons of dried beet pulp.

The Crane Investigation.

At the October session of the board of supervisors Mr. Goodwin for the third world of the county of Charlevoix, introduced a resolution that an expert accountant be employed to investigate the county treasurer's books and submit a report of the actual business of the county for the year 1905. The resolution was adopted.

Not and well day that such examinations in public offices are made, and not only proper, but necessary, in these days of public suspicion over the integrity of the official acts and the handling of public funds, there are numerous sources speaking of made to the proposed item.

The Charlevoix referred the matter to the ways and means committee, Supervisors Fitzsimmons and Adams will prepare to get the Fitzsimmons Supervisor and Mr. C. E. Turner, auditor of the Charlevoix county treasurer, to be a part of the library in Mr. Turner was made the proper person to do the work for six dollars per day and forfeit his non-partisan and non-political character, making the total cost of the examination from twenty to thirty dollars.

We believe that Mr. Turner's participation in the work for six dollars per day and forfeit his non-partisan character, as it should have been that, and we believe he no doubt. But the appointment of Mr. Mosher forward as a source of protest that commenced in the setting of a political process of the board of supervisors on yesterday. The board is now in session.

Co-operation, that an expert accountant be employed and report to the board of supervisors, and that the board be instructed to make such investigation that the expert accountant shall be instructed, and the expense of the investigation shall be included in the report of the board of supervisors.

Mr. Mosher signs his process as "Counsel for petitioner." Did the resolution of the board contemplate the employment of "counsel" for the examination? Where does the prosecuting attorney come in?

The issue and short of it, is the board seems to be resolved itself into a partisan and altogether unfair proceeding. No action so taken can be used in a satisfactory exhibit of county affairs. Not one county officer objected to the proposed examination investigation. None of them are afraid of the result. But they strenuously object to Irv G. Mosher's participation in such investigation, and their objections are well grounded. They know that Mr. Mosher is not an expert accountant, within the meaning of the board's resolution. He may be an expert lawyer, but there are no questions of law to pass upon in the proposed investigation. They believe, and we believe with them, that the appointment of a Charlevoix man who has been a consistent and virulent opponent of everything republican is as much out of place as it would be to submit a matter of life and death to a jury the members of which had previously and emphatically expressed an opinion in the case. They believe, and we believe with them, that Mr. Paddock's resolution, although veiled with the deceptive mantle of public interest, was conceived in a spirit of bitter partisanship, and carried out, thus far, with a spirit of vindictiveness against those whom he asserts were the weapons of his political undoing.

For the sake of a disarriage. It is nothing more nor less than a democratic sensational conspiracy headed by Paddock to dig up a mare's nest for use in 1906, and lessen the campaign expenses of that combination upon the taxpayers of Charlevoix county.

An expert examination of county affairs is desirable and proper, but the occasion in which it has been brought about is an outrage against decency, and a burlesque on justice.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT.

The citation case, above referred to, came up before Judge Mayne Dunham in chambers, Judge Dunham, Mr. Harris appeared for himself only. He contended that there was no reason in law or equity why he should have been cited. Mr. Mosher conceded the point. Judge Harris then stated to the court that he had been to consider the matter in preparing his defense, asked that the costs be assessed against the members of the ways and means committee, individually. The judge took the matter under advisement until Saturday of this week, when the other counsel officers will appear by counsel.

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

Miss Isabelle spent the holidays in Petoskey with Miss Ellen. She had not been home since last March.

The Normal class of of 1906 will entertain the Alumni of the Charlevoix County Normal School on Thursday evening, Jan. 4th.

The Normal girls entertained the pupils of the Training School on the Friday before Christmas. The girls gave a dramatization of part of Dickens "Christmas Carol," and the pupils blew sang a Christmas song. At the close of the program, candy which the girls had made was distributed.

Work was resumed in the Normal School this week. When the school bell rang the small boys and girls all over town began to inquire anxiously whether the holidays were over. The telephone rang repeatedly and Mr. Howard, the janitor, was kept busy answering people that the other department had another week of vacation.

RIGHTS OF FISHERS.

SECRETARY ROOT MAKES RULING ON CONTROVERSY.

His Decisions on Two Disputed Points Are Satisfactory to Both Canadian and American Catchers—Difficulties Are Settled.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of State Root has given his decision in the controversy between the Canadian and American fishermen in the Behring sea, and it is understood that both parties to the controversy are well satisfied with the decision. Mr. Root has held that the Canadian contention that the Behring sea is a closed sea is not tenable, and that the Canadian sealers have the right to take seal in the Behring sea outside the three-mile limit. He has also decided that the Canadian contention that the Behring sea should be open to the American fishermen for a distance of three miles from the shore is not tenable, and that the Canadian fishermen have the right to take fish in the Behring sea within three miles of the shore. The decision is considered a compromise between the two contentions, and it is understood that it is satisfactory to the Canadian fishermen and to the British government. The American fishermen are also said to be satisfied with the decision, as it will enable them to take fish in the Behring sea within three miles of the shore, which they have been prevented from doing for several years by the Canadian cruisers.

PRIESTS FLEE FROM MOB.

Abbé de Lamennais Defy Archbishop and Refuse to Accept Clergy.

Paris.—Disturbances have taken place in Brittany, the Canadian pilgrimage to Lourdes, the Abbé de Lamennais and the Archbishop of Rennes. The Abbé de Lamennais, who is a nephew of the famous Abbé de Lamennais, and a prominent Catholic, has been ordered by his ecclesiastical superiors to retire from the parish of Ploermel, in Brittany, and give place to a successor, Abbé Gerard, who is a strong ultramontane. The people of Ploermel, who are very fond of their pastor, have taken his side in the controversy, and when the new priest attempted to take possession of the church he was obliged to flee for his life, the people having barricaded the doors of the church against him. The Abbé de Lamennais has been ordered by his superiors to give up the cure of Ploermel, but he has refused to do so, and he and his parishioners are defying the Archbishop. The Archbishop has suspended the Abbé de Lamennais, and has placed the town under the interdict. The Abbé de Lamennais has appealed to the Pope against the action of his superiors, and he has been supported by his parishioners in his action. The Canadian pilgrimage to Lourdes was composed of about 1,200 persons, and it was accompanied by the Archbishop of Quebec, who is a cardinal, and by the Archbishop of Rennes, who is the ecclesiastical superior of the Abbé de Lamennais. The pilgrims were received by the Archbishop of Rennes, who is a strong ultramontane, and who is known to be in sympathy with the action of his subordinate, the Abbé de Lamennais. The Archbishop of Rennes refused to receive the Abbé de Lamennais, and he also refused to receive the Abbé de Lamennais' successor, Abbé Gerard, who was also present with the pilgrims. The Archbishop of Rennes then ordered the pilgrims to receive the new priest, Abbé Gerard, as their pastor, and he ordered the Abbé de Lamennais to give up the church to Abbé Gerard. The pilgrims refused to do this, and they left the church in charge of the Abbé de Lamennais, and they left Abbé Gerard outside the church. The Archbishop of Rennes then left the church, and he placed the town under the interdict. The Abbé de Lamennais and his parishioners are now defying the Archbishop, and they are supported in their action by the Catholics throughout Brittany.

JAIL BREAKERS ARE CAUGHT.

Three More Fight Officers at Hollenger, Mich., Until Exhausted.

Fort Scott, Kan., Dispatch, Feb. 11.—Sheriff Hoover, of Bourbon county, Kansas, and his posse, consisting of about 100 men, have succeeded in capturing the last of the prisoners who escaped from the county jail here last Friday night by sawing through the floor of their cell. The prisoners were all in for crimes of a more or less serious character, and they had been in jail awaiting trial. The sheriff and his men had been on the trail of the escaped prisoners ever since they left the jail, and they had had several fights with them before they succeeded in capturing them. The last three were captured at Hollenger, Mich., and they had held the sheriff and his men at bay for several hours before they surrendered. The sheriff and his men had to fire a volley into the house in which the last three were before they could induce them to surrender. The last three captured were Frank Wilson, Ed Hoffman and Ed Wilson

RUSSIA'S FALSE CZAR

IMPOSTOR SAID TO BE AT HEAD OF FIFTY THOUSAND MEN.

Movement Recalls Rebellion of 1773, Which is Said to Have Cost 100,000 Lives—Started in Region Which is Now Affected.

The intensed state of the people of Russia as well as the mystery of the Russian character is again manifested in the spring of 1906 just as it was gathered in a few days in the Volga region to follow a false czar. The tragic emperor, as the dispatches tell, made his appearance near Penza in the heart of vast region, extending southward from the Volga.

This movement recalls the great Pugachoff rebellion of 1773, which is said to have cost 100,000 lives. This rebellion also occurred in the region where the false czar started his insurrection in the first few days. Yemelyan Ivanovich Pugachoff was born in 1726 and died in 1775. The rebellion he led was known as the "Russian Jacquerie." He was a Cossack of the Don and fought against the Prussians in the Seven Years War and in the campaign against Turkey in 1768.

On his return from the latter war he was arrested for helping his countrymen to escape across the Don. Pending punishment he ran away to the Cossacks of the Terek. In the land of his refuge he heard the persistent rumors that Peter III was still alive. It happened that he bore a striking resemblance to the murdered czar, and it occurred to him to impersonate that sovereign. Whether Russian author invented of the bloody results that followed this impersonation is doubtful, but he insists statement that he was Peter III and issued a proclamation in the name of that sovereign in 1773, declaring that he would dethrone Catherine II and again occupy the throne.

The rebellion began in the same year. He attached to his cause the Kirghiz-Kaissak tribes, who are lawless and was over several Finish and Tatar tribes and thousands of the peasantry.

After the capture of many fortresses on the Ural and the Don, Orenburg among them, he marched his army against Moscow. At a crucial time he was sold by some of his companions for 100,000 rubles and was captured. After his trial he was executed in Moscow. His execution ended the rebellion, which had been one of the bloodiest of its kind in history.

Broad Hint.

"Mamma," said a 6-year-old Westpur girl, entering the sitting room one morning recently, "don't you want some candy?"

"The mother was writing a letter. "Why, yes, dear," she replied. "Give me a piece."

"I didn't dot any," came from the child, "as I didn't dot any nickel to do dose."

She got the nickel.—Kansas City Times.

ICE PREVENTS HEAT'S ESCAPE

Novel Device Used for Preservation of Fruit en Route.

The use of ice for heating purposes is one of the addition of the modern civilization. Hence it happens that a train carrying fruit from the south to the northern market encounters a cold spell which is so severe that the temperature goes below a certain point the perishable merchandise will be injured if it has been transportated that such a misfortune may be prevented by covering the fruit cars with a coat of snow thing easily accomplished by making a heavy snow fall allowing the water to freeze until the whole vehicle is enveloped in a thick layer and glittering blanket.

It may, indeed be appropriately called a blanket, because as it prevents the radiation of heat from the interior of the car. The heat is a good non-conductor. Let whatever be tained and the fruit, or possibly a cargo of vegetables, goes on its way unscathed even by zero weather.

Cars used for transporting apples and other fruit from California to the east are often provided nowadays with large cylinders, "hot stoves," as they might be called, at each end, which would be used in colder time during a cold spell in winter. When the temperature outside is at zero or below the fire, at thermometer degrees Fahrenheit, is relatively warm and keeps the fruit somewhat act as heaters.

Candid Criticism.

According to Sir Henry Hawkins (Baron Brampton), who remains the oldest of his Hereditaments, Mr. Justice Hargrave was once the subject of an amusing piece of criticism on the partial two men whom prejudice was overborne as they saw on the grounds of a mistake.

"Jimmy," said one, "that three books the hard Judge was reading on our counsellor, woman's lot."

"Yes, indeed, he was, replied the other, "and yet they say he knows what's what and what ain't. Judge his side to screw a man up to confession and was a small off for a good one. I'd rather not trifle with that man than any judge of mine, mouthed one as will give you seven stretch for not lettin' an angel."

Michael F. Dwyer in Sanitarium.

Michael F. Dwyer, long a notable figure in the racing world, has broken down mentally and physically and will be placed in a sanitarium at Amityville, L. I. He was and last billions Dwyer of his time. He made her $40,000; to win $5,000, the favorite he won on his own hoss. Now he goes to a retreat upon the advice of his brother and former partner, Phil Dwyer.

Friend's Medical Education Astonishing Young Frenchman.

A young Frenchman recently told the following about himself:

Upon his graduation from known university he was home to his own part of the village to from there and on the street met a young friend, man, one of the members of the legislature. Conversation ensued.

"Hello, Fred," said the legislator, "when did you get back?"

"I arrived there Wednesday."

"What, I am going to do now? I'm going to New York to study medicine."

"Huh! You going to be a doctor? How long did you study?"

"Why, I've been at it for three years and study."

"Three years! Huh! Didn't you graduate from the high school here?"

"Yes."

And didn't you go to Paris to Brownsard?"

"Sure thing."

And now you come to tell me you got to study four years medicine be a doctor?"

"Listen! Have, and after this there will be two years in a hospital."

Too Impressionable.

Dr. John B. Burgess, who has been accused of permitting a Baltimore physician's heart filled a Hottentot with the other day.

"Mr. Burgess will take this thing about the blue beard good naturedly. He likes fibbs of others. At a dinner party during his last visit to America I told him tell a pretty good story at his own expense.

"He was visiting, he said, a country family near Wimbledon, and one morning, by a mistake, he found in his room a bottle of whisky and the other of water and the corkscrew hard to find.

"As he pulled away a bottle was not easy to tell like that hostesses was ready.

"Mr. Burgess always claimed his brain so surfeited that the liquid was fingering to apply the word and water and the corkscrew.

"Well," said the artist, "what do you think of my picture?"

"Why, sir," the servant intended, "I can't say as it's such a very good likeness of the master."

Increase in Texas Population.

Commissioner Henry of Texas recalls that when he took his seat in Congress in 1890 that state had only thirteen representatives in Washington. The census of 1900 gave it three more and Mr. Henry predicts that the census of 1910 will add four more, making a total of twenty, which would make a population for the four-star state of about 1,200,000.—Chicago Chronicle.

Makes Strange Bedfellows.

The idea that the South is ready to fight socialism of the north which is engaging in socialism in consequence of being searching since 1865 for a new cause to dispute on Jackson's anniversary of his father, of Confederate or a white. The South is where the democratic party is and it is not in a democratic mood. Though now some of them are trying to free the republican party from socialism and its leader others. Not Looking for Reciprocity.

Was not Mr. Senator Lodge recently on intervention in so-called Cuban affairs? Was not Mr. Senator Lodge recently with the Italian Statesman Henry Cabot Lodge? Has Henry Cabot Lodge ever expressed his opinion? Has Henry Cabot Lodge ever expressed his opinion? That is the question we are asking for Senator Lodge's opinion on reciprocity with Cuba. Senator Lodge is not in favor of reciprocity with Cuba.—New York Tribune.

FEMALE WEAKNESS

DOWAGIAC, MICH., Oct. 27, 1905.

I suffered from a female weakness and backache, sometimes I could not walk a block without stopping to rest. I was discouraged, when my sister recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and it cured me. I recommend it to all suffering women. I can now do my housework and do my sewing, and I feel like a new woman. I cannot say too much in favor of your Vegetable Compound. I recommend it to all suffering women. Yours truly, Mrs. ALICE BRANDT, 1 Prospect St.

CHAPTER IX.

It was Saturday, and the relief guard was mustering in the parade ground. The crowd of prisoners round the door held their breath in silence.

"It's all pleasant!" says Dalbiac in a low growl. "Wonder what it means, man, and why is staring the guard after their know-nothing fine air. They can face out the prison, gentlemen being in it, and I'm not."

Stand from the door, Mister," says the sergeant, with an unusual civil accent.

The prisoners parted. The man who, an ordinary life and fellow-prisoner, had been hanged in the yard for murder, had turned to the door of the prison, rapidly unbolted a trap, floor of the lockup, and, at a signal from Vickers, three men ran up the ladder from the cellars, carrying a long deal box, which they thrust into a dark hole in the floor, and ran down again. The whole thing was done in a minute, and the prisoners, who had turned to their dinners, were just beginning to wonder what it was, when the door was thrown open, and the Commandant of the Prison, followed by the Chief Jailor, with his keys, and by a file of men with their muskets, came out into the yard.

The Commandant looked up the prisoners' side of the yard, and then turned to speak to the officer of the guard, who was standing at the door of the prison, as if he had forgotten something. A few men, who had been the strongest minded to remain in the yard, looked at Vickers. "Vickers, lad!" they said, but Vickers was busy.

The officer of the guard, who had been talking to the Commandant, turned to the prisoners, and he, as he reached the door, called to Vickers, who instantly ran up. The officer spoke to him, looked from the prisoners to the Commandant, who nodded, and then the officer of the guard, with a face from which all signs of curiosity had disappeared, turned to the door, and called out, "Number Eleven, fall out!"

Vickers, who had been standing with his back to the door, as if to bar it against the prisoners, who, if they had rushed in, could have done him no harm, turned round, and, with a face from which all signs of curiosity had disappeared, followed the Commandant and the Chief Jailor into the prison.

The prisoners looked at one another. Some of the men who had been in the yard when the man was hanged, and who had seen the black-coated gentleman read his prayer, and had heard the dull fall of the trap, and had seen the quivering of the rope, and had seen the jerking of the body, and had heard the sickening snap of the neck, and had seen the black-coated gentleman turn and walk with a firm step to his breakfast, and had seen the sickened men who had been present vomiting in the corners, and had seen the men who had been present turn to the wall and pray, and had seen the men who had been present go away to their dinners, and had seen the men who had been present sent for, and had seen the men who had been present go into the prison and come out white, looked at one another with a sickened look, and said, "Hanged!" Some of the men who had been in the yard when the man was hanged, and who had seen the black-coated gentleman read his prayer, and had heard the dull fall of the trap, and had seen the quivering of the rope, and had seen the jerking of the body, and had heard the sickening snap of the neck, and had seen the black-coated gentleman turn and walk with a firm step to his breakfast, looked at the men who had been present, and said, "Hanged!" GOVERNORS AT MARKET PRICES

Value of Turkish Officials Subject to Fluctuation.

A party of Chicagoans just returned from Palestine reports the curious news of a new species of stock market with some decidedly bizarre commodities quoted. One of the commodities offered was Turkish provincial governorships, the prices ranging from $1 to $12, according to station and circumstances. The party was making the horseback trip across the holy land and had an equal number of men who expected to return to Chicago or else to their Turkish seats of information. Arrived at Nazareth, the second stop, the governor proposed that at exchange the governorship confidently expected from Tripoli. The price of this fascinating official was $7. At the next stop, Damascus, the market rates of governors had risen to $12. At Nazareth the demand for governors was evidently less than the supply for the party was allowed to pass on $8 per head. The explanation is the officials were in such a hurry to get to Turkish law and lawlessness in the nature of bribes on arriving at Cairo, where the market and law was strong, the price had fallen to $10 per governor purchased. On board ship the party changed a milestone worth $6 to a message worth $7 among their companions for a typical provincial governorship at so much per.

George Bernard Shaw, Scion of an Old Irish Family.

George Bernard Shaw, whose play has been forced off the stage by the anti-justice of New York city, comes of an old and fairly prosperous Irish family. His paternal great-father, Bernard Shaw, was born descendant of Dugald Kilmartin, and he was a man of means. The present head of the family is Archer Sir Frederick Shaw, Bart., B. A. of Dublin, who is married and has three sons. The eldest, Sir Robert Shaw, is married and has three sons. The second, Sir Robert Shaw, was born in 1866 and married in 1896 Miss Charlotte Frances Payne Townshend, his mother, a very sweet and venerable lady, who is the author of a number of an amateur operatic musical in Dublin, in which she has gained artistic success in the chief roles.

TOM PALMER DEAD

The Veteran of Mount McSasbi Answer the Last Roll Call.

Capt. Tom Palmer died at his home near Mt. Mesasbia Sunday morning, of lung and heart trouble, after an illness of about four weeks. Tom as the popular old sailor was always known, was fortunate in the closing hours of his life, in the presence with him of his brother Henry, of North Dakota, whom he had not seen for many years, and who answer here on a visit about two weeks ago. Henry was at the bedside of his brother during his illness and death.

Capt. Thomas Palmer was a unique character, was liked by all who knew him. He was about 65 years of age, and when himself was young and active was a familiar character on the Great Lakes. He was 20 years old when he was 20 years old. Tom Palmer's life was a familiar character along the lakes, and was a prominent figure in the history of the Great Lakes. He was a familiar character in the lumbering region of the old school, and by early year he was married to Miss Charlotte Frances Payne Townshend. His mother, a very sweet and venerable lady, who is the author of a number of an amateur operatic musical in Dublin, in which she has gained artistic success in the chief roles.

Capt. Palmer came to Charlevoix about twenty years ago, and bought a little piece of ground in the Mt. Mesasbia addition. Upon it he built a snug little cottage. In this pleasant, cozy home he has lived since, upon his pension, and nearly a dollar left by relatives who were fond of visiting the old man, and listening to his tales of adventure. He came to town but occasionally to replenish his supplies and renew his reading matter. He took great pride in his little cottage home, which was always a model of cleanliness and order.

Palmer, in his prime was fine looking and retained his erect and dignified bearing up to the day of his last illness. To his younger days he was well informed in music, and was a musician of ability. The writer remembers when Tom Palmer was his favorite musician at local dancing parties.

Besides the brother Henry, deceased had two sisters, Mrs. M. J. Fitzsigh and Mrs. Miller, of Cohoes, who both arrived here Monday. Palmer had formerly been married, and had one son, a bright young man, who attained considerable distinction as a journal. He visited his father here several years ago. The young man was killed in a railroad accident some time ago.

The funeral was held at the home Tuesday afternoon Rev. Mr. Fortman officiating.

Where is Bane?

If the late E. R. Bane, with his perennial smile and perennial tongue, is still floating around in this terrestrial-celestial habitation, or whizzing ceaselessly in voices celestial, will someone point him out?

Where is Bane since the week was closed away? Just to remind us of the halcyon days when everything and everybody paid homage to the great personage, and even the table leaves hovered around his immaculate personality, we would like to see or hear from Bane.

Day was when Bane's coming brought out the multitude, and his going threw a shadow over the town. When Bane smiled, all nature basked in sunshine. The music of his voice stilled the elements.

Where is Bane?

Lest it be that, like a comet, he has disappeared into space, only to reappear with greater splendor? Or is he lost to the great stellar system which he once so richly adorned?

Where is Bane?

Masonic Installation.

The following is a list of officers installed at the last meeting of Charlevoix Lodge No. 252 F. & A. M.

W. M.—Albert Holmes.
S. W.—H. C. Cooper
J. W.—Wm. H. Collins.
Sec.—F. A. Butler.
Treas.—Chas. E. Fox.
S. D.—M. A. Levinson
J. D.—Wm. Conmeier.
Stewards—H. Fowler, Will Marshall
Chap.—Rev. C. L. Berry.
Marshal.—A. B. Clark.
Tiler—E. S. Webster.

For the first time in the history of the lodge, which is thirty-five years old, its officers have been installed by a past grand master. Rev. C. L. Terrell performed the impressive ceremony with an eloquence and skill rarely seen in this week of the month. Following the installation a dinner was served by the stewards, and the usual talks were by leading members. Past Grand Master Terrell, on the following night, installed the officers of Traverse City lodge.

At the next regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge, the annual report of officers and trustees will be submitted. General attendance desired.

Sickening Shivering Fits.

Ague and Malaria, can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, gentle medicine, of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to Quinine, having none of that drug's bad after effects. In 5 Mondays, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Electric Bitters, which saved his life. At F. G. A WINNING reference to Governor Warner's appeal to the farmers' club convention and to the State Grange for a fair trial of the primary election law on the statute books of our state has been made by several democratic newspapers, and their approval expression the view taken by a very large proportion of the voters of Michigan on this question, regardless of section or party. Full and timely notice should be given to the people of every more required to them to make the law effective, and such notice will be given. It is to be expected that a practical experiment with the primary law's provisions will develop wherein it is lacking as well as wherein it has merit. Its faults can then be remedied and its merits retained. This procedure is in accordance with Governor Warner's advice and desire and can hardly be objected to by any candidate, misunderstanding the value of the law itself.

Sunday School 11:45 a. m.

B. Y. P. U. 6:30 p. m.

A hearty welcome is extended to all to the church and pastor.

Prayer meeting at Surgeon School House at 3 p. m.

Congregational Church.

The Congregation services will occur next Sunday morning, the pastor will give a brief address on "Our Country." The entire service will occupy about the usual time given to the morning service. In the evening the pastor will preach the first of a series of three sermons on Paul 1:1-14.

The annual meeting of the church will occur next Tuesday evening. It is a happy custom of the church to make this gathering an event or great occasion. Supper will be served at five o'clock, when the church and all interested in it, will sit down as a common family. Not only does this cultivate a delightful social tone, but it gives special emphasis to the truth of the Psalmist—"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." After the supper and a social hour the annual reports of the various departments of the church will be given and the officers will be elected for the coming year. A cordial invitation is extended to all who intimately themselves with the work of the church whether they are members or not.

The Boys' Club will meet at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. A. E. Hodges next Wednesday evening from 7 to 9:00.

The note by Dr. Wilkinson, with vacin obligation by Clyde Coulter, was very much enjoyed Sunday morning.

"This railroad now own the government." That statement was made with reference to the government of the United States, and made by a Michigan citizen, to ex-United States Senator Hoar, in the course of a political harangue before the delegates to the recent State Grange meeting at Grand Haven. The man who made the declaration knew he was giving utterance to a sentiment, he felt to be made at a political circle. It is that sort of detestable willingness to commercial country and state for personal and partisan purposes that has set the man Hoar in a condition of mind which caused him to recently proclaim himself ashamed of his party and to give utterance to a crazy denunciation of the government of his country. That such a world-to-leader has few followers is a condition to be expected and to be thankful for.

It is stated in a Detroit paper that Fred Ferris, whose experience as a democratic candidate for governor in Michigan was the latest in that line, is preparing for another candidacy of the same sort, and has composed a position war cry, a demand for a square deal and down with the ring. It may be that Fred. Ferris has received encouragement to the treasurer he is said to have received for some democratic orators in Michigan last year in the request for a square deal, and for the charges of democratic treachery recently made on democratic platforms. Otherwise his reported war cry is silly and unworthy of a sincere man. Never since Michigan became a state has it been more free from taunts of any sort than at the present time. Does Prof. Ferris or any Michigan democrat know of a single state in the union that is more free from charges of treachery to state administration, provision and management of its state institutions, exactions from corporations, or in respect to any privileges or requirements that certain is good government? Doing up the processes of unsuspected virtue for the mere purpose of selecting fairer is an unworthy of a true grown man as is the denial of ordinary conversation and courtesy to the sincere work that others are performing and to the good results that others are securing.

Gravity in Demand.

Nothing is more in demand than a medicine which meets modern requirements in a mild and up-to-date manner, such as is being's New Life Pills. They are just what you need to gain strength and flesh troubles. 25c by Hixon, At F. G. Hixon & Co drug store, also guaranteed.

GOVERNORS AT MARKET PRICES

Value of Turkish Officials Subject to Fluctuation.

A party of Philadelphia has returned from Palestine reports the establishment of a new system of stock market with some decidedly bizarre features. Has quoted. One of the commodities offered was Turkish provincial governors and the prices ranged from $1 to $12, according to station and circumstance. The party was making the circuit of the Mediterranean and had had an social several months who expected to secure the prize or else to their Turkish passports at Jerusalem. Arrived at Nablus, the second stop, the governors prominent that all lacking the true gloss of a meritorious service from Turkey. The price of this misfortune official was $1. At the next stop Jaffa the prices ran just prices of governors had risen to $12. At Nazareth the demand for government was so valuable that the party had to pass on, for the party was offered to sell for $500 per head. The ten dollars to the officials were in each instance current in Turkey but in Jerusalem in the nature of bribes in writing a form where the purchaser, mostly, was struck, the price had risen to $18 per governor purchased. On board ship the party discussed the adventure whose pin, a is Chicago and found among their commodities Turkish provincial governors at no much pri.

TOM PALMER DEAD.

The Veteran of Mount McSandro Answer The Last Roll Call.

Capt. Tom Palmer died at his home near Mt. McSandro Sunday morning of lung and heart trouble, after an illness of about ten days. Tom, as the popular old sailor was always known, was bedridden to the closing hours of his life, in the presence with him of his brother Henry of North Dakota whom he had not seen for many years, and who arrived here on a visit about two weeks ago. Henry was at the bedside of his brother during his illness and death.

Capt. Thomas Palmer was a unique character, and held a place all his own among his fellows. He was a sailor of an early age, and when the civil war broke out he was a sailor in the navy, but soon was transferred to the navy, and reached the grade of master of gunboats on Lake Pontchartrain and other waters about New Orleans.

At the close of the war he returned to the lakes, and resumed his calling as a sailor. For many years and up to the hour of his death he held a license as first class pilot and master. Capt. Palmer came to Charlevoix about twenty years ago, and bought a little plot of ground in the Mt. McSandro addition. Upon it he built a snug little cottage. In this pleasant, cozy home he has lived since, upon his pension, and many a dollar left in rounders who were fond of visiting him and listening to his tales of adventure. He came to town last occasionally to replenish his supplies and renew his reading matter. He took great pride in his little cottage home, which was always a model of cleanliness and order.

Palmer, in his prime was five feet big and retained his stout and rugged build bearing up to the day of his final illness. In his younger days he was well informed in music, and was a musical of ability. The writer remembers when Tom Palmer was the favorite musician at local dancing parties.

Besides the brother Henry, deceased had two sisters. Mrs. M. A. Partridge and Mrs. Zeller, of Chicago, who both arrived here Monday. Palmer had formerly been married, and has one son, a bright young man, who graduated from local collegiate institutions. He visited his father here several years ago. The young man died in a railroad accident some time ago.

The funeral was held at the home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Putnam officiated.

Where is Bane?

If the late R. F. Bane, with his perennial smile and persuasive tongue, is still financing around in this terrestrial human habitation he is shining diligently in realms celestial, will someone hand him a line.

Where is Bane since the wreck was cleared away? Just to remind us of the halcyon days when everything and everybody paid homage to the great financier, and even the latest birds hovered around his immaculate personality we would like to see or hear from Bane.

They was where Bane's coming brought out the multitude, and his going threw a shadow over the sun. Many times called, all nature knelt in paroxysms. The music of his voice stilled the elements.

Where is Bane?

Can it be that, like a comet, he has disappeared into space, only to reappear with greater splendor. Oh is he lost to the great money system which he rave so richly clothed?

Where is Bane?

Masonic Installation.

The following is a full list of officers installed at the last meeting of Charlevoix Lodge No. 252 F. & A. M.

W. M.—Albert Holmes.
S. W.—H. C. Cooper.
J. W.—Wm. H. Collins.
Sec.—F. A. Rutler.
Treas.—Chas. E. See.
S. D.—M. A. Lewhoff.
J. D.—Will Dennison.
Stewards—H. Fowler, Will Marshall.
Chap.—Rev. C. L. Berry.
Marshal—A. H. Clark.
Tiler—J. S. Webster.

For the first time in the history of the lodge, which is thirty-five years old, its officers have been installed for a past grand master. Hon. E. E. Turrell performed the impressive ceremony with an eloquence and skill rarely seen in this neck of the woods. Following the installation a lunch was served by the stewards, and the usual toks given by leading members. Past Grand Master Turrell, on the following night, installed the officers of Traverse City lodge.

At the next regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge, the annual report of officers and trustees will be submitted. General attendance desired.

Sickening Shivering Fits.

Of Ague and Malaria, can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine, of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a tonic cumative influence on the disease, drives it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to Quinine, for the same of this drug's bad after effects. E. S. Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice till he took Electric Bitters, when saved his life. At E. P. Hines & Co. drug store, price 50c, guaranteed.

APPEALING REFERENCE TO GOVERNOR WARNER'S APPEAL

To the farmers' club convention and to the state Grange for a fair trial of the primary election law now on the statute books of our state has been made by several democratic newspapers, and their approval represents the view taken by a very large proportion of the voters of Michigan on this question. Fairness of election or purity. Full and timely notice should be given to the people of every county required to them to make the law effective, and such notice will be given. It is to be expected that a practical experiment with the primary law's provisions will develop wherein it is lacking as well as wherein it has merit. Its faults can then be remedied and its merits retained. This procedure is in accordance with Governor Warner's advice and desire and can hardly be objected to by any earnest minded voters regardless of his views on the value of the law itself.

In the evening the pastor will preach the first of a series of three sermons on Christ. Title, "Christ and Life."

The annual meeting of the church will occur next Tuesday evening. It is a happy custom of the church to make this gathering an event of great interest. Supper will be served at five o'clock, when the church and all interested in it, will sit down at a common family. Not only does this cultivate a delightful social life, but it gives special emphasis to the reality of the Brotherhood. After the supper and a social hour the various departments of the various departments of the church will be given and the officers will be elected for the coming year. A cordial invitation is extended to all who intimately identifies themselves with the work of the church whether they are members or not.

The Boys' Club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Bridgeman Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 p. m.

The solo by Dr. Wilkinson, with violin obligato by Clyde Coulter, was very much enjoyed Sunday morning.

"The railroads now own the government." This statement was made with reference to the growth of great corporations in the United States and seconded by a Michigan democrat, Senator Senator Burke. In the course of a speech before the delegates to the recent state Grange meeting at Grand Rapids. The man who made the declaration knew he was giving utterance to a shallowness, but he made it as parsimoniously as it just that sort of detestable willingness to mislead country and state for personal and partisan purposes that has been the sum total of the business of which which cannot help to restore precision himself ashamed of his party and to give utterance to a deep indignation of the government of his country. That such a would-be leader has few followers is a conclusion to be expected and to be thankful for.

It is stated in a Detroit paper that Prof. Ferris, whose experience as a democratic candidate for governor in Michigan was the latest in that line, is preparing for another candidacy of the same sort, and has composed a political war cry, a demand for a square deal and down with the ring. It may be that Prof. Ferris has received in the instructional line such hints received for some democratic readers in Michigan last year in his request for a square deal, and to the charges of democratic treachery recently made on democratic authority. Otherwise his reported war cry is silly and unworthy of a sincere man. Never since Michigan became a state has it been more free from bossism of any sort than at the present time. Thus Prof. Ferris or any Michigan democrat knew of at single state in the union that is more free from Michigan's part in matters of state administration, provision and management of its state institutions, exactions from corporations, or in respect to any privileges or rewards that pertain to good government? Failing as the generator of unmeaning rather is he unworthy of a high place, or as is the demand of ordinary opposition and credit to the sincere work that others are performing and to the good results that others are securing.

The Supreme Court last week handed down an opinion that is calculated to all counties throughout the state. The case where a divorce sued for its fees in attending a case of typhoid fever on the grounds that it was a "dangerous communicable disease." The court decreed on the grounds that typhoid fever was not such a disease. The decision was in favor of the defendant, it being shown that the Board of Health had pronounced Typhoid fever to be "dangerous communicable disease" and the court rules that the Board of Health is the proper authority on that subject and that the Board of Supervisors have no right to pass upon that question but it adds that the Board have the exclusive right to decide on bills presented by the officers in such cases as well as on the emoluments of the fees. The last that Typhoid has been treated for years as an ordinary disease which absolutely prohibits any charge for doctor's fees in cases of the typhoid fever charged for the most ordinary patients.

The law the committee, has passed by the [illegible] supervisors, is strongly attacked at the convention of the State Association of Supervisors at Lansing Feb. 6, 7 and 8. The committee appointed has arranged a program which promises some warm discussion. Hon. Cass Benton of Kalamazoo, who is fight the new law, will have that for his subject and he is expected to explode a few bombs. The supervisors are especially disgusted with sections 11 and 12 of the new law which confer on the auditor general power to review and change all assessments and fix the average rate at which the assessments shall be made. The supervisors propose to incorporate and form a committee will be appointed to go before the state board at the time the reviews are making to lower their rates of taxation and protect the other taxpayers of the state. The millionaire have accounts to urge the state board to lower their rates, while no one represents the other taxpayers. It is proposed to have the legislature give the auditors discretion and be empowered to go before ask the attorney general for advice and secure information desired from any state officials.

THE SUPERVISORS.

A Short But a Lively and Eventful Session.

As we went to press last Thursday morning, the board of supervisors, in special session were here, but had not reached the question for the consideration of which the meeting was called. Thursday afternoon the board struck a gait both fast and furious, but it was all one way.

The board in caucus had decided that the ways and means committee had given outside and far beyond the provisions of the October resolution, and at the assembling of the board at two o'clock, a resolution was introduced embodying the following points: Limit the committee had no authority to employ an attorney; that the October resolution provided for the employment of one expert accountant and no more; that the employment of a second man was contemplated in order that he should be disembursed; that the investigation shall go back but five years; that all matters and resolutions adopted at the October session relating to the expert investigation be rescinded; that a special committee be appointed to audit the books under the direction of a trust company or licensed accountant. The resolution was adopted unanimously. The chairman of the board, James Grant, of South Arm, supervisors Wagner, of Norwood and Kardzer, of Bay, were elected as such committee.

And so it is a few words in review of the matter. Mr C. E. Durell, who was selected as principal accountant assumed a peculiarly embarrassing position in the deal. From the start no objections were made to him. Had he been pushed into the transaction we believe Mr. Durrell would today have been the expert accountant. It should be stated, also in justice to Mr Durrell, that when he had fully ascertained the situation, he was willing to drop out. It should also be stated, in justice to Charlevoix township, that twenty business men of Charlevoix, irrespective of party, petitioned the board Thursday, against permitting Mr C. Durell participate in the proposed investigation.

The situation was very much aggravated by the action of Mister in submitting the register of deeds and judge of probate into court to show cause why they do not have their salaries over to him. There would have been just as much sense in serving the same process upon the school commissioner. Neither one of these officers have the remotest connection with the business of the county. The law gives the salaries of the school commissioner and judge of probate on a basis of population, and the register of deeds receives his compensation entirely from fees received for recording documents and writing abstracts. The action was taken by Mister merely as a bluff, and to create the impression, not always easily overcome, that conditions warranted legal proceedings at the outset. A legal process, in circuit court, whether justified or not, would have a tendency to set the people talking, and that was enough for Mister. Mister, thanks be to heaven, Mister is exhausted, to use a mild expression.

Another word to be the cause of all this compass. There never has been from the beginning, (except in incidental) a suggestion of any dishonesty, loss or shortage in county affairs. The annual settlements have been regular and careful. At the last settlement by the committee of the board with the treasurer, it was revealed that the county was in debt about $15,000, and this was shown to be in outstanding county orders, every one of which, to a dollar, were located.

Nevertheless, it is well that, from time to time, the county books be assisted by an expert. The village of Charlevoix did this years. No county officer asked for it. It was felt that they were raised by certain supervisors were inspired by two considerations—a confidence in the following already made by the board, and an honest desire to avoid the expense of an expert accountant.

But the county officers wanted the investigation to be in daylight, unprejudiced, and fair. They did not want, to speak plainly, Ira L. Mosher about the court house. It is a political mission.

It has been clearly shown within the past week that he never will be.

STILL ALIVE.

The Electric Railroad Project is not By Any Means Dead.

Matters pertaining to the Traverse City and Charlevoix Electric Railroad have been apparently slumbering for some weeks, but it was the slumber that refreshes and re invigorates. The enterprise is far from dead.

It is a fact that the money is ready to capitalize the road when certain conditions are complied with. These conditions are not by any means insurmountable, indeed, compliance with them is already considered certain.

Work is going on quietly all along the line, the nature of which is not yet "cut and dried" for the public but we are justified in saying that prospects never were brighter.

That such a road will be of inestimable value to the farmers of the lake shore goes without saying; and that the rapidly increasing travel between the leading resorts of Northern Michigan will make it a profitable investment is certain.

It has always been considered but a matter of time before a railroad would skirt the bay and lake shore from Traverse city north, and we think the time has arrived.

The SENTINEL hopes to be able to give its readers more definite information next week.

LOST WITH ALL ABOARD.

British Bark, Pass of Melfort, Is Wrecked on Vancouver Island.

The British bark Pass of Melfort, Captain Cowgill, from Accos for Puget Sound, drove ashore on the rocks of Vancouver Island, a quarter of a mile east of Kinghorne Point, and all on board were lost. The vessel was making for the entrance to Nootka when the southerly gale struck her with terrific force. Bodies of the lost seamen are coming ashore. The first body recovered was that of a woman dressed in silk stockings and slippers. Two others were seen floating in the surf, but they could not be recovered. A number of ship's lumber, all marked "Pass of Melfort," were found on the beach and not far away is a small bag in the address of Amphitrite Point, which marks the western extremity of Nootka Sound, the ship's barometer, broken boats and the figurehead of the vessel come ashore together with other wreckage. A box of paper which seems the part of the bulkhead of Captain Cowgill was found on the beach with the name "John Hosmer" on it. The Pass of Melfort was a British four-masted steel bark of 2,346 tons built in 1891 at Glasgow by Gilmour & Clark. She was last seen by the British ship Hendrick's Clark.

GERMAN PROPOSALS.

PENDING TARIFF NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

Indications That the Kaiser Will Not Be Able to Obtain Any Important Concessions in Favor of Her Exports to This Country.

Based (editorially) affecting the question of trade relations between the United States and Germany is related in the shape of a resume from the Department of Commerce and Labor embodying a report from Consul-General Gardener at Frankfort (date of the 17th ult.) in which the statement of an article in the "Frankfurter Zeitung" written by Prof. Julius Wolf of the University of Breslau. Prof. Wolf's showing of trade figures was extremely unfortunate to support the German contention for such a readjustment of tariff rates as would give to German products a freer entrance into the American market. Mr. Gardener has taken it upon himself to show the other side of the question. His article arrives mostly at the same end (the "inadvisability of retaliation" Mr. L. Wilbur Gordon is a American Commissioner of Trade Board (another) has then sought by Mr. Gardener and Mr. Wolf—who are a great overbearing and overbearing case against the threatened clamor for a wholesale raising of our tariff schedules in favor of Germany, indirectly but forcibly to German products. Germany is an infinite favorite according to tariff rates on the United States.

The old tariff of 1897 with the amendatory schedules is the course of time the tariff policy which obtains in view of the development of Germany's commercial relations with the chief Germany's agriculture. It appears that suffered in consequence of the treaties of the commercial treaties. The tariff gave way to the foreign agrarian. The first result was a reduction in the rates to German agriculture to the low rates of 1892.

"Thus not the complete arrangement resting on the most favored nation treatment of the existing treaties be considered? That appears to be the principle followed in the United States."

Prince Von Bülow in replying said:

"A continuation of the present conditions, although it is possible enough for the former reason that our agreements with the United States of America is founded expressly upon the most favored nation clause, the most commercial treaties, with Germany, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Servia, Roumania and Spain, which treaties are designed to end on the 31st of February, 1904. The German-American agreement will run to end.

"Of course we wish in our new agreements with the United States to subjugate the same points of view as in the other treaties, namely, the general commercial relationship and in the new commercial treaties already concluded. We are accordingly drawn over propaganda after a carefully examination of the German interests affected.

"Our propositions will, we think, be quite within the limits of reason and certainly we shall approach the American government with no demand that would injure the vital business of the American economic organization. We cannot do so that the movement portion on both sides sometimes let their fire a go too hot.

"Would you conduct such negotiations by correspondence?"

"The most expeditious means for conducting the work, said the prince, "would be that two men on both sides having special circumstances with customs and tariff matters should meet for an open and frank interchange of views and friendly explanations and direct acquaintance with the standpoint of the opposite party always has a wholesome and consolidating effect.

"We sincerely wish such an understanding and labor for it seriously in the consciousness that, though our wishes, interests and opinions do either side may differ, still it is quite possible to reconcile them with propriety when the general advantage of social relations are kept in view."

It is not easy to act upon what seems the German proposals—one possibly that involves what Prince von Bülow calls a reciprocity agreement which would be "the most vital feature of the American economic organization." Much will depend upon the outcome of the vital feature of the American economic organization. On that question American public opinion alone must rule. According to the American view any feature is vital which contrasts the possible consequence of American labor and industry as the result of the larger or expansion of competitive products from foreign countries. With that view as the controlling principle it will be interesting to discover how long it is going to be possible to fix a reciprocity by dicker that will satisfy all interests. In a general proposition we should say that to accomplish this will prove about as difficult as the feat of riding two horses going in opposite directions.

Bitter Not.

The lingering left impress a tariff of twenty-five cents on every bushel of potatoes imported from Canada. Five cents on every dozen of eggs, fifteen cents on every bushel of corn, six cents on every pound of butter and cheese, with equally prohibitive duties on other domestic articles. When these duties removed the people of New York and upon two more closely and knowing it, they will feel that they had been misinformed by producers. The Canadian potatoes will come in the market, which being at short notice, early supplies a delight to Europe as to North America.—Lowell Sun.

It is not surprising that the prices of some articles of food would be lowered proportionately by the reduction of tariff on farm products. But it would be well for the people of New York to remember that the reduction of tariff on farm products cuts both ways. If the tariff is lowered on farm products, it is also lowered on the manufactured articles of which they are the raw material. For the reduction of all these duties means more goods will be sold in America and more goods will be made in America. While it is unknown how this latter will affect the farmer, it is unknown that it will be a great gain to the farmer. It is known that it will be a great gain to the farmer. It is known that it will be a great gain to the farmer. It is known

AN EPISODE OF 1723.

When bars of gold upon his breast,
And jewels on his fingers glittered,
A courtly gallant came by this way
And left his heart in Lucy's care.

The lendsman's mantel sparkled and grim
With stories of crosses on his arms,
But who that looked into Lucy's face
"Let one go heed the way to stark?

Rich stuff a lady accepted instead,
A thousand pieces of rich brocades,
Her school-girl fancy turned from the page
To gloaming gowns more stately and Fitted

When last they met his raiment was Made taller in a manner new,
But now there had come to this:
"Let one go first, th' way is dark."

She gathered alone the knotted's fold,
To hide the lessons of her heart,
Her answered with an he said,
"To lay a memory in the earth."

The sword grew dim, year for away,
She seemed to hear a marching tale
And if his sight was not so weaker,
"Let me go first, the way is dark."

Though hills are dust for many a year,
Those pieces of a troubled time,
Let knight and lady rest side by
In sound romance and silver rhyme.

Among the chests of hound and death
Their bones and dust's nothing stark
For where upon, on sunfall stay
"Let me go first, the way is dark."

Tom, Mrs. Bedford, Mrs. Bedford asked Sam, the hired man, who had been patch third corner, brought they would be ready in half an hour.

"I do not know, Tom, but suspect Dorothy is not a child, for our nephew speaks of her as the little girl," replied Mrs. Bedford.

Tom drew to the stallion, and on his return, a beautiful young girl was seated in the chaise. Tom was a little taken down for expected Miss a experienced young lady, and looked thoughtfully at which she brushed from the harmonica curled in her forehead.

HIS SKETCH.

IT was a quiet place with farmers, and Tom did not go to the village for amusement, since home when he finished his chores in a square envelope, coached with the letter to be alone, she was ashamed to speak. Her Tom's spirit was so different from New York, would spend the evening with books and or pass that sparkling.

Tom drew to the stallion, and on his return, a beautiful young girl was seated in the chaise. Tom was a little taken down for expected Miss a experienced young lady, and looked thoughtfully at which she brushed from the harmonica curled in her forehead.

"Why, my dear, I thought you were a child," said Miss Dorothy, smiling her warmly.

Tom's pipe's never finally continued Dorothy, for he will persist in calling me his little girl, in spite of the fact that I make my debut next winter. I tell memoirs he will want to introduce me as one grown up.

She was out gathered, however when her aunts came to breakfast, and declared she knew she would enjoy every moment of her visit.

Her Mrs. Bedford's, at once made friends of Tom and Dora, but nothing she could do would win the favor of a lock of Sam, who, in Sabbath, when they became more aggressive each time they met, gave the results of encounters with them.

The morning after Dorothy's arrival, one morning on her way to the village. She had on a pink gown, and a large white hat, and looked so sweet, prettily clinging on spindle side, the one side of the seat was occupied, and and entering and on the other a form where a hat was working.

Sam was working and stopped with the scenery that she did not realize the proximity of a neighbor's look of green until, feeling something tugging at her skirt, she looked down and saw one large gray goose pulling at her ruffles, several picking at her shoes, while the rest were grouped about her and quacking so loudly that her blood fairly froze.

She gave one scream, and tried to jump on the railing that spanned the bridge, but her petticoats proved too strong. The screams attracted the farmer boy's attention, and he came to her rescue with a stout stick, saying: "They won't hurt you, they never hurt I get in the flock."

Her water was twenty to rescue, as soon as she was out of sight and hearing, a young man, who had been sketching in the valley close by, hoped not laughing, saying:

"Well, that is the richest thing I have seen in the country girl, and a stranger, too, I'll wager, for no one here has had a chance. I must ask Annie who she is."

He was doubly surprised to see her a few days afterward, seated on his aunt's porch in company with some stranger. He

"There he comes," exclaimed Mrs. Vane, seeing her hand to her nephew. She had been expecting him in the fall for Dotty to study art.

Bennie had been sufficiently interested in wondering if he could be Stella Brooke's brother, of whom she had heard so much but had never met.

Dorothy thought it no wonder that his sister admired Bennie Landon, for she looked so dainty and winsome, in a mad, white dress, with a sexy hat honeysuckle nestling in her hair.

The sketches were duly commented upon, but when the one in particular was reached, Bennie's cheeks grew crimson, and looked frightfully at Dorothy, she asked, "Where were you then?"

Not for away," he replied, and as she laughed, good naturedly, he did also.

"That was the beginning of days that seemed all too short during the fall, for like of a dogwood did not present itself to the Misses Linton, and the young people were free to roam about as they chose.

It was late now companionship, Gerald fully realized what these days meant to him.

He thought it would not be fair to extract any promise from her before his leaving, but he resolved to be herself, among others more worthy than he. At times he feared for such opportunities to come. Then, again from some little word or slip, perhaps conversation with her, he would see that she cared for him more than she knew, and he would take from courage.

In one respect he was correct, for Bessie had not analyzed her feelings for him, but when the day came for him to leave, and she thought of the future without him, her heart grew faint, and she realized that she cared for him more than as a friend.

People wondered why the Belle, Miss Linton, did not marry. It was thought, indeed, by some she had had scores of opportunities, but for some unknown reason refused such suitor.

Gerald was one who she had not heard from Gerald Holt except through his family and the press. He had won a great name, was looked upon as the best artist of the city, his pictures had met with the warmest enthusiasm, and been purchased by connoisseurs of both lands.

When it became known that he was to return to the home society and the was planned to prepare for his reception. Linton arrangements were made for a public exhibition of his works, and its opening was a marked success.

The artist knew, did not only his appearance meet with such warm welcome. Jessie was a member of people who had been his friends from childhood, and, at least proved on us.

Bessie, has gone sorry, as she wished to be alone when looking upon the picture she had been so shaken to see. Among the many that graced the walls she recognized not a few familiar scenes, and her heart beat rapidly to know that the days of long ago had not been forgotten.

The gem of the collection, however, was contained by a numbered the people, and when they had departed she took a seat on one of the benches near

It was called "A Wayside Study," and by the little sketch had grown in to magnificent proportions. She remembered, then, of reading that the artist had refused fabulous sums for it, preferring to retain it for his own.

She was so occupied with her own thoughts that she did not hear the approach of the lover, and the "Dorothy!"

Bessie looked up quickly, and saw Gerald standing before her, looking thinking her face grew rosy with blushes, but her eyes sparkled as she

"Mr. Bedford, I

"Why, certainly, Dorothy, and here is 50 cents to pay your way in."

Electric Magnets.

The familiar horseshoe magnet is made of highly tempered steel and constructed so that one end is a south pole, the other a south, or perhaps more correctly known as a negative and a positive. Thus magnetized it is always magnetic unless the power is drawn from it by exposure to intense heat. An electromagnet, however, is made from any scrap of soft iron, from a piece of ordinary telegraph wire to a gigantic iron shaft. When a current of electricity passes through

The latter saves the ball, first placing it in the hands of "John" a little sister or brother, who, in turn, takes care of the cardinal's hat, which at the same time he decorates to be of some particular "Hands off, or I'll throw the ball!" somewhere in the room.

But even then not all the inconvenience and uncertainties would be avoided. Even if a man understands at the time of his collaboration and had honest, big, a parson, a couple of gentlemen and a couple two or three great grandparents in a number of the voyages on the family estate, and were making them advantageous suitable to their respective ages, it would be a very unusual thing. When to prevent them from remembering their

LESSON FOR JANUARY 7.

The Shepherds find Jesus—Luke 2: 1-20.

Golden Text—For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord—Luke 2:11.

Usually the Christmas lesson is the school lesson for the year take in part of the Old Testament. This year however, we leave are, with the exception of three lessons, all the same, taken from the Gospels. We are to study the life and teachings of Jesus Christ throughout the year.

Again we have a delicate situation in such a way as to really come into some understanding of our Lord, for Jesus keep in mind His dual nature—His human nature and His divine nature. These were not dual in the sense of being entirely separated but were blended in a single one complete whole. On one side of His nature He was one with us, suffering as we suffer, having human friendships and pleasures, and being in every way able to understand and sympathize with us in all the vicissitudes of our lives.

Notes.

Verses 1-6—It was appropriate that Jesus, the heir to the throne of David, should be born in Bethlehem, the home of David. (1 Sam. 16:1). It was also appropriate that Bethlehem should take those of Jesus? THE SCIENCE OF LIVING.

Dr. George F. Butler Tells How to Use and How to Assimilate.

Dr. George F. He says: "Without the red and green, we die! The gastrovative is do both reds with the eupepsia, which is process of time, becomes a very uncertain guide, for the body will often induce a craline and relish for food which is old saying of our ancestors, but only the result of years of experience. Simply sufficient appetite, is the safe guide. Hence, the rule, to never keep in mind his dual nature—His human nature and His divine nature. BOY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Mouth and Eyes Covered with Crusts —Hands Pinned Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura

"When my little boy was six months old, he had eczema. The sores extended all over his body and over the whole face, so that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and so in despair we went to a third. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a dollar, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest and back, in short the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no peace by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed, we had to pin his hands down; otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must not quite well be scratched.

"We finally thought nothing could have been done to pay our mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might do him good. This we was to be under good medical care there. But, lo! and behold, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and within a few days we found we noticed a decided improvement. Just a quicky dab of Cuticura Ointment, and it began to disappear, and within a week, "reeks the cold was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and soft as never before. F. LAYING CONCRETE IN WINTER

STRENGTHENING OF DAM IS NOT STOPPED BY WEATHER

There Is Prospect of the Upper River Being Dredged Also a Channel Near Ellsworth.

From the Bellaire Independent.

The strengthening of the dam for the Hydraulic Power & Light Co's plant is progressing nicely, and the concrete now has been begun. The cement will be mixed with a sixty horse to prevent freezing.

A remark in this connection will be of interest to owners of cement works. It has become generally understood that the placing of sand on top of cement walks is not advisable for the reason that the sand retains the moisture, which is not the case, and in most work can be had in combined at the coldest season of the year by mixing sufficient salt in the water to prevent freezing before the cement has set.

Henry Hoffardt has secured the concrete mixing machine that belonged to Lee Howland of Charlevoix, and which was used at the court house here and in the laying of the concrete floor in the jail.

When the concrete now in finished the water will be raised somewhat around the dam, and water will again flow in what was the original river channel before the dam was built many years ago. This has been done off temporarily while the dam is being strengthened, the water flowing through the sluice. When the work on the wheel pit is completed, which will be about the time that permits of a temporary dam, and the rock gates closed.

There are three waterway gates being built in the dam, aggregating about 20 feet in width, and these can be used for log routes if required. These waterway gates open into the old channel spoken of, and when the water is raised behind the dam this portion of the river channel will have about the same amount of water flowing on it as before.

The dredging of the river channel from the bridge street bridge down to the lower street bridge will be completed this week, and then the dredging crew will go down below the latter bridge to do a little work at cleaning out the channel there.

The prospective dredging out of the river from Intermediate lake to the pond in town is a matter of considerable moment to Bellaire. Mr. Hoffardt is now figuring on this dredging, and if it is done the channel will be straightened and materially shortened—primarily to give a free flow of water from the lakes above down to the Hydraulic Power & Light Company. But this will also give an excellent channel right down to river from the upper lakes, for vessels.

People up Ellsworth way are interested in this and if it is found that they expect to figure on the proposition of dredging a good channel from that place down to Intermediate lake, making a vessel channel direct from lake north to Bellaire.

In this they believe that this thoroughfare and its beauties will attract visitors from Charlevoix and other towns further north, and that it will make a fine motor boat route for people taking to the water at Ellsworth and coming down to Bellaire—for a longer trip of two days. Or, vessels could go on down the lakes to Petoskey, returning the road day as far as Ellsworth by water, and there catching trains on the Pere Marquette. Bellaire would therefore be the gainer by a large number of summer visitors coming to the town who otherwise would not do so.

Announcement

In most of the towns and cities of the State, the sounding of funerals on Sunday (except in case of extreme necessity) is being abolished. It is admitted that the Sabbath, the day of rest to the majority, is the busiest day of the minister. The pastors of this city, therefore, express the hope that unless absolutely necessary, the people of Charlevoix and vicinity will not call upon them to officiate at funeral services on the Lord's Day, this ending undue pressure on their time and strength.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

"Industrial Charlevoix" and "Charlevoix the Beautiful Sound Well Together.

There is no question but that the first two propositions was signed this month, Charlevoix and the county contiguous thereto crossed the threshold of a new period in industrial life. Year, we write once before upon the train threshold, but were driven back to remain two years longer in the purgatory of uncertainty. But we are now standing upon solid ground, in the promised land, with an outlook all about us that causes the soul to sing.

There is no uncertainty to the faith that inspires us. A record in many localities of Michigan proves the value of low cost transportation both to investors, merchants and farmers. There is not now the point where a sugar factory has not brought stability to trade and prosperity to the farmers. There is no other enterprise to the county of Antrim that reaches out farther or in more directions, and none that is more universal in its effects upon cities and minor settlements.

The Standard Portland Cement Co., of Charlevoix are preparing an enterprise that stands high in the range of Antrim possibilities. There is no question but that it is one of the most promising enterprises and manufacturing propositions in Michigan. As a manufacturing project there are positively no distinguishing features attached to it. In the abundance and superiority of its raw material, in the certainty of steady and increased demand for its products, and in its superlatively superior location in the way of transportation facilities, the company's market stands alone and unrivaled. Work on the plant is now in progress to as great degree as winter weather will permit, but spring will start active work all along the line.

The Charlevoix Crackery plant—the best in Northern Michigan, promises much for the prosperity of Charlevoix. It adds value, to some degree, to every acre of growing land within business reach of the city. Indeed, we are firmly of the opinion that the sugar factory and the creamery have raised the value of farming lands in this section at least fifteen dollars per acre.

The big Ferry seed warehouse will continue to be a potent factor in the development and prosperity of the region.

And these thoughts give rise to an idea—that the interests of merchant and farmer are identical. Without a prosperous farmer the merchant can not prosper. And in this fact there is a lesson for the merchant. Holding out off the shell into which he has grown, by force of past conditions, and go half way to meet the farmer, and meet him with the up-to-date spirit of 1906—the spirit of enterprise and generosity.

Another Exhibition of Lorraine Prostitutes.

The parties who were, and are interested and who opposed the summer excursion of the Charlevoix crowd to the non-licensed to the authorized communities to do so, have had called a special meeting of the board of supervisors, for Wednesday of this week, thirty miles lake shore north to prevent the—Lake Jordan Enterprise.

The above is a fair sample of the sophistries of L. L. Lorraine in the discussion of the question. It is intended to deceive the people as to the real situation, but the people have had quite enough Lorraine exposure to the public.

The law provides that a special session of the board of supervisors may be called by resolution of the members of said board. A majority of the board would have signed the call for the recent special session, but it was unnecessary. The call was signed by supervisors, as follows:

Ava Smith, Charlevoix.
Fred Smith, Hayes.
Geo. W. Bailey, Evangeline.
W. A. Nelson, Bear Valley.
J. H. Gunnell, Melrose.
Richard Lewis, Wilson.

These supervisors represent every section of the county. Of the other supervisors signing the call three voted for the investigation at the October session.

And now we direct the attention of the great Lee Jordan reformer to the vote of the board on the question at the recent special session. On the resolution to rescind all action taken at the October session relating to the arrangement, and to issue a from the bands of the county and means committee and refer it to a new committee, the vote was unanimous. County officers, Mr. Lorraine admits call special sessions of the board of supervisors, and who, of late, are members who signed the call, are "interested" and how?

Much more Lorraine was signed under the mistaken and the lake plugged up.

CITY BUYS PROPERTY.

Site for Water Tower—Park Avenue Residence Lot With high Bluff.

The Board of Public Works last week closed a deal with Chas. Bennett, of Ludington, whereby the city acquires the ownership of the Park Avenue residence of Mr. Bennett, and the high bluff in the rear overlooking Lake Michigan. The property was recently bought by Mr. Noyes from L. L. Hand, of Chicago. Afterwards Rose went to Ludington last week and made the deal. The consideration is $5,000.

The board has been looking around for some time to secure property near the power house that would give them the advantage of elevation, as a location for the new water tower, and finally secured the lot one is town, without a doubt.

The bluff upon which the tower will stand will afford an elevation at the base as high as the level of entertertaine. From the foundation to the bottom of the water tank will be 100 feet. The tank will be 40 feet high, and 32 feet in diameter with a capacity of 100,000 gallons. The average pressure on the mains will be 75 pounds.

The properties are ideal one for the purpose for which it was bought. It not only affords the elevation desired but is one of the best residence locations on the avenue. The house is an old one but with good outlook, can be made a very comfortable residence. As it will probably be occupied by the superintendent, the city will have a good and certain tenant.

The board of public works has already begun to figure on the construction work.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Announcement of the coming concert in the high school.

The next number in the High School Lecture Course will be given by Lionel Wray Duval, who is one of the most popular monologists in the mature field of the middle west. Those who have heard Mr. Duval are very enthusiastic in their praise of his action, pressiveness and thought. Few opportunities are given to charge people to listen to such an old man and he should have a crowded house. Mr. Duval will use one of his entertaining operas, "Hopkins Finishes," "Lincoln, the Man of the People," "Franc American Centuries," "Hints Principles of Brotherhood."

County Normal.

Jessie McKay substituted for Miss Dorcas Monday morning. Miss Dorcas was detained in Traverse City in returning from her Christmas vacation.

Sabra Fillstein will have charge of the singing in the Training School in the afternoon for the next few weeks.

Miss Opal Emery and Miss Sophia Mansson of the class of '05, have entered the Normal class for the purpose of receiving some of the work. Miss Emery has been teaching in Hayes township and Miss Mansson has been teaching in Banks township. Both will return to their schools for the spring term.

Mary Dwyer has charge of the third and fourth grades of the Lincoln school for the present.

The members of this year's class form a rounded party in the graduates of the Normal School at the Normal room Thursday evening, Jan. 4. There were present as guests Superintendent Wm. McCauley, Mary Pickett, class of '04 and president at the alumni, Mabel Bradshaw, Maggie Mitchell and Pearl Dwyer, of the class of '03, and Rita Steggleman, Sophia Mansson, Opal Emery, and Grace Stephenson of the class of '05. Games were played and refreshments served to the tune which had been discovered for the occasion. The members of the Normal talked of their plans and experiences in connection with work, supplementary reading, in their work in the rural schools and the meeting was altogether a very pleasant and helpful one.

—The status or authority at the light and water plant remains practically as it was. The recent action of the council however, abolished the position of superintendent of Water Works. This action would necessarily occur under the new system next summer, and it was thought best to begin the new year under the new arrangement. A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The Change in Light and Water System Means Profit to the People

Although from time to time the public have been given an outline of the benefits to be derived from the contemplated changes in the public lighting and water systems there is yet some uncertainty in the public mind regarding the field and exact features of the proposition.

At the outset it is a consolidation and a timely one, for conditions are two years past the electric light plant has been at its least in supplying lights. During the sickness of that period, the engines have been overloaded, and the breakdowns of the local engine last summer was due to low fuel. It was therefore necessary, in order to meet the summer demand, to charge the plant at an expense of $2000 for a new boiler.

A separate of the emergency gave birth to the Bellaire water power proposition. The proposition is a good one, insuring capacity almost equal to requirements for adequate street power, owing to utilizing it operating as plants that would cost as much as the old and good power. Thus far there appears nothing unfavorable.

The proposed change in the water system. Electric power will not satisfactorily operate pumps, and it would cost more money than it would to keep the water mains in good operation. It is therefore proposed to replace the present system, a tested continuous pumping. This system, in its turn, is more a stand-pipe of elevated water tank. It will be seen that the system will give a steady pressure at all times and seasons, whereas it is now the case that the pressure is so variable that sprinkler and hose are useless.

The proposition is a business one. It will cost money, and in the long run it will be found to be a good investment. It means a good supply of water at all times, whereas it is now the case that we are liable to be without the water supply, and that when we have it, in the form of leaking a line out of the blood people would get much by water all winter.

The chief operator of the L. S. Dexter island cable has been ordered from Washington, and instead of a lineman from will be here from the 1st. Engineer Cable stations in the order here, and the change will be made in the near future. The position of superintendent of Water Works, this season would necessarily occur under the new system next summer, and it was thought best to begin the new year under the new arrangement. Although no official action has been taken, it is well understood that J. H. Martindale, now electrical superintendent, will be appointed general superintendent of both depts. a position for which he is amply qualified. Petoskey News.

Contracts are being made every day all over this section, embracing territory in three counties. The situation now warrants the sugar than 25000 acres or more of beets will come to the factory.

TO BEGIN SOON.

Active Work at the Sugar Factory to Begin in February.

One gratifying feature of the new order of things is the fact that we shall not have to wait for the beet slicing "campaign" to see things assume industrial activity at the sugar factory.

The company has set aside $50,000 to put the factory in shape to satisfy its ideas of what the factory should be. Of this amount $25,000 will be expended this year, which means that this amount must be expended before the beet crop is harvested. A large proportion of this will represent labor.

The remaining $25,000 will be reserved for next year, and will be expended for improvement in the way of increasing the capacity of the plant. Although so far as the operating feature of the plant is concerned, it was completed two years ago there was very much to be done in the haste to make sugar that fall, that could be dispended with through one campaign. This work will now be done, so that when the beets come in the factory will be complete in every detail.

A very considerable portion of work necessary to be done lies outside the building, and a goodly force of men will be put to work as soon as the snow leaves. The lake front must be supplied with a dock, at which to receive up-lake crops, and trackage erected upon which to carry the beets to the sheds.

There are a hundred things to be done, and it will require a large force of men to accomplish them. As we said above, a period of industrial activity will begin at the big plant in March, and will continue for a year. And then another period of overhauling and improvement will be the contracting for work in its stead.

General Manager Hulburd has the sugar transportation problem worked out, and a problem that vexed the old company. It was conceded that the ordinary methods of handling beets, in transportation by water, was too expensive. A plan was taken to build large lighters with deck trucks and drop bottom. This would involve the attaching of a steam tug, a fleet of lighters, and would be very expensive.

Mr. Hulburd's idea, which has been practically adopted, is the use of cribs resembling the ordinary lumber cribs, but holding ten bushels. These cribs will have capacity of each crib, and can easily floated by two men. The Pine River dredge now will be built with a revolving crane attached, for loading and unloading.

Upon Beaver Island, Antrim, by the way, Mr. Hulburd proposes to inaugurate a campaign for continually beets may be gathered by the usual methods of schooners. A large number of such crafts have already been engaged.

Out in the field conditions are promising more satisfactory results than last season. Good success in contracting, and in the city relations there is very little land during in this way that there are not from one to three farmers making contracts. The company will need all the acreage formerly contracted for. There is no little doubt now that 2000 acres will be needed, and the chances are that there is an acreage exceeding those figures.

Last fall Leon W. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller, of this city, who is a student at Ann Arbor, was an accident at the university gymnasium, by which his ankle was slightly injured. As shown developed later, on the ankle, that caused him to take several classes for treatment and for the trouble. Saturday Leon attended his parents that another stress had developed to the knee, but that although on crutches, he was practically hobbling up with his classes. An examination Sunday morning showed the knee to be in bad shape, and the young man will be in the hospital for a few days.

OLD SOLDIERS TALK OVER ARMY EXPERIENCES

The Blue and the Gray Review Incidents of the Late War, and in a Graphic and Interesting Manner Tell of Camp, March and Battle.

"That man of mine and identity of the Magic—he was just as modest as he was brave." Thus spoke one of the veteran women who attended the reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic in Philadelphia last week. She was speaking of her husband, who was a private in the Sixty-fourth Regiment, New York Volunteers, and who was one of the 1,000 men who received the Medal of Honor for valor in the battle of Gettysburg. The speaker was a little woman, with a face that showed the effects of long years of hard work, but her eyes were those of a girl, and her voice was that of a woman who had never had to do a day's work in her life. She was proud of her husband, and she was not ashamed to show it. Her husband was a private in the Sixty-fourth New York, and he was proud of his wife, and he was not ashamed to show it. He was a little man, with a face that showed the effects of long years of hard work, but his eyes were those of a man who had never had to do a day's work in his life. GREAT PROSPERITY

WONDERFUL ACTIVITY IN ALL LINES OF BUSINESS

Our Country Bounded in the Year 1895 With a Degree of Material Prosperity Beyond Anything Known Since Its History Began.

It is well within the bounds of moderation to assert that the season of the past two or three months will rank in material prosperity with the best business chapter in history. Properly speaking, the business revival has continued on its upward way since the opening of the year, and the volume of business transacted in this time, as well as the rapidity with which it has been done, has been in a degree at least, without precedent. Indeed, the business activity which began the year with such bounding pulsations has slackened but little in the succeeding months, and the figures with which we shall present our readers in the following pages will show that the volume of business done in the last three months of the year of 1895 has been in a degree at least, without precedent.

There are numerous indications, and many of them very significant, of the increased prosperity and the main cause of these things are equal to all the opportunities that lie in store for the fortunate people of this country. Foremost in these indications is the fact that the year of 1895 witnessed the beginning of a movement of foreign capital hither, which, if it continues for a few years longer, will place the United States in a position of financial independence of the world, and which will place the country in a position of absolute independence of foreign capital. Heretofore the business activity of this country has been in a large degree at the mercy of foreign capitalists, who, when for any reason they chose to withdraw their money from this country, left the business interests of the country in a helpless condition. The change which is now in progress promises to put an end to this condition of affairs, and when it is completed the business interests of this country will be in a position to laugh at the threats of withdrawal of foreign capital, which have been made in the past, because the capital will be here, and there will be no need for its withdrawal. The change which is now in progress is due to many causes, and, strange as it may seem, one of the most important of the causes is the generally prevailing belief that the Democratic party will be in power after March next, and that the tariff will be revised in the interest of the people and not in the interest of the trusts and monopolies. With such a belief prevailing, it is not to be wondered at that the capitalists of Europe are anxious to get their money in this country where they can be protected by the tariff, which has been framed in the interest of the people and not in the interest of the trusts and monopolies. It is also not to be wondered at that the capitalists of Europe are anxious to get their money in this country where they can be protected by a Democratic tariff which will be framed in the interest of the people and not in the interest of the trusts and monopolies. The tariff question is not the only one which has caused the change which is now in progress, but it is the principal one, and it is the one which promises the most good to the people of this country

WOMEN ARE INVITED.

GOVERNOR ASKS THEM TO COME TO ALASKA

Girls Who Go to Northern Territory Need Not Long Remain Single Unless They Wish. Twice Enough Men Made in Colorado.

One of the most crying needs in Alaska is women. Governor Brady, who is now on a tour of inspection of Uncle Sam's northernmost possession, has issued an appeal to the women of America to come to Alaska and do their part in populating the Territory. The Governor says:

"Alaska needs women. Not the women of young manhood who come from south to Alaska to make their fortunes, but women who are married or who desire to be married. Alaska needs women who will make homes for men who are married or who desire to be married. Alaska needs women who will be the mothers of the men who are married or who desire to be married. Almost Fourteen Thousand Persons Killed or Injured Therein in Four Years—Now Governor of State Forced to Take Absolute Rest.

More than one killed or maimed in Allegheny county. This is practically per week or one for each week killed or wounded in some of the great battles of history. Statistics for the last four years that have covered one period of time in the city and adjacent suburbs, that includes the coke ovens, shops and factories filled with steel workers, and the oil and gas well, pipeline, white lead and other works, show that 13,900 have been killed or injured in the industrial battle during the period of time covered, or 3,475 per year. Of this number 1,000 were killed and 12,900 were injured, or about 3,200 per year. The probability is that the number of killed and injured will exceed 4,000 this year.

ARREST IN STOCK FORGERY CASE

Brooklyn Newspaper Man Said to Have Had Bogus Railway Shares.

Samuel Humphreys, who says he is a newspaper writer living in Brooklyn, has been arrested in New York in connection with the forgeries of stock certificates of the Norfolk and Western railway. Humphreys is charged with going to the office of himself & Chief with a letter introducing himself as Mr. Collins, a wealthy banker of Philadelphia, and presenting two forged certificates of the Norfolk and Western, which he wished disposed of at the market value, between $14,000 and $15,000. The letter bought stocks from which the certificates were made, and had found. It was then set up by means of an alleged forged order and a proof of the certificates found that September in a Wall street office, but in which no insurance was attached at that time. Humphreys is believed to have had an accomplice in the office of the Norfolk and Western, who furnished him with office stationery. Charles Ade, a police Sergeant, a prominent resident of Elkton, Md., charged with giving liquor, is said to have received one of the bogus certificates. It is believed that he will prove a valuable witness.

Not Even the Threat That Massachusetts Will Go Democratic Is Likely to Induce Congress to Discriminate Against Western Farmers.

The cross influences and the political tug of the friends for free hides is making the party in state and nation all probabilities, but to the cause of protection as well. The Herald-Post 13th: Age, while holding that "the tariff as at present operated is working alert and injustice to all lines of people," can see no reason why one state has any particular market should be picked out for taxing while other states are not relieved on sole product. It does not embarrass this country that Australia threatens to tax all wool because Australia has a protective tariff against Australian wool. For The Term of His Natural Life

By MARCUS CLARKE

He had no sooner made this discovery than he was overcome with a feeling of intense sickness. The foul smelling mud, glittering with snow, crawling and writhing in the shadows, the sodden rags and the beards of battle, it only could see a sharpness equal to mock him in a fine game of hide-and-seek. But he should not stay. For this Alice was to blame. It should be his punishment that he should have to confess to her that he was a coward. He would go back to the Hobart Town Gaol, and, if he could, he would do something that would make her proud of him. He would be a man. He would be thought of in London. He would have his confession to her, and she would see that he was no coward. This fool believed him responsible for Frederick's death. Was it not possible? Could he not contrive that someone else should confess to the murder? Was it not possible for him to go back to Hobart Town? If anyone saw him, he was lost. He was a convicted felon, and he was in the wilds. At the thought of being recaptured he shivered, screamed and ground his teeth in the wet.

At the thought of being recaptured and being taken back to Hobart Town, he sat up, panting, and looked around him. The place was quite deserted. The sun was shining, the birds were singing, the leaves were dripping with the rain of the night before. He was in a little hollow, with a little brook at his feet, and a little waterfall at his back. The place was a nook in the mountains, and the sides were covered with a growth of young saplings, through which the sunlight glittered. He was safe for a time. He was safe from the world, safe from Alice, safe from the gaolers. He was safe from himself. He was safe from the pain in his side. He was safe from the cold. He was safe from the hunger that was beginning to make him feel sick and faint. He was safe from the fever that was creeping upon him. He was safe from the pursuit that he knew was hot upon his track. He was safe from the bloodhounds whose baying he could hear in the distance. He was safe from the men who were beating the woods for him. He was safe from the sneers of his fellow-convicts. He was safe from the lash. He was safe from the cruelty of his master. He was safe from the tyranny of the law. He was safe from the injustice of society. He was safe from himself. He was safe from Alice.

He had escaped from all these things by the act of self-murder. He had escaped from them by the act of self-murder. He had escaped from them by the act of self-murder. He had escaped from them

ON FIELD OF HONOR

DISPUTES ARE SETTLED IN ISLAND OF ST. PIERRE.

One Portion of the Earth That Still Adheres Rigidly to "The Code"—Prominent Member of Colony Was Duly in Little Affiliation.

There is one place in North America where combat is still universal. That is St. Pierre, the capital of the French possession of the island of Miquelon, which is the last remnant of France's vast empire in the Western hemisphere. It is a small island, measuring about four miles long by two miles wide, and has a population of 6,000 souls. Some years ago it was the rendezvous of the French fishing fleet, and was a place of great importance. Now it is a place of little importance, and the population is composed of a few French families and a motley crew of half-breeds, who are descendants of the French colonists and the Indians who once inhabited the island. The French colonists were the last of the Indians to be driven from the island, and the half-breeds are the descendants of the Indian women who were left behind when their husbands were driven from the island. MIKADO'S IRON INDUSTRIES TO BE TAKEN OVER.

Corporation Has $7,000,000 Capital and Will in Time Combine Railroads and Other Enterprises—Strings Inform Rich Officers.

Shinei Kaisha, a Japanese corporation formerly known as the Imperial Iron Works, is now over to Japan on Friday, the 13th, to take over the Kamaishi Iron Works, which is the largest iron and steel plant in Japan, and which is the only one which can be called a blast furnace. The company has a capital of $7,000,000 and is the Anglo-Japanese combination. After the Kamaishi Iron Works are taken over the company will take over the Wakamatsu Iron Works, the Kamaishi Iron Mines, the Kamaishi Iron Mines and other enterprises which it may be thought desirable for the furtherance of the purpose. The combination is the result of a long-drawn-out negotiation which began in the year 1906, when it was first thought that the prospects of the company were not bright.

WILL PAY KANSAS SHORTAGE

Former State Treasurer Grimes Offers to Make Good Deficit.

E. L. Grimes, who was State Treasurer under two Governors, Hoch and Stanley, has offered to make good the shortage in the state treasury, which is now estimated at $100,000 by the state auditor, if Governor Stubbs will not prosecute. Mr. Grimes is in charge of the Farmers' Exchange Bank of Kansas City, which is a state depository, and together the officers of the bank have $100,000 in cash available. Governor Stubbs has not yet given an answer to the offer, but it is understood that he will not prosecute if the money is paid back. The shortage is said to have been caused by the carelessness of the clerks in the office of the state treasurer, who failed to make the proper entries in the books when the money was paid out. The shortage was discovered when the new state treasurer, Mr. Sallee, took office.

UNCLE SAM IS ROBBED.

Postoffice at Lansing, Iowa, Entered and Safe Blown Open.

Burglars entered the postoffice at Lansing, Iowa, early the early morning of last week and blew the safe and stolen a quantity of stamps and a few dollars in money. The robbers left no clue. Sickening Shivering Fits of Ague and Malaria, can be relieved and cured with Hostetter's Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine, of unequal benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to Quinine, leaving none of the drug's bad after effects. E. S. Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Hostetter's Bitters, which saved his life. At F. E. GRANGE INFLUENCE.

What a New Hampshire Editor Thinks of It.

Nothing of an member with the grange and its work can fail to be impressed upon the mind of any person who reads from the annual meeting of the state organization, formerly the Massachusetts (N. H.) Grange. The effect must be manifest to thoughtful people that there is an annual meeting of the grange, which can be rightly pertinent to an annual meeting that intelligent men and women from over the state remote towns should meet and become acquainted with other men and women of equal character and intelligence from every section of the state. Thus the grange is bound to be more organic and more and more, and they are the more able to appreciate the value of the grange and to appreciate the value of the grange and to appreciate the value of the grange and Relieve feeling burning red at this indignity. Frightened, he would have had himself seriously also (one for women, his nerve would have been the flag. Frightened Let me pass, scamps!"

As Mrs. Vickers fee-mabled the hatch way, the boat with Frere and the soldiers came within oar-drainage and Lord, something in voice, fired his number over the ship. Mrs. Vickers then to let in. But Frere, hailing with oaths, ordered the soldiers on the hatches had been turned on long and determined not to relapse his son adventure without a struggle. Thoroughly on a somewhat he came straight up with the other fired on the crowd. It was just early dark and the figures on the deck were indistinguishable. The unfortunate lieutenant could not make out the conditions of affairs. Shouting from out of the dark some a voice hailed him:

"Hold water here, water!" it cried and was then seemingly choked in the utterly throat.

The voice was the property of Mr. Blake, Mrs. Vickers' lover, who had charmed Dora and had hung up a great pig of iron, stone and sea lead of the ballast of the ship, and poised on the rail. Their boat was alongside, and Dora and Lieut. Dyke. Dick's faithful waterman, Jem Mutton, stood by the Hindoo Chowkee Jungle in the boat, ready to shove off the moment Dick came with the boat-alongside. Under the very noses of the soldiers, Dick had hung the lead full and ready upon the rail, and was waiting for the signal. Mrs. Vickers was greatly surprised with a sudden and unexpected "Jump!"

"Jump!" repeated Dora, and stamped her foot. "What are you waiting for?"

The Mrs. Vickers jumped as the lieutenant, Frere, from the deck of the boat gave a shout of rage and fear. The soldiers had seized Dick, who was struggling with the prisoner. Dick had cut the lead free, and was about to throw it, when the soldiers had seized him. Dick was a powerful man, and had shaken off the soldiers, who had seized him, and was about to throw the lead, when Frere had sprung upon him, and had struck him a blow with his sword. The lieutenant had fallen, and the soldiers had seized Dick, who was struggling with the prisoner. Dick had cut the lead free, and was about to throw it

A Crisis for the S. S. S.

Now that Capt. Billy Finnegan has returned from the East, and Capt. Pete Campbell is home from Chicago, meetings of the Skillless Shipmasters' Society will be resumed at Wilson's provided arrangements that Capt. Wilson for fuel, lights and incidentals are liquidated or agreed at the last meeting in 1905. The amount is $2.18. Default was made in the payment of this obligation last fall on account of the failure of Capt. Pete Campbell to fig up association funds of which he was in possession.

Now it is understood Capt. Pete is short of ready money on account of his recent Chicago trip, and some trouble is anticipated at the first meeting. Capt. Wilson has been heard to say that he is not anxious about a continuation of the meetings of late years, owing to the unwillingness of the members to use the coupons which he supplied at his own expense.

Another matter that is causing some concern is the alleged bad feeling between the two war members of the organization Campbell and Wilson—growing out of a remark Pete made late last fall about "sunflower nelson." Capt. Billy construed it as a personal reference, and refuses to be reconciled. A committee will be appointed to get the men together, if they do not "get together" before that time.

Another matter that will come up for settlement at the first meeting is the status of the editor of this paper in the society. An effort was made at the last meeting to prevent the aforesaid editor (who is the founder of the society) from voting on the questions of legislation. At that time it was shown that the member who is a marine reporter when some of the war captains of the association were knocking for $40 per month subsidy notwithstanding this showing, the editor was ruled out of voting by the chair—Capt. Pete Campbell.

In view of all these unpleasant conditions, Capt. Pete threatens to remove the cinder and Scotch bond quarters to St. James, where, he asserts, differing inducements have been offered.

The latter phase of the situation has been referred to the industrial committee of the Board of Commerce.

FOR RAPID TRANSIT.

An Auto-Steel Car Line to be Placed on the Belvedere-Ionia Route Too Coming Season.

A local company has been formed, headed by Charles Clem. E. Turrell, of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank, to inaugurate a system of rapid transit from the Belvedere to the Ionia and railroad station the coming season.

They will, at a beginning, put on a very fine auto steel car, of 72 horse power, with a seating capacity of twenty people, and capable of making 30 miles per hour. It will have a polar street car step, with front platform for motorman. It will have an interior finish equal to a Pullman parlor car. It will put Charlevoix ahead of all other resort points in the matter of luxurious travel, and will be a drawing attraction.

It is the intention of the company to run a regular hot hour schedule between the Belvedere and Ionia, stopping at crossings. The fare will be 10 cents between terminals, and 5 cents from either terminal to down town points. The car will cost $4,000.

The car will be electric lighted and heated by steam when necessary. It will run from seven o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. and will strictly adhere to schedule. If patronage warrants they will put on a second car the second of May.

This practicality will give Charlevoix a great car service during the summer months, and will prove not only a great benefit to the resort city, but put to Charlevoix business interests.

Mr. Turrell leaves today for Chicago to buy the car. It will arrive here soon after the opening of transportation, and be running June first.

THE OFFICIAL AUDIT.

The Supervisors Committee Select an Expert Accountant.

The special committee of the board of supervisors has announced its selection of an expert accountant, and it seems pretty certain that they have hired with wisdom. The accountant is Jeffery A. Dresser, of Detroit, an account of State reputation.

Mr. Dresser has had a very wide experience in the examination of bank books, and municipal and county affairs. He has lately audited the Lapeer county books, and is now closing up the celebrated Shiawassee county investigation. He is expected to begin work here very soon.

Mr. Dresser is to get $10 per day. It requires no argument to show the wisdom of this action. Mr. Dresser will devote his entire time, during working hours, to the task. But the most important feature of it is, he approaches the work with a mind free from prejudice. When he has completed his work there will be no one.

MAYBE NOT SOLD.

The Big Steel Steamship Acquired by the N. M. Transportation Company.

Authentic information was received by the business men of Northern Michigan yesterday that the Northern Michigan Transportation Co. has bought the steamship Mackinaw, and will add her to its line the coming season.

As to whether Capt. McIntyre will remain in command or not we are unfirmed, and it is of some moment in the proper order of things that Capt. Wm. Thierman will be appointed to the command of the new steamer, inasmuch as the Charlevoix people hope so at least.

The Mackinaw is one of the finest of fresh water steamships. She is nearly five feet long, and cost, when built, approximately $300,000.

Probably by our next issue we may be able to inform our readers concerning the Manitou's probable schedule.

Death of Mrs. Mary Colby.

Mrs. Mary Colby, of this place, died last night in Detroit, at the home of her son, Dr. Clinton B. Weed.

The remains will arrive here accompanied by the three sons of deceased on Friday evening. The funeral will be from the house on Saturday.

Mrs. Colby was a pioneer of Charlevoix.

PLAIN FACTS.

Something for the Farmers to Consider Seriously, and at Once.

The impression seems to prevail among the people that the location of the sugar plant here insures its permanency, and that there is no need that as to completion date. If the farmers whole acreage have been held will recall the statements made they will remember that the promises to complete and operate the factory was contingent on getting a reasonable number of acres contracted, sufficient to prove the good will of the farmers and insure their cooperation sufficiently to make the plant successful to the future.

We have learned that some of the farmers are not taking hold of the matter as we had reason to expect that they would, and that some farmers are so short sighted as to refuse to raise over one acre of beets, or none at all. Now we believe that the managers of the new company were so earnest when they stated the amount of acres required to start the factory and that nothing will or does on the factory until the farmers have shown what they intend to do in a substantial way by signing contracts. Any farmer who will not take hold of this matter this year and do all he can (that is not a one acre contract with an old account behind it to be paid by the company) is not entitled to be considered either alive to his own interests or having any degree of public spirit. Such men deserve to be compelled to remain hard up all their days.

Many of the public spirited farmers who are coming up to the occasion will be like pioneers with their axes (that) then chent good neighbors we'll help them back to their efforts to accomplish something for their society and they will after repeated failures become disgusted and sell out and go to some more favored place.

The personnel of the new company with the necessary capital to back it, sufficient guarantee of the success of this plant providing the farmers will do their part.

Farmers will you do it?

One acre contracts will not do it, and there is no farmer but who can do more than that.

FISHERMEN ORGANIZE.

The Convention at Grand Haven Last Week Profitable Event.

Thirty delegates, representing the commercial fishermen in the territory bordering on Lake Michigan met Wednesday formed a permanent organization in their meeting. The new organization will be called the Lake Michigan Fishermen's Association and is a merging of all of the local fishermen's associations into one great body, which will serve for the mutual benefit of all of the Lake Michigan fishermen. The delegates from Charlevoix were G. C. Gerkes, John O'Neill and Tom Dalhouse.

The following officers were elected: President, Capt. G. C. Gerkes, Charlevoix; Secretary, Capt. Wm. Verlhuis, Grand Haven; Treasurer, Captain John Hansen, of Milwaukee. The next annual meeting of the association will be held at Milwaukee and it is from the functions of the new organization will have been thoroughly and satisfactorily tested.

It was a special body of sea faring men. Of course there were some slight differences of opinion as there will be at a session of strong minded men, but there was very little friction to mar the progress of the meeting.

State Game and Fish Warden Chapman of the Sun, looked in the meeting unexpectedly for a few moments, upon the invitation of the Fishermen. He was regarded by the state fish and game department. He was of the opinion that the organization of the Lake Michigan fishermen was a good thing and he hoped that the association and the department could work together for common good.

A banquet was served at the Ashley house at Coffee House in the evening, which was a very enjoyable event.

At the close of the business of the fishermen's convention, every one was satisfied that the meeting had an resultant accomplishment its purpose. The game wardens had learned that the fishermen were a good, honest set of men, who asked only a square deal and who desired to work hand in hand with the department that the fishery industry might be lifted to a higher plane and raised to a higher standard. The fishermen, in turn, were satisfied that the game and fish wardens were not only men but gentlemen, who desired to do unity work with reasonable and good judgment in that institution.

Dr. Spinney is well known in this county.

DISAPPOINTING.

Average Contracts for Sugar Beets Not Up to Expectations.

There is little use for disguising the fact that, up to date the acreage for sugar beets, for the West Michigan Sugar Company's factory, if not what the management had reason to expect. The shortage is not in the number of contracts made but in the alarm ingly small acreage represented.

The number of one-acre contracts is what is worrying the factory people, and the total thus far written is so small that it is causing Mr. Holbrook much concern. What seems so surprising is the fact that wherever meetings have been held, the farmers have expressed confidence in the proposition, and that there is no lack of faith in it, that it is the greatest enterprise that has ever yet presented itself to them.

In no other sugar factory section in Michigan is it necessary for the factory to secure contracts. Farmers flock to the factories, and they come early. In no sugar factory section in Michigan has the beet crop failed to be of greater profit to the farmer than any other crop. In every sugar factory section of Michigan the best crop has paid off farm mortgages where other crops have only sufficed to pay interest. This is not idle talk, it is a fact that has been proven to the satisfaction of every Northern Michigan farmer after an investigation by one of their fellows.

There is more at stake in this the first year of the factory, under stable and safe management. The factory is a farmers' enterprise. Its company is spending a very large sum of money and asks in return during the factory, but in receiving from the farmers the "cheap of deposit." Everybody has a part at the start and everybody must do all in their power to make it a success.

The farmers should awaken to the seriousness of the situation. An opportunity presents itself for the purpose of establishing an enterprise of vital interest and profit to them—an enterprise that will be as strong as the soil and as enduring. Those who pay mortgages, build farm houses barns and roads, that will stimulate dairy interests and in fact, influence everything that bears upon the agricultural prosperity of the section.

Let it not be said that the farmers of these Northern counties are backwards. Let it not be said of them that the farmers of Northern Michigan lack enterprise.

This is a great opportunity. Do not let it go by.

DR. SPINNEY

The Well Known Specialist Divorces and Marries Again.

Dr. A. B. Spinney, specialist, who was divorced from his wife last week was married in Kalamazoo on Sunday to Miss Tessa Seymour. The groom is 70 years of age and the bride is 45.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Mrs. Ione Warner of Jackson, president of the Michigan spiritualist society. The only attendants were Mr. Tom Seymour of Sterling, cousin of the bride, and Miss Florence Wilson, an intimate friend, from the same place.

Five years ago when the doctor was in Kalamazoo on one of his regular trips, he was struck ill in the Burdick house and his life was in danger. He had his medical attendant telegraph Miss Seymour to come to his assistance. The young woman responded at the time of coming to a friend to act as nurse, and replied to that effect.

"Come for my corpse then" was the reply to her telegram. That sealed the fate of the doctor's bachelorhood for ten days and sight of the hovered over the sick bed. Dr. Spinney recovered.

Miss Seymour afterward became his secretary, they fell in love and were married in the same form whereby in spiritualism is the form of marriage.

Miss Seymour is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Dr. Spinney has practiced medicine in Michigan for 5 years and is widely known throughout the state. He was one of the founders of the Homeopathic college at Jackson in 1874 and for two years occupied the chair of anatomy and physiology in that institution.

Dr. Spinney is well known in this county.

PROPOSED CHANGES IN THE ELECTION LAW.

Synopsis of the New Regulations Governing Elections.

Senate 2.

Party enrollment

Senate 32.

Time expires for filing petitions for the nomination of the art to a party referendum in each political district.

This petition may be signed by a number of enrolled members of the party equal to 2½ per cent of the vote cast in that district for the party's candidate for governor in 1906.

Senate 33.

Party referendum in all political districts where petitions have been filed.

Delegates, apportioned to each election district by party committee, to be elected by direct vote to attend county conventions to send delegates to state conventions.

On this day each party voter also votes by referendum for or against the method of making nominations for these offices.

If any person receives a plurality and 40 per cent of the total party vote cast for the nomination for either office, and

If a majority of such person's party votes in favor of this method of making nominations for these offices—

Then such person is the nominee of that party.

But if both of these conditions are not complied with, the nominations of that party's candidates for governor and lieutenant governor revert to the state convention, where minor candidates on the state ticket will be nominated as heretofore.

Senate 18.

All county conventions for the selection of delegates to state conventions must be held on or before this day.

All county conventions of any one party must be held on the same day, to be designated by the state central committee.

Senate 19.

All state conventions must be held on or before this day.

Senate 20.

Direct nominations to be held in all districts in which any party's referendum vote of June 12 favored such method.

Only members of each party who are entitled as sure in April can vote at those party elections.

In all districts in which the necessary petitions are not filed by May 12, or in which any party votes against direct nominations, on June 12, nominating conventions will be held by that party as heretofore.

Independent voters cannot participate in the nominations of any existing party without taking oath that they intend to support that party's ticket.

Supreme and circuit court judicial district are exempt from the operation of this act.

All political districts existing wholly within the boundaries of Wayne, Kent Muskegon and Ottawa counties are exempt from the operation of this act.

The representation of each county in the state convention of any party shall be apportioned by the state central committee according to the vote cast in that county for that party's candidate for governor in 1904.

Primary election ballots for the republican party shall be white, for the democratic party blue, and for the prohibition party red. Different colors must be designated for other parties by the election commissioners.

Names of candidates shall be printed in primary election ballots first in alphabetical order, then the positions of the names shall be changed as often as there are candidates for nomination, and so on, the direction of letting on this basis as possible.

Any person, who wishes to have his name printed on the party ballot as a candidate for a nomination under the direct voting system, must first file with the proper officer a petition signed by a number of the enrolled members of his party equal to 2 per cent of the votes cast in that district for that party for governor in 1904.

Scratching votes or "plugging" within 100 feet of a voting booth is prohibited, and primary day is declared an election day within the meaning of the law governing the liquor traffic on such occasions.

This act applies to all congressional, senatorial, representative, county and city districts. A primary is necessary to nominate.

BLOWN UP WITH BOMB

HOUSE IN WORCESTER, MASS., IS BADLY DAMAGED.

Explosion, Supposedly Caused by Evicted Owner, Tears Away Closes and Walls and Makes Women Insane.

Attempts to blow both chimneys and a small section of the house off 14 Paul Montgomery in Worcester, Mass., at an early hour the Fourth caused a terrible and here under the cellar of the house. Hissing of the fuse and some one in Twenty-two persons were asleep in the house. The left wing of Dennis J. Hurley, who was in the produce market in the afternoon. The fuse in the cellar went through the wall of a room, 12x20 feet, and the explosion tore the room to pieces in the room of William J. Hurley. The force of the explosion was felt in the section of the city. The left side of the big bay window was torn out, and the footpath and approach to the building from Paul street were torn up. The front door was torn from its hinges and the hallway was filled with the debris of the building. Mrs. Hurley had been evicted by the Montgomery proceedings. Mrs. Hurley, Mrs. Mary Hurley, who was asleep in the room adjoining, Mrs. Hurley had been in poor health and was not expected to live a month. A second bomb exploded before dawn and attracted a crowd to the left side of the house.

SAVED FROM CHINESE MOB.

American Doctor Writes of Battle He and Others Fought.

In the letter from Dr. Dwight H. Lyon, who arrived from Hankow, China, on the Empress of Japan, he says: "We had to hold a party at Anhsien and escaped in a most dangerous manner. Our house was surrounded by 1,000 men, who had a gun with them. The gate was broken in and we had to run for our lives. We had to cut our own way through the crowd. We had to run about 3 miles before we could get a boat. We had to run through the rain a mile, wrapped in blankets, and we had to hide in a boat for two days and two nights, and we were in danger when the mob of the house followed us and was killed. The wind was very high.

GIRL SAVES MANY LIVES

Flags Two Trains on Bridge Over Cowan Iron Huge Boulder.

Two passenger trains on the Northern Central railroad were saved from being wrecked by Miss Mabel, aged 19, daughter of a crack walker living at Mt. Wolf, Pa. The girl saw a huge boulder on the bridge. Into the tunnel she ran and flagged the first train, which was a local passenger. When reminded of the danger, the girl ran to the bridge and flagged the second train. The girl saw the boulder on the bridge. CRY FOR FREE HIDES

IT IS A MOVE IN THE INTEREST OF FREE TRADERS.

The Existing Tariff of Fifteen Per Cent Has Little or Nothing to Do With the Abnormally High Prices Either of Hides or Leather.

The American foot and shoe manufacturers are making a determined fight for the free admission of cowhides from the United States, because of the high price of leather.

Practically all other kinds of leather and of cowhides are on the free list at the present time.

They are coming in by the ton. A Chicago member of trade or trade association writes that "the cost of raw cowhides is made also there by the action of the packers in late June and August in cut outs, hence the high price." The "cut outs" referred to under recent date the packers made a "cut out" of cowhides, which was a big loss to the packers.

Industry is now quite busy in Chicago and Western cities. The tone is by no unfavorable, however, in the East, where the shoe manufacturers are hesitant to buy at the early prices, and are holding back for a lower price. The arrival of the goods manufactured some time ago and now coming into the market is not of the most satisfactory order.

Shoe manufacturers have been making a good deal of noise about the effect of the Dingley tariff on the price of leather, which is a matter of some where between 15 and 20 per cent ad valorem, and the duty on raw hides and cowhides is 15 per cent ad valorem.

"Then my face is a-new again," he whimpered and so (then he added) he laughed his ear to listen. "It's curious enough how God knows of it, but I am sure the warden is making him mind his lie."

At Port Arthur! Mad Wakefield from the weight of the chain, and a weak heart to his mother—his mother, mindful! "Mr. Frere, sir, I'm not quite well, and when we wanted how we aren't."

Indeed it grew dark. There were no lights in the cell, but in the distributed water stood a little distance, and, opened on the passage, the light of the lamp gave enough again to be sure of wounds. The lunch of the day had left him, and he seemed now and then to wake from a dream, to be roused by the jingling of the chain, to be reminded of his mother. Frere was a good man, and he was sorry for the boy. He had seen the lad's mother, and had promised to be kind to her son. Wakefield was a good-hearted lad, and had been led into crime by his mother. Frere was a married man, and had children of his own. He was a good man, and he was sorry for the boy.

"Wakefield!" he said, at last, when he was roused from a long sleep by the jingling of the chain, "Wakefield, I'm sorry to wake you, but I want you to take your supper."

"Mother!" said the boy, half-awake.

"Your mother is well," said Frere, who had seen the woman that morning, and had promised to be a father to her son. "She sends her love to you, and she bids you be a good boy."

"I'm a-dreaming of her," said the boy, half-rising from his bed. "I'm a-dreaming of her. Is she—is she—?"

"Your mother is well, I tell you," said Frere, impatiently. "She sends her love to you, and she bids you be a good boy."

"Mother!" said the boy, half-rising from his bed, and staring at the lamp in the passage. "Mother! I'm coming, mother! I'm coming! Mother, wait for me!"

"Wake up!" said Frere, shaking him by the shoulder. "Wake up! Here's your supper! Wake up!"

"Mother!" said the boy, sitting up and staring at the lamp. "Mother! Mother! Mother!"

"Wake up!" said Frere, shaking him by the shoulder and shaking the water in the pannikin, and forcing drink to be spared, but by the shoulder and shaking him.

"Mother!" said the boy, for the last time, and then he fell back, and lay still.

"Wake up!" said Frere, for the last time, shaking him by the shoulder and forcing drink to be spared, but he was dead.

"Dead!" said the surgeon, a day or two after, when the news had come out that young Wakefield was dead, and that his mother was dying. "Dead! Why, I saw the young rascal yesterday, and he was as well as I am now."

"Dead!" said the chaplain, who was a good man, and who had been with the boy's mother all that day, and had promised to be a father to her son. "Dead! Poor lad! Poor lad! Poor lad! Poor lad!"

"Dead!" said the governor, who was a married man, and who had a son at home. "Dead! Poor lad! Poor lad! Poor lad! Poor lad!"

—Along the same the government weather man at Grand Rapids, with the disturbing suggestion that what December and January have lacked, in all fashionable winter trimmings, will what February may lack, March, blustery, windy, uncertain March, is to supply in measure generous and altogether liberal. In the opinion of this weather man at Grand Rapids the March of 1906 is to be something after the order of March in 1896, sixteen years ago. January and February, so that year were cold in offensive contrast with the preceding year, with mean temperatures of thirty-three and thirty two, respectively. But March was exceptionally severe. Mr. Bell, that year, found March the coldest year from mean temperature of 24.1 where, according to all precedent, it should have been about thirty three.

The witnesses refused payment of transportation the grounds of the Gov. warrants.

—The editor of this paper understands every day of the expensive way which farmers in other sugar beet sections continue low beet crops. In no section is it necessary to send our agents among the farmers. Then come to the factory, and cause disturbing. Farmers generally learn the best crop they can raise. The papers published in sugar factory towns are all explainable over the prosperity that sugar beets bring to the farmers. Look out Northern Michigan, farmers seem to be backward. Wake up. It is not an experiment. It is a question whether or not the farmers will undertake an enterprise that means their profit. This month, and next right under the spotlight. Hitherto they means very much to you. Take hold of it.

—Clinton E. Brewster, company clerk in the Quartermaster Washington, is expected before the National Association of Guard and Post Warders at St. Paul recently took occasion to make public some of the pointers in the Tomb Warden department in Washington, showing that the department was positively a big political machine, and favored the most politic prosecution through a management instead of by the rule governing the Post Office. He declared that within the past six years in Washington alone, $3,000 was given by the ruling power that all of the stand deposits except three, in the national bank, applied to the Republican party. Democrats have law and work and report for corporations, and that for three months there were kept busy employed in Washington, politics, Democrats, Republicans, Populists, Prohibitionists, Socialists and Democrats, and by rumor, $200 is to submit tight-fitting Republican.

"Why, Maurice Frere, I'm ashamed of you! Why, I thought you had given a man. There's nothing like wash to get rid of aching shoulders—as they used to say."

"Well what's to be done now?"

"Throw the boat. Then you can set the fall to work and saw those bilboes to pieces. Why, man alive, do you feel and this sea the pale at the nerves. There should be a lady—a young lady."

"Don't talk to me as if I were a fool." says Frere desolately. "He, civil enough, you."

But the other hardly listening and smiling at the reddening cheeks of sighing made no reply. It is possible that he thought the fatigued lieutenant behaved like some lady, and found that they managed to use petticoats very well in the matter. The work might have to be done bareback, or by some lady, as it took two men to move the cutters, when sufficiently unstrained, and it encouraged you to use no over exertion. He carefully examined the chafed and bruised hand

ARE THEY SELFISH?

PEOPLE WHO OBJECT TO CHEAP LABOR COMPETITION.

Some Millions of American Citizens Hold that Their Rights and Interests Ought Not to Be Sacrificed for the Benefit of Aliens and Serfs. Savages.

In his testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee on the 19th, Lewis H. Weight, President of the Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Company, said:

"I must object to contractor labor, for I do not want to make my workmen, and that is what that competition in the production of the European serf means to me."

Responding to this sentiment Congressman Dalzell said: "Do you not think it a good thing for policemen walking the streets of the United States, instead of being the hireling authorities for the gain of fifty thousand workers, and their families, to compete in the production of our sugar beets in the Red River Valley?"

Twenty-five thousand people ought to be satisfied with a profit of twenty cents, including both owners and workmen.

Three hundred thousand people live on the production of sugar beets, and the manufacture of sugar therefrom.

A million farmers and their families ought to be satisfied with the profit of raising 100 acres more of sugar beets than they raised before.

MAY FIGHT IN CHINA.

IT IS EVIDENT THAT TROUBLE IS EXPECTED.

Vessels Ordered to Month Dock, Preparatory to Sailing on Mainland of Celestial Empire—Watchman Shuts up Fellow Lodgers in New York.

Advices received at Portland, Ore., from Hong Kong, China, say that the prospect of trouble in China is the most serious it has threatened to bring since the Allies. The Chinese troops are massing on the English sphere have been ordered to prepare for action. The Boxers have taken of their forces concentrated in Shansi province, and it is expected that the allies will be forced to land in self-defense. Preparations are being made for the sending of an additional contingent of troops from the Philippines, and the government is expected to call for volunteers before Congress adjourns. It is thought that this will be done Friday. Those who came on the Logan report that the Boxers from China, as there had been no news of the defenseless condition of the soldiers which Admiral Kempff left at the Philippines when he left for Manila.

CROSS CHANNEL IN BALLOON.

Successful Trip from England in Flight Made by Aeronauts.

The balloon of the Aerial Navigation Company, which yesterday made a cross channel journey from Sandgate, England, to Cape Grisnez, France, in 1 hour 15 minutes, carried Messrs. Spencer and Maxfield, the aeronauts, who made the trip. The balloon is the smallest ever used for a cross channel journey, being only 65 feet in diameter. It was filled with coal gas, and was provided with a car and a small sail. The aeronauts had a very rough passage, and were compelled to descend to within a few feet of the water. They had to throw overboard their ballast, their provisions, and even their clothing, in order to rise. They were wet, cold and hungry when they landed, but were in good condition. The balloon was not injured.

CRUSHED HEAD OF HIS HOST

Dead Body of Mortgagee's Victim Found in Pittsburgh.

Dazed and with his head crushed, so he had to use his hands to keep it from falling off, Frank Ambrosio, a young man, staggered into a police station in Pittsburgh, Pa., and fell into a faint. Ambrosio said he had been robbed of his money and valuables by a man who had lured him into a house on the Allegheny river, where he was set upon and robbed. The man, he said, had left him for dead, and he had crawled out of the house and walked to the station. The man he had met was a stranger to him

Petoskey News. Those who have not watched the progress of the work on the dock would hardly recognize the situation now. All but two of the tall cribs have been pulled down till only four rows are left to be built up again and planked. The expectation of the dock is greatly enlarged in consequence of its being built so much more than formerly.

About 8 o'clock last Friday evening Elias's warehouse at Bellaire took fire from unknown cause, and in an unmanageably short space of time the building and contents were completely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $3,000, upon which there is only $1,000 worth of insurance. Mr. Fox has the largest hardware store in Bellaire, and the warehouse had been used for the storage of summer goods and agricultural implements.

Petoskey. A few weeks since Jamin Silversteen, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Silversteen, and Mr. Cutler, a fellow senior on Mr. Cuddingham's force the past season formed a partnership and have rented a small hell near Lake Jordan, for the purpose of manufacturing lumber. They have purchased considerable timber in the vicinity of their mill, cutting a portion of one of the doses on South Arbo, and will haul their lumber there for dry naint.

Elk Rapids Progress. The list of a series of sociables held in this village for the purpose of interesting the farmers in the growing of sugar beets for the Charlevoix sugar factory was held at opera house Monday evening. About three farmers were in attendance and most of them will contract to acreage. Mr. Hubbard, the manager, tells us the prospects look very favorable for securing the desired contracts. This would diversify the farming of this section and in most sections of the state where factories are located the farmers find it a paying proposition.

Petoskey Record. A contingent of ladies from the reformed church of Harbor Springs, on Monday, and requested the privilege of holding prayer meetings, and also exhortations in connection with the revival services. A movement of this kind always brings out much favor, who such an innovation, and many more were heard on the streets that the saloons are not the only places in need of such work and that many of the business places, private homes, houses of ill fame, public and private schools, could be benefited by the same manner. There is one thing certain, the churches are making a grande rise in stacking up Delaney as it has never taken up before, and the talk is evidence that people are waking to the fact that they have been quiet too long and allowed matters to go without repair that might just as well have been stopped long ago.

Yours Truly.

ARTHUR BEATTIE.

Traverse City Eagle. Charles E Bondy of Chicago, was in the city to day and informed The Daily Eagle that he was on his way to Newberry on important business. Mr Bondy has leased the Newberry depot hotel for a period of 10 years and will open the house June 10. He will refurnish it and make a number of improvements and give the place his personal supervision. The furniture, especially designed for hotel purposes has been purchased in Grand Rapids and is ready for shipment. Mr. Bondy has been in the hotel business a number of years and has had charge of Seattle, the St. Grand Rapids, Detroit and Saginaw, thus making a large circle of friends. He feels that in offering the "Sport Heart" hotel he is patronizing the tourists and predicts a good business the coming summer. Today he remarked that he wished the business was opening day so he is anxious to begin business.

BEATTIE TALKS.

The Marion Man Gives the Farmers Some Sensible Advice.

To The Farmers:

I desire to make a last appeal to the farmers in the matter of sugar beet raising. I am in a position to know that we will certainly lose our sugar factory if greater acreage of beets is not secured than is now in sight.

Some may think that I am connected with the new sugar company, but I assure you such is not the case. I am only working in the interests of the farmers.

I am convinced, after my recent interviews with the farmers, contrary to the St. Louis and Gladwin factories, that you will have only words of thanks for me if we succeed in keeping our factory.

Now, brother farmers. Let us report our proposition in a business like way. We have the best proposition and a company ready to pay cash for what we put on us. Now let us build the sugar factory, by giving the company acreage enough. Don't say cannot, but say you will double your acreage, and induce your neighbor to do the same. I have tended mine, and will grow twenty-five acres of beets on my own farm this year and will plow upon clover land to do it, disturbing my best potato crop. Unless I give beets my attention first, last, and all the time.

Some of us may want to sell our best farm operations in the future. Take into account the advantage we will enjoy in the sugar factory as an agricultural industry. During my recent trip of investigation, I was asked by a good many people what land could be bought for here. When I told them that good land could be bought for from $40 to $60 per acre they were surprised.

If we succeed in retaining the sugar factory beet will raise the value of our farms and lets us to anticipate we may choose, in future years. More than this, it will give us a fixed price for one more paying crop.

When I was at St Louis I asked Mr McNaus of seed me a list of some of the best growers, the acreage raised, and amount received. Now, bring to the list. The letters are near St. Louis or coming out in it. As will be seen this statement represents to be official of the Gladwin Sugar Co.

SISTER IS A HEROINE.

FOUR YEAR-OLD BABY TRIES TO SAVE BROTHER.

Infant Playing with Matches Receives Burns that Probably Will Cause Its Death—Brother Is Whole of Danger in Mussinger.

Despite the heroism of her 4-year-old sister, Jennie Mussinger lost possibly her life in a fire which broke out in their home in Mussinger, Jackson county, early in the morning. The little girl is so badly burned that her recovery is not believed by her physicians. Jennie is now 4 years old. Her little brother, Ernest, is 2 years old. The children were alone in the house when the fire started. They had gone to their father's bed and had fallen asleep. The mother and their father were doing some washing downstairs when they heard the children screaming and ran into the kitchen where they found the little girl in flames. The little boy was standing in a corner of the room, crying with fright and not yet aware that he was burned. The mother took the little girl out of the house and ran for help. Meanwhile the little boy had been burned so badly that he died from shock and exposure before the mother returned. Jennie's clothing was burned from her body and she was badly burned about the face and hands. It is said that she had been playing with matches when the fire started.
